

It is stated that Attorney General Garland has put in the four years of his official life in Washington without ever putting on a dress suit, or attending any of the dinners or receptions given by the President, members of the Cabinet, or the diplomatic corps.

In Ellicott City six aspirants for postmaster have appeared. Among them is the pastor of the colored Baptist Church, who bases his claims on the ground that the colored voters form a majority of the Republican vote of the district, and must be recognized in the distribution of the patronage.—Advocate.

The County Supervisors of Berks county, Pa., have a list of over 200 persons against whom they are going to institute suit for the recovery of money wagered on the Presidential election. A law is in force in Pennsylvania providing that where the authorities have knowledge of such wagers they shall bring suit against the winner and it shall be applied to the support of the poor of such county.

CARDINAL GIBBONS' PROCLAMATION.—Cardinal Gibbons, the highest prelate of the Church of Rome in the United States, has issued a circular to the clergy requesting them to recite the prayers for the authorities on Thanksgiving day. This is the first document of the kind that has ever been issued from the head of the Catholic Church in this country, and it no doubt received the indorsement of the Supreme Pontiff, Leo XIII.

The custom of giving thanks one day of every year is a most praiseworthy one, and it is cheering to know that both Protestants and Catholics look upon it as a festival that should be widely and sincerely observed.—Harrisburg Patriot.

What has become of the business boom predicted by the Republicans a few months ago, in the event of Harrison's election? Up to this time it has failed to put in an appearance. On the contrary, almost from the very hour that the result of the great ballot contest was announced the markets have been going down, down, down. What has already fallen from between $1.10 and $1.15 to below 90 cents per bushel, while stocks have depreciated so materially as to make many holders shake in their boots. If we mistake not the farmers will soon be made to realize still more sadly and severely the terrible mistake they have made in not more fully advocating and supporting the Democratic doctrine of tariff-reform.

A correspondent of the Baltimore American from Onancock, Va., states that Captain John Spence, the oldest inhabitant of Accomac county, and probably the oldest in the United States, died on the 17th, instant, at his home on Sykes' Island, in the northwestern part of Accomac county. According to his own statement, Captain Spence was born in 1776, and therefore, 112 years old when he died. His first vote for President was cast for Thomas Jefferson in 1800, and he had voted in every subsequent Presidential election with one exception, making twenty-one in all. He was an inveterate seaman, and, though he had suffered many hardships and accidents on the sea, he had never needed the service of a physician till his last illness, which resulted purely from old age. There is no authentic record of Captain Spence's exact age, but old persons who have known him from their infancy say he must have been considerably more than a hundred years old. His mental faculties remained unimpaired to the last, and his memory was remarkably accurate and retentive, especially in regard to matters that occurred about the beginning of the present century.

A GLANCE BACKWARD.—Since the organization of the Government numerous parties have arisen, most of which stood for some definite idea or principle of government. One party alone has survived the shock of battle from the beginning, that is the Jeffersonian Democratic party, founded on the principle of the largest personal liberty to the individual. At first an opposition party, and then gaining power, it has seen all its adversaries perish but the last. With its new lease of power the Republican party, though composed of many warring and discordant elements, is not now likely soon to disintegrate, and the battle that should have been won in 1888 by the Democratic party will have to be fought over in 1892 and possibly in 1896. And yet, in politics as in war, it is the unexpected that happens. When in 1872 the Democratic party was so hopelessly defeated that it looked as if its scattered and disheartened forces could never be brought into the field again, under the splendid leadership of Samuel J. Tilden four years later it carried the entire country, though in the end it was cheated of victory. To-day it is in no such sorry plight as it was after the defeat of Greeley in 1872. There is certainly nothing in the present situation to cause any earnest Democrat to despair of eventual economical government.—Chicago Herald.

CLEVELAND AND THE SOUTH.—The following extract from the Wilmington (N. C.) Messenger voices our sentiments: If Mr. Cleveland in the hour of his defeat suffers the pangs of a disappointed ambition, he may well console himself in that he has the affection, admiration, and gratitude of the people of the South.

The armies of the country, through their conquests, and Congress by its reconstruction acts, may claim to have restored the Union; but President Cleveland reunited the country. The Union existed only in name until he came to the Executive seat of the Government. There was practically not a coequality of the States until, by his action, he obliterated the distinction between the North and South as regarded the equal participation of the people of all sections in the public affairs of the country.

He put down sectionalism by recognizing no section in the administration of his high office. He was brave enough, big enough, grand and patriotic enough to take the South by the hand, and invite her to share the responsibilities as well as bear the burdens of the general Government. He gave to Southern men the recognition that the reaffirmation of their loyalty and allegiance entitled them to, and the Southern people cannot and will not forget him. They will never cease to honor him.

The name of Grover Cleveland will stand out in the pages of history as that of one of the most conspicuous of American statesmen. He will be handed down as a man of duty without fear. He will be remembered as an honest man who went his way as he saw it without regard to consequences—as a man who preferred to be what he deemed right than to remain President; a lion hearted man of courage, whom no power or allurement could swerve from his own path of rectitude. We honor him more now in defeat than in the hour of his greatest victory. To us he grows instead of diminishes in greatness as he approaches the end of his public career. He will be to us the first citizen of the country when he shall again assume the private station. Let no man at the South rail at Grover Cleveland. No matter how or why we lost the election, no censure follows him. With Southern men he must remain the grand, heroic friend of the South, the admiration of the Southern people.

DIED.—At the residence of her parents, in the 8th district, Nov. 28th, 1888, little L. L. aged 4 years and 9 months, beloved daughter of James T. and Charlotte Cox. In Baltimore city, on Sunday morning November 28, WESLEY H., only son of George and Lydia Jane Cotton. In the 8th district, on Nov. 26th, 1888, FURMAN BOHANAN, aged 2 years, 3 months and 4 days, only child of Chester and L. B. Pursel. God needed a beautiful bud to adorn His home, so He chose our fair little Furman.
