EGGS ADVANCE SECOND TIME

Butter and Meats Are Also Stronger But Consumer Is Escaping as Yet

POULTRY IS CHEAPEST FOOD IN ITS CLASS NOW

Wide Range in Hop Quotations in Other States Indicates That Considerable Damage Has Been Done in Some Yards

Eggs, butter and meat are becoming more expensive. So far as the consumer is concerned the price of eggs, it is shown, is directly out of his or her pocket as the advanced cost has been put on the purchaser. The retail price for the strictly fresh article is now 45 cents a dozen. So far as butter and meat are concerned the grocer and the butcher, for the present, theoretically at least, are standing it. That is, they are taking a smaller profit.

Butter went up a cent yesterday and meat went up a half cent. This means an increase in the retail price within a brief time. There is no prospect in sight for declines in any of these articles so far as the expert can see. Eggs and butter are more likely to continue to advance through the winter months and if the scarcity of beef reported is a fact, that article cannot decline, it is pointed out. It is the opinion of the Portland dealers that the hog market may break a little and mutton has not reached the high figures of the other two animals.

Chickens Are Cheaper

Chickens continue to be cheap enough, at least so far as the prices paid producers are concerned, and the time is coming when the ducks and geese will be brought in for sale. Along with this might be mentioned the fact that sweet potatoes are getting cheaper and also it might be announced, in anticipation of the cold weather and the bird supply that cranberries have made their appearance.

Range in Hop Prices

Business continues to be slow with reference to hay and potatoes and no market has fixed itself for hops. The range in hop quotations, in Oregon and California running from fourteen to nineteen cents a pound, is greater than has been customary. It means, it is pointed out, that there are some poor hops and that those who have them would like to market. It means also that the good hops will bring a good figure, so far as can be anticipated at this time and that the holders of that kind, unless pressed otherwise, need not hurry.

General market quotations are as follows:
