CORNHUSKERS DISAPPOINTED OVER FOOTBALL SEASON

The Nebraska Cornhuskers are proceeding on that excellent old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try and try again." The last two football campaigns, while not discouraging, were disappointing to them and Nebraska critics believe that with a radical change in the methods of training they will be able next season to place a team in the field that will be a winner from every angle of the game.

According to a dispatch from Lincoln there is some doubt as to whether Coach Henry F. "Indian" Schulte, former mentor of the Missouri Tigers and for ten years head coach of the Cornhuskers, will be retained to guide the destinies of the Nebraska eleven next fall. It will be remembered that Coach Schulte quit coaching his alma mater, the Tigers, was the idol of every Missouri fan and his teams, especially in football and track, early had an off season. His supporters in Nebraska declare he has been handicapped by a lack of assistants. They hold he is an excellent man to handle the line but is weak in the finer details of the backfield positions.

Athletic Director Fred W. Luehring will be in Kansas City tomorrow to represent Nebraska in the meeting of the Missouri Valley Conference. Nebraska has now been restored to full membership in the Conference and Luehring is expected to arrange a schedule for the eleven including a number of Valley colleges next year.

So far the Nebraskans are [illegible] and unable for lack of practice [illegible] are trying to find a place on the East [illegible] Nebraska is known now. Kansas, Notre Dame and the Michigan Aggies are fixtures on the Cornhuskers schedule, while the Washington State College is willing to return to Lincoln for another tilt next Thanksgiving. There is a possibility of a Nebraska-Oklahoma game and also a possibility that connections will be re-established with Missouri and Ames. In the event that this should not take place, Luehring will make a bid for a game with one of the eastern teams, and if not successful there, to meet some star member of the Big Ten.

Truly Nebraska is ambitious. But if the Cornhuskers can develop a team in 1921 which will invade the East and bring back the scalp of some member of the Big Ten they will have achieved a victory for Mid-West football and will have the hearty support of every school in the Missouri Valley.

C. B. S. SOPHOMORE MEN PLAY JUNIORS TODAY

"BABE" RUTH BREAKS HIGH SALARY RECORD

George "Babe" Ruth, star outfielder, pitcher of the New York Yankees and champion home-run hitter of all time, who is playing a series of exhibition games in Cuba, has probably broken all records for the salary paid a baseball player in one year. The famous player, after receiving $80,000 for performing before the people of Cuba with an all-star Major League team under the management of John Evers, has drawn such big crowds that a Cuban promoter has offered him $1,000 a game to play in four more games. Ruth is said to receive $40,000 a year for playing with New York, which, combined with the $80,000 received for playing in the exhibition games, makes his salary for one playing season $80,000. This is without a doubt the largest sum of money any baseball player ever received for one month's work.

The homerun hitter failed to come up to the expectations of the Cubans in the series just completed, but his baseball record made the past season in the American League, continues to entice the people of Cuba to the games in which he plays. In the ten games Ruth just finished playing the champions better made only two homeruns. Torriente, a Cuban negro player, really outdid Ruth. The famous negro player scored three homeruns in a game in which he played against Ruth. The "Babe" gives as his reason for not getting more circuit drives the fact that the parks in which the games have been played are not enclosed and outfielders, by playing extremely deep, rob him of hits that would be homeruns on regulation fields.

FANTASTIC GLOVES PROTECT FEMININE FINGERS FROM COLD

By "Marjorie"
(Written for the United Press.)

New York, Nov. 27.—Throwing down the gauntlet would be a very expensive gesture this year. A lady would need implicit faith in her cavalier before she would dare throw one of her gloves to the floor, in giving the dare to her gallant, and the same lack of medieval grace whose "throwing and gloves she was always motioning," would endure a severe memory jog when she received her glove bill.

The highest class specialty shops on Fifth Avenue are really astounding their buying populace by showing what can be done to a glove. A year ago womankind would have gasped at the idea of dressing her hands in silk and skins all bedecked with colored embroidery, painted designs, chenille monograms and fancy patterns. But that is exactly what these departments are showing today. The creators look like suggestions for a peacock tail, or as if Arthur and his knights had surrendered their gauntlets to embroidery. For it is the gauntlet cuff that has almost supplanted the loose ride glove. Both silks, fabrics and skin gloves employ this spreading cuff to be worn over the dress, coat or coat sleeve. Some of the cuffs are very stiff and embroidered. A leading house is showing a pair in heavy black cape leather. The cuff spreads, as if stiffly starched, from the wrist and is decorated with a banding in vermilion red. This style jibes well with Peter Pan dresses and Eton suits and is especially good for the junior girls.

The softer suedes and glace kid are gathered in by contrasting belts. Real jewels are used on the tiny buckles of many of these gloves. These expensive gloves are brought forth only upon request. One house shows upon application a pair of soft white suede gauntlets edged with ermine and buckled with white sapphire.

Other gloves, which are cut of the millionaire class and yet which are not exactly proletariat, employ embroidered handings in silks and beads. A favorite style is the white capeskin gauntlet finished about the cuff with an inch banding of the swastika pattern embroidered in black silk floss.

Sport gloves of heavy kid or pigskin are lovely woods and foliage. Many gauntlets of tan cape are dotted lined with a fine figure wool which is gay with tiny figures of various colors. Sometimes the lining protrudes over the cuff for an inch or so.

BEGGARS FOLLOW WARMTH

Street Seller Is Sign to South That Winter Rages in North.

By United Press.

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 3.—"It must be getting cold up north," said the old Texan. "I noticed two street vendors and a pencil seller this noon as I went to dinner."

"Just as the robin is the harbinger of spring to the unintelligent north, the street beggar is the announcement to the South that winter is raging in the Northland.

"When the winds in northern cities get too chilly for the street vendors to continue "Transcript," he comes south.

SKIN CAN SEE, IS DISCOVERY OF SCIENTIST

Louis Farigoule, Noted French Experimenter, Says Blind Have Sight Without Aid of Eyes.

TO HELP WAR VICTIMS

Used Hypnotized Subjects in Work—Found They Could Read Newspapers With Backs.

By Henry Wood
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

Paris, Nov. 13. (by mail.)—"And the blind shall see"—not with their sightless eyes, but with their skin. This is the startling declaration of Prof. Louis Farigoule, noted as a scientist, and noted almost equally as well as a poet, under the name of Julien Harmine.

As the result of along series of experiments made upon hypnotized subjects, Professor Farigoule is convinced that the skin through certain nerve ends has the faculty of vision. He believes that this faculty of the skin to see existed in the human body before vision was developed by means of the eyes. Since then, naturally, the faculty of the skin to see has been all but lost through lack of use.

By a proper system of education, however, Professor Farigoule is convinced that these nerve centers and ends in the skin can be reinstated to exercise their original functions. What this would mean for the blind and especially for those who lost their vision by means of the eyes during the war, is the great underlying inspiration that is pushing Professor Farigoule on to further experiments.

HYPNOTIZED SUBJECTS

He has just published the results of his first experiments that have caused him to arrive at the above conclusions. Professor Farigoule's experiments have been conducted largely with hypnotized subjects awakened to a certain "realms of consciousness." By means of specially made instruments and by a method of controlling the experiments that eliminate all possibility of either the sense of touch or of the sense of smell playing any part in the recognition of objects, Professor Farigoule declares he has demonstrated that the skin can actually see and recognize both the color and form of exterior objects. Farigoule has demonstrated that this vision by means of the skin takes place through "ocelles" or microscopic nerve terminals situated in the skin.

SIGHT IN SKIN OR OCELLI

All that is necessary to see by means of the skin is that several square inches of it, on any part of the body, be exposed face to face with the object to be perceived together with a minimum amount of light.

Prof. Farigoule in one of his experiments chose five subjects and all with the same results. By means of their skin they were able to read newspapers, decipher numbers, and recognize pieces of furniture—and all equally as well with the skin on their backs as on their chests or faces.

Professor Farigoule is convinced that this faculty lies latent with every human being and that only a proper system of education is necessary to restore it to its normal function.
