The American and Mexican Commissioners who drew up the Protocol of November 24, 1916, finished consideration of General Carranza's refusal to accept it on the 2nd. It is expected that efforts to arrive at an agreement between the two countries by means of the present commission will be abandoned. It is intimated that Henry P. Fletcher, who was confirmed as United States Ambassador to Mexico nearly a year ago, will soon go to his post. Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican Ambassador Designate, is now on his way to Mexico to consult with his own government. He expressed himself as hopeful of a satisfactory ending of all matters in dispute between the two countries.

The official press bureau of the Mexican government at Washington publishes the following statement regarding the production of oil by the government:

As a measure of economy and in order to meet the great and constantly increasing demand for fuel, oil and gasoline in its various departments, such as railroads, etc., the government is now engaged in sinking oil wells in the Tampico region, with the best prospects for success. These wells are located in the so-called zona maritima, a belt of land 20 meters (65½ feet) in width, extending inland from extreme high-water mark. This belt is by law reserved exclusively to the nation as its special property and cannot be alienated from public ownership, although permits or leases for its use by private parties or companies are legal. But it cannot pass into private ownership, nor can the beds of rivers, lakes or bays.

It is true concessions have been illegally granted in the past purporting to convey private ownership to such lands, and some were transferred under the Huerta regime in order to set up a shadow of title thereto and perhaps afford ground for international complications. But the law is very plain and the present government does not propose to recognize or tolerate its violation.

As soon as a sufficient flow of oil shall have been secured, and of this there can be no doubt, a refinery will be established and the large quantities of gasoline at present only procurable at high cost from outside sources for government use will be furnished at cost of production and no more. It is expected that over a hundred thousand dollars in gold will be saved monthly for fuel oil alone through the completion of these wells by the authorities, while in time there is no reason to doubt that the government will itself be able to enter the export field, since the proven oil territory that it can develop is of very large extent and easily accessible.—The Public.

Claus Johnson of Grove City and Arthur Nelson of Acton claim to have seen an aeroplane circling above the former place last week Tuesday morning. They claim the machine was so near the ground they could see the aviator plainly, also that there was no noise from the rapid explosions of the engine.

Big Week at Farm School.

L. A. Tjosvold of Willmar was in St. Paul last week at Farmers' and Home-Makers' week at the Minnesota College of Agriculture. Lectures on farming and rural life questions, demonstrations of methods of doing farm work and attendance at meetings of live stock and crop associations filled the time of the week. More than 1,600 attended the meetings.

Seven courses of instruction were given at the same time on the farmers' week program. Twenty-four state livestock and crop associations conducted their annual meetings, electing officers and planning their program for working together. At a banquet of all the breeders' associations, a state breeders' association to unite the different groups and to help advertise the livestock of the state, was discussed. The Holstein breeders' association made a plan for raising a fund of $3,000 or $4,000 to be used in a publicity campaign to make Minnesota known as a Holstein cattle state. The Jersey breeders' association talked of a similar plan.

Recommendations of a revision of the drainage law so as to require a petition of half the men affected by the tax for a drainage project, a five year bond by the engineer to insure that the ditches be permanently built, a co-operative law like that in Wisconsin and a law to take care of car shortage for moving farm products, were made by the state federation of farmers' clubs, the daily meetings of which formed one section of the week's program. The clubs studied the rural credits situation and the new farm loan act.

Special lectures and demonstrations were given for women on foods and clothing, textiles and dressmaking, house planning and home management, child training and home nursing. Dr. Walter L. Ramsay of St. Paul warned women to beware of patent medicines for children and explained how most of them could be made at home and given with better results.

Other courses included farm management, in which address showed how the cost of $162.12 for living on Minnesota farms could be reduced by keeping more livestock; dairy and animal husbandry, in which pastures for feeding cattle and pigs were advocated; veterinary science, one advising farmers to kill stray dogs and avoid visitors when there is danger of an epidemic; poultry and bees, in which a supply of bees to collect the fourteen million dollars worth of honey products yielded in the state every year was advocated.

Our visitors feel that they were well paid for their trip to the state school. They feel that the gathering is the best clearing house for ideas in practical farming that is open in the state. The attendance at the course was increased by 400 this year.

A Dog Train Derby.

Ten or twelve dog trains, the pick of the packs that traverse the snowy trails of Manitoba and the Northwest Territories, will pit their speed and endurance, each against all the others, in the 500 mile dash from Winnipeg to the St. Paul Outdoor Sports Carnival, late in January.

This event, which promises to become an annual classic as a leading feature of St. Paul's annual carnival, will be known as the Red-River Valley Derby. The course from Winnipeg will follow the Red River of the North into North Dakota and Minnesota, touching at Grand Forks, St. Cloud and other points.

The finish line is in the Carnival City's famous Como Park, where the winning team and driver will be welcomed by thousands, including King Boreas and his retinue of Carnival Queens.

From Winnipeg to Fargo the Derby course follows the old mail route over which many years ago the late James J. Hill made one of his first visits to Winnipeg, traveling by sledge behind a team of shaggy huskies.

The big purses hung up by the Carnival Association, as well as the lure of the sport and the spirited rivalry among the Northern camps, have tempted some of the most famous dog drivers away from their traps and nets to participate in the Carnival Derby. Lake Winnipeg, LaPas and the Icelandic River district are sending drivers and teams whose reputations have been won in the Hudson Bay sweepstakes and other famous speed events in the Northland.

The Derby will furnish a test of endurance not only for the rival breeds of dogs but also for the Indian and the pale faced drivers. Among the entrants is the famous full-blood Cree, Tommy Spence, of Bad Throat, Man., veteran of many a hard-fought finish, and John Isfeld of Gimli, Man., who went through the Lake Winnipeg country a few years ago to select the 100 best dogs of the district for Sir Ernest Sakelton's party to drive on its quest for the South Pole. Isfeld will drive a team of black and white huskies, all blood relatives of the Shakelton dogs.

Automatic Announcer.

G. Adolph Stenson has received word from the United States patent office at Washington that he has been allowed a patent on his "station and street indicator," working plans of which he submitted about six months ago. The patent was granted January 3 of this year, and gives the Cokato boy the exclusive right to the principle involved.

As with all practical inventions, the mechanism is comparatively simple, and cortains but 15 or 16 working parts. It is intended to be used in railway coaches and street cars to act as a silent announcer of the next stopping place. The frame containing the mechanism will be placed at the front of the vehicle, and the station or street name will be shown in large letters behind the glass-covering opening in the indicator. It is intended that one frame and mechanism be placed in each coach, and these to be operated by the pull of a lever in the last coach, operating each indicator simultaneously.

Those who have seen the plans are of the opinion that Mr. Stenson has invented something worth while, and that should meet with ready approbation of railway officials. Mr. Stenson has the plans at the Stenson grocery, and will be pleased to show and explain them to any one interested in the matter.—Cokato Enterprise.

LOCAL SPORT DOPE

On Saturday evening of this week there will be another double header at the high school, when the local school team clashes with the Benson team, in the second district championship game. The preliminary game will be between the Redmen and Whitemen, teams picked from the high school subs. They will be evenly matched and a good game is looked for. Benson evidently has a stronger team this year than ever before, as they defeated Morris without much trouble, the score being 36 to 6. The first game will begin at seven-thirty and the price of admission will be the same as usual.

The Delano town basket ball team defeated the Seminary on the local floor last Saturday by a score of 39 to 23. Captain Orlean Christian starred for the Seminary bunch, scoring seventeen of the points his team made. For the winners Kuka at left guard was the bright star with ten baskets from the field, several of which were beyond the center of the floor, and a foul, to his credit. The score:

Kuka	L G	Canton
