

PAT AND HIS PIG.—When Col. Van Wyck was running for Congress in the Fifteenth New York District there was a certain Irishman who steadfastly refused to give the old soldier any encouragement. The Colonel was greatly surprised, therefore, when Pat informed him on election day that he had concluded to vote for him.

"Glad to hear it, glad to hear it," said the Colonel; "I rather thought you were against me, Patrick." "Well, sir," said Patrick, "I wuz, and when ye stud by me pigpen and talked that day ye didn't budge me a hair's breadth, sir, but after ye wuz gone away I got to thinking how ye reached yer hand over the fence and scratched the pig on the back till he laid down wid the pleasures of it, and I made up me mind that whin a rale kernel was as sociable as that, I wun't the man to vote agin him.

TOOLS USED IN THE PYRAMIDS.—During a residence of two years in tomb at Gizeh, Mr. William M. Flinders Petrie collected evidence showing that the tools used in working stone 4,000 years ago were made with jeweled cutting edges, as is the modern custom. He has stated his reasons for coming to these conclusions, and proves in a very satisfactory manner that the pyramid-builders used solid and tubular drills, straight and circular saws and many other supposed modern tools in erecting that greatest of buildings. He also shows that their lathe tools were set with jewels and that they did work with them that would puzzle the modern artisan. In one place he found where the lines of cutting on a granite core made by a tubular drill form a uniform depth throughout, showing that the cutting point was not worn as the work advanced. The regular taper of the core would set go to prove that the drill was set with jewels on the inside and on the outside alike, thereby facilitating its removal. In some specimens of granite he found that the drill had sank one-tenth of an inch at each revolution, the pressure necessary to accomplish this having been at least two tons. The capacity of the tools and the skill of the workmen is illustrated by the clean cut they made through soft and hard materials alike, there being no difference in the width of the groove when it passed through soft sandstone and granite hard as iron. Nothing is known concerning the material of which their tools were made, nor how the jewels were set. The diamond was very scarce at that time, therefore the only logical conclusion is that they used corundum.—Republic.

ROMANCE OF A COIN.—It was a Mexican dollar, from which the imprint of the Government had been removed, so that instead of a coin it seemed to be an engraved disk of silver, until the owner opened it and disclosed a charming miniature. "I can tell you a thrilling story about a dollar like that," he said. "When I was in New Mexico I knew a young man who had a dollar similar to this, only that it contained the miniature of a lady whose husband was a regular fire-eater. He was a fighter from the word go—the worst in town. One day the young man and I went to the races together. We bought pools, and after some winnings began to lose, but kept on playing, as fellows always will. My friend had the souvenir dollar in his pocket, and, in the excitement, gave it to the pool-seller with three ordinary dollars. It was much lighter than the dollars, but that was not noticed, as it was stacked up with them. My friend did not find out what he had done until he had left the race track. Then he was the worst scared man you ever saw. The original of the miniature was well known, and it meant death for somebody if the hollowed out dollar got into her husband's hands. First I went to the banks, but it had not been offered there. Then I went to all the fare banks and told the dealers that I would give $10 for that particular coin. For three days we were in an agony of suspense, and when the missing coin turned up at a fare table my friend thought it was the cheapest money he had ever got hold of."—Boston Herald.

HAPPY WITH EITHER.—Jeanie-I can be nothing more than a sister to you, Jack. Jack—ask your sister to come downstairs and see if you can not be at least a sister-in-law to me—Puck.

NO HEIRLOOMS.—Mrs. Malfour (after proudly showing her family treasures to new neighbor's little daughter)—Have you any such heirlooms at home, my little dear. Little Dear (with dignity)—No'm, I guess our folks was always rich 'nough to trow away their old things an' buy new ones.—Old News.
