THE most wonderful medicine I have ever met with is Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. In cases of colic it gives speedy relief. On hunting trips I have found it indispensable. Put in alkali water it imparts a pleasant taste and prevents the painful diarrhœa which alkali water produces. I could not feel safe without it in my house. J. F. Smith, For. Abercrombie, N. D. The Southwest.

The following descriptive letter is sent us by Rev. J. W. Keser, who is now sojourning in California:

We left St. Joseph on the morning of the 16th of September by the Santa Fe route. Nothing out of the usual attracts our attention until we reach Hutchinson, Kan., when we look out of the car window at night and see her electric light plant, which is so extensive that it reminds one of a young Chicago. From here we speed on through the darkness of the night. The first thing that greets our sight in the morning is the barren prairies of western Kansas and eastern Colorado, with here and there an humble hovel of the western pioneer. The query rises in our mind, "What do those settlers want out here on this parched part of mother earth? But after inquiring we are told that the cattle business keep them here. Surely cattle must work hard, rarely picking from early morning until late at night to live this time of year. But directly we see a small area of land which has been irrigated on which fine alfalfa is grown and fine wheat. So after all if this land could be irrigated it would produce good crops. Now we reach La Junta Junction, Col., where our train is divided, part going to Denver. Right here let me whisper that from here on one is as well of with a second class ticket as with first. From here on our train continues in a southwesterly course, slowly up grade. To our right, one hundred and fifty miles away, we see that wonderful bulk of earth, Pikes Peak. But as we speed on, directly we see coming in to sight those objects which have been thrown up by volcanic action. Our iron horse with his round feet walks into Trinidad, the extreme south and eastern Col., a town of no small dimensions, where the Santa Fe railroad Union Pacific, as well the Rio Grande all have stations houses. There are also a number of tile and brick manufacturing establishments. From here we wind along the foot hills and round curves, until our train stops and adds another iron horse to the one already on and up we go until we reach eight thousand feet above sea level. We pass through a tunnel of twelve hundred feet in length. Then we reach a place with gradual descent until we arrive at Las Vegas, New Mexico, yet 6,500 feet of an elevation. Here we stop one week and visit the city and famous hot springs which in our opinion are far from being what they are represented to be, though the Santa Fee railroad company has spent much money to make them noted, by way of improvements. Here, as in many other places, we must give the railroad companies credit that when they build hotels and make improvements they do it right. Las Vegas N. M., is divided into east and west, the west part settled by old time Mexicans, the east part by native Americans, about four thousand population in each. The Mexicans having the greatest number of votes they secured the new court house. It seems rather awkward to one to see all county offices of the Spanish race, with there signs up, Sirvanse de tabaco en el suelo (please do not spit tobacco on the floor). Certainly, by close observation one can see that Catholic priests have been very successful in keeping these people in ignorance and superstition. But the Protestants have succeeded with public funds, in building a magnificent rock school house in the midst of the one story adobe houses, and now say to the Catholic population, here you will educate your children or pay out of your private funds for that purpose. The private dwellings of the natives are built of adobe or sun dried clay, and are so arranged as to enclose a plaza or public square into which each dwelling has an entrance into which all refuse of the houses is cast, such as bones, old rags and boots, until a stench ensues so that in winter, generally we are told, brings small pox and scarlet fever, but the dry pure atmosphere prevent many from dying. The climate is excellent for lung troubles, if the patient has no heart trouble and can stand the high attitude.

Storm Prophet Hicks' Paper.

Very few of our monthlies are more useful or more popular where best known, than Rev. Irl R. Hicks' monthly family and scientific paper, Word and Works. First and foremost of the contents of this charming paper we must mention the noted monthly storm forecasts of Rev. Irl R. Hicks, which are read wherever the English language is spoken. Besides these forecasts, Prof. Hicks contributes to the paper every month popular articles on astronomy, which are finely illustrated; also articles on the science of forecasting weather by planetary meteorology, and a religious article or sermon in each number. Besides these attractions the paper has a "Home, Sweet Home" department, for the ladies, a "Youth and Beauty" department for the boys and guls, "Queries" for those who want hard nuts cracked, and many other good things. All this for the low price of $1.00 per year. Send six cents for a sample copy and see the paper for yourself. Address Word and Works Pub. Co., St. Louis, Mo.

The American Ax Helve.

All the world admires and wonders at the American ax helve. The American ax fitted with that ingeniously curved and gracefully fashioned handle is a marvelously effective weapon, vastly more apt for its purposes than the straight handled headsman's ax with which the Italian fells trees, or the broad faced hatchet used for the same purpose in France. The American ax helve is just what might have been expected of an inventive people laden with the duty of conquering and civilizing a forest clad continent. The world had been using the ax since prehistoric times, but it remained for the American pioneer to fashion the ideal ax handle, at once light, strong and elastic. The ax such as is familiar to all Americans is rare in Europe, and it sells in all the British colonies as the American ax.—New York Sun.

Tutt's Tiny Pills

To cure constipation purging the bowels should be avoided; it weakens their power of motion. A gentle aperient effect is only required. Tutt's Tiny Liver Pills are prepared with special views to the permanent cure of COSTIVENESS and HEADACHE.

They are mild and remain in the system until they act on the liver, cause a natural flow of bile and their tonic properties impart power to the bowels to remove habitually any constipations. Good appetite and digestion result from the use of these little pills. Price, 25c. Office, 39 Murray St., N. Y.

Conscience.

Conscience is that faculty, or property of the mind, that reveals the right and wrong in human conduct. It always condemns when we do wrong. This is an intuitive faculty of the mind; and hence in children it is as strong and as clear in its denunciations of wrong, and as clear in its approval of the right.

The Scriptures speak in no less place than four of a "good conscience." Acts xxiii. And it also speaks of a "weak conscience." 1 Cor. viii. 12. And it speaks of a "pure conscience." 1 Tim. iii. 9. And it speaks of a "conscience seared with a hot iron." 1 Tim. iv. 2. It speaks of an "evil conscience." Heb. x. 22. And it also speaks of a "conscience defiled." Titus i. 15.

From the above passages, with many others that might be given, it is clear that the subject is of vast range and importance not only to the Bible student but to all mankind, as all are conscious that they are in possession of this faculty which we call conscience.

Webster says this word is derived from two Latin words, and means "to know; to be privy to." And he defines it to be, "Internal, or self-knowledge; the judgment of right and wrong; or the faculty, power, or principle within us, which decides on the lawfulness or unlawfulness of our own actions and affections, and instantly approves or condemns them.

Rev. John Dick, D. D. a Scottish writer of theology, definess conscience as follows: "It is that faculty which perceives right and wrong in actions, approves or disapproves of them, anticipates their consequences under the moral administration of God, and is thus the cause of peace or disquietude of mind.

Dr. A. Clarke, at the close of his comments on Heb. xiii., dwells at length on this subject, and thus defines it: "To me it seems to be no other than a faculty capable of receiving light and conviction from the Spirit of God: and answere the end, in spiritual matters to the soul, that the eye does to the body in the process of vision."

Rev. C. G. Finney on moral Governments, says that all men to be subjects of moral gorvernment must possess intellect, sensibility, and free will; and he defines conscience by saying: "Conscience is the faculty, or function of the intellect that recognizes the conformity or disconformity of the heart and life to the moral law as it lies revealed in the reason, also awards praise to conformity and blame to disconformity to that law. It also affirms that conformity to the moral law deserves reward, and that disconformity deserves punishment. It also possesses a propelling or impulsive power, by which it urges the conformity, and denounces the nonconformity of will to moral law. It seems, in a certain sense, to possess the power of retribution."—Wesleyan Methodist.

THE articles of interest in the October Eclectic are such as appeal to a catholic variety of tastes. The paper on "Recent Science," by Prince Kropotkin, the exiled Russian Nihilist and Savant, is a lucid review worthy of special attention. One of the most interesting problems in psychology is ably discussed under the title of "Imagination in "Dreams," by Frederick Greenwood, Archibald Forbes, the noted War Correspondent, in the article "The French Empress and the German War," offers some alleged fresh facts as to the responsibility of the ex Empress Eugenie for the tremendous disaster which befell France. The account of "The First Ascent of Mont Blanc," by Richard Edgcumbe, will be read with much interest. "The Art of Dining," by A. Kenney-Herbert, is a contribution which many will find equally full of pleasure and profit. The paper on Shelley, by Francis Adams, the anniversary celebration of whose birth has been a feature of such public interest abroad only recently, is of great attraction both in a critical and biographical sense. Mrs. Andrew Crosse chats entertainingly under caption of "Old Memories Interviewed." Sir Robert Ball, great astronomer contributes a paper on "Mars," of the most vivid interest, giving all the latest reliable facts and speculations concernnih that planet, the nearest analogies in its condition to those of the earth. Mr. John W. Hales is the author of a fascinating study of the noted people and the intellecttal conditions of "The Last Decade of the Nineteenth Century." The very pertinent question of Cholera is ably treated by E. B. Lanin, under the title of "Cholera and Cleanliness in Russia," and a good pendent paper is presented by a distinguished English physician, Dr. Yorke Davies, which he calls "Health and Condition." All readers will peruse with zest Goldwin Smith's resume of current American politics, wherein he analyzes "The Contest for the Presidency." There are several notable examples of good fiction writing, bright short articles, and clean poems; both subjects and authors are of a character to fix attention on the number. Published by E. R. Pelton, 144 Eighth Street, New York. Terms, $5 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial subscription for 3 months, $1. Eclectic and any $4 Magazine, $8.

CARL SHUETZ, the bloody old thing, still waves in the Democratic camps.

ALL of the states of this union have made appropriations for an exhibit at the Columbian exposition next year except the following viz: Connecticut, Louisiana, South Carolina, Texas, Georgia Arkansas, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, South Dakota, Mississippi, Kansas, Oregon, Nevada. Of these Connecticut was prevented by the deadlock in the Legislature, which prevented any business from being done. South Dakota, and Kansas, were prevented from so doing by the Alliance, which controlled one house in each state. We are unable to say what prevented an appropriation in Nevada and Oregon. They were both controlled by the Republicans. The remaining states are in the extreme south, and it is probable that political consideration prevented any action by them

THANK the Lord the farmers of Missouri are not without a candidate, even though they were slapped in the face by the Democratic state convention. Both Major Warner and Leverett Leonard are excellent farmer candidates.

THE Democrats do not deny that they egged Gen. Weaver and Mrs. Lease in Georgia, but what they are indignant about is the charge that the eggs were spoilt. No, thank you, they could afford to throw sound eggs.

—When visiting St. Louis there is one point of more than usual interest that should not be overlooked. We refer to the Photograph Studio of Strauss at 1245 Franklin Avenue. In his art, Strauss is a genius, and that he is so recognized, is evidenced by the fact that all our prominent public men go to Strauss for their portraits. Both Col. Stone and Major Warner in ordering photographs for the campaign, called on Strauss, and the life like pictures of our candidate for governor, which now adorns our office, gives convincing proof of the excellence of Strauss' work.

POPULAR SUGGESTIONS.

Our Lesson for 1892, Which Buyers, Generally, and Shrewd ones in Particular, Would Do Well to Commit to Memory.

Does it not pay to purchase goods of old, reliable houses, that have the largest stock to select from, that purchase from manufacturers only, in large quantities, saving the jobber's profit which you get the benefit of? Please bear this in mind, and if you have not availed yourself of the opportunity do so, and you will be pleased with the result. PICTURESQUE B. & O.

Bishop Perry's Impressions of his Trip to New York Via Washington.

A lengthy article from the pen of Rev. William Stevens Perry, Bishop of Iowa was recently published in the Iowa, Churchman descriptive of his journey from Chicago to New York via Washington. Among other things he says: "One traveling eastward from Chicago, via the Picturesque Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, finds rest and comfort in the Vestibuled Pullman limited trains on which travel is no longer irksome, but luxurious. There are two of these trains daily from Chicago, one leaving at 10:10 a. m., and the other at 2:50 p. m. It was on the morning train that we began our pleasant journey across the plains and over the Alleghanies for New York. We had the enjoyable anticipation of going via Washington, for the Baltimore and Ohio alone, of all the many routes between the seaboard and the lakes, passes directly to and through the Capitol City.

"It was night when we crossed the Ohio river and began the ascent of the Alleghanies, on the summit of which are the twin resorts, Deer Park and Oakland. The last named is a pretty village shut in by towering mountains. A pretty church shows that the visitors at Deer Park take their religion with them into the country. The handsome cottages grouped about the hotel, the fine walks and drives in every direction the salubrity of the air, and the coolness which is obtained when all the world below this elevation is feeling the oppressiveness of the heated term make this an ideal spot for summering. At the foot of the mountains we entered the Potomac valley, which was debatable ground during the civil war. The streams and fields we cross, the ravines we thread, as we speed on to Washington, have their historic associations with that internecine strife that pitted the Blue against the Gray. Across the mountains and down the Potomac we were greeted by a constant succession of most magnificent views which have gained for the Baltimore and Ohio the sobriquet of "Picturesque B. & O."

"Our route from Washington to New York was via the Royal Blue Line of the Baltimore and Ohio which is composed of the staunchest and finest Coaches, Parlor and Sleeping cars ever built by the Pullman Company, vestibuled from end to end, and protected by Pullman's improved anti-telescoping device. All the cars are heated by steam and lighted by Pintsch gas. They are the fastest trains in the world, placing New York and Washington within five hours' reach."

It is not true that Gen. Weaver and and Mrs. Lease are to be married soon. The General has a wife and Mrs. Lease has a husband. They are engaged in a "bloody shirt" campaign in the south—but not to be married.
