THE HUNTER AND THE SUBWAY.

Rex Beach Laments the Effect of City Life on Physical Endurance.

"To the hunter there is an unwearying variety to his 'kills,' yet in the telling I dare say they are all much alike," says Rex Beach, in his "Chronicles of a Chromatic Bear Hunt," in the December Everybody's. "One episode, however, is worth recounting. In crossing a torrent by the familiar tree-trunk route Fred met a black bear which seemed late for an appointment. Off it went into the foam below at the first shot, only to rush out and up the hillside, with Fred teetering on his perch like a canary and firing at every glimpse. The animal had gained complete cover when it released all holds and came rolling back down into the torrent, to be swept away, with Fred legging along behind until he could wade in and drag out his victim by the ears.

"We had matched all the shades of our wallpaper now, save only that in my blue room, but a blue or 'glacier' bear, rarest specimens, is killed perhaps once in a life time. I scoured the glaciers until I went snow-blind and could not tell a black from a grizzly. We saw a pair of blue eyes one night on the Miles moraine, and followed until our legs gave out, whereupon Joe left Fred and me behind and continued the pursuit, returning empty-handed after a total of forty-eight hours' travel.

"Time was when I dared any man to outlast me, but subways and pavements and hotel cooking have so ruined my usefulness that a paltry thirty miles of hill and valley renders me a burden upon the community, while such a hunt seemed merely to start Joe's circulation. Day after day Fred and I tried to follow him step by step, until we discovered that each of his strides was four inches longer than ours. We increased our resolutions, but always ran out of gasoline and had to be towed in."

Christmas in Country Places.

Christmas in the country places—
There you see the rosy faces:
There the joy—the world entrancin',
Joy that sets the world a-dancin'!
Fine and free the life-blood races—
Christmas in the country place.

Glad enough to hear it hummin';
Waited long to see it comin';
Knows the place where we're a-stayin';
Fine to spend a holiday in!
There is where amazin' grace is
Christmas in the country place.

City has the good time, too,
Yet the country calls to you;
There it is you want to roam
In the frosty fields of "Home."
Hearty handshake, friendly faces—
Christmas in the country places!

Pile the ample oak logs higher!
Room for one more at the fire;
Same old tales of Long Ago—
Tell 'em—for we love 'em so!
All the life's trouble joy effaces—
Christmas in the country places!

ABOUT THE STATE

Mrs. Charles DeLong of Shoreham, served lettuce and radishes December 1 grown in the open in her own garden.

The appointment of T. H. Newberry, of Detroit, as secretary of the navy has resulted in a corresponding promotion for Walter A. Dane, of Newport, his private secretary, to a confidential position in the office of the new secretary.

Capt. Harry B. Chamberlin, quartermaster U. S. A., a native of Fairlee, for some time on duty at Chicago, has been transferred to Fort Morgan, Mobile, Ala., where he will be on duty in connection with government construction work.

Thomas Whipple, actively identified for about fifty-five years with important teaming interests in Boston, who died recently at his home in Sherborn, Mass., was born eighty years ago in Chester. His father served in the Continental army.

A dress suit case was found in the pasture near Ithiel falls, Johnson, recently, by the Rice and Davis boys, who live in that vicinity. It contained some men's wearing apparel and near it was found a pair of men's shoes. State's Attorney William Tracy is looking into the matter.

Some of the children at the state industrial school at Vergennes have been suffering with sore throats of late and 150 diphtheria outfits have been sent there from the state laboratory of hygiene, Burlington. The outfit consists of a kind of a swab made of medicated cotton. After being used in the throat the swabs are returned to the laboratory and analyzed.

The condition of Louis Martin, of Burlington, who fell from a fourth story window at the Brunswick hotel, Rutland, Sunday evening, November 29 and who was removed to Proctor hospital for treatment, is greatly improved. Mr. Martin's injuries were not as serious as was feared at first, the greatest injury being several broken ribs and slight internal injuries.

The report of the Vermont soldiers' home, Bennington, for the ten days ending December 1, shows that the average number present was 95. The average enrollment was 108. Wednesday morning the total number present was 100, the largest number present any day in nearly three years. The prospects are that the enrollment of the home will be greater by far this winter than any time before in its history. There are 26 in the hospital.

The International Fisheries Question

State Fish and Game Commissioner H. G. Thomas of Stowe, has returned home from Washington, where he attended a conference of fish and game commissioners from all states along the border between this country and Canada where there are lakes on the border line.

Mr. Thomas says that the several commissioners are endeavoring to come to a conclusion as to the manner in which fish in border lakes shall be taken, and it is practically settled that a treaty for five years will be drawn up, but just what the conditions are is not given out for publication. Vermont comes into the list of interested states by reason of Lake Champlain and Lake Memphremagog and the fishing in these lakes will probably be adjusted so that the interests of this state will be protected.

Pension Mean Much For Widow.

After bringing up a large family of children by her work as a washerwoman, Mrs. Celena Surrell of Cuttingsville has just secured a widow's pension and back pay of $2,956, enough to make life pleasant for the remainder of her days. The granting of the pension is the result of persistent attempts since the death of her husband 16 years ago, the fight being a hard and long one, owing to the fact that Mr. Surrell enlisted in the navy in the Civil war under the name by which his family was known at one time while living in Canada. The name of Surrell did not appear on the records at Washington.

Mrs. Surrell was informed last summer by E. H. Wood of Rutland, a pension agent, that her only chance of securing a pension lay in identifying her husband through one man who had served on the same war vessel. An application was made to the pension department and special agent Maxwell came here to investigate the case. Mrs. Surrell had a tintype of her husband which was taken while he was in the navy. The agent learned that a man who served with Surrell was living at Worcester, and when this man saw the picture he recognized it at once, thus furnishing the necessary evidence. Mrs. Surrell has just received a check for $2,965 back pay.

At the time of her husband's death Mrs. Surrell, who is now about 60 years old, was left with eight children, five sons and three daughters, and no means of support except what she could earn by taking in washings and doing housework for residents of the village. Her health was good and by her efforts she managed to keep the children in school until each of them was 16 years of age. At present all but one of them are earning their own living. The youngest son is still attending school. This boy will be 16 years old next summer and until then the mother will receive an additional $2 a month under the pension law.

School Teaching in Vermont.

Another important question to consider in connection with this proposition of a central normal school: Is the state prepared to advance the salaries of teachers to a point where the graduates of a modern normal school can afford to stay in Vermont. It would be folly for the state to expend a half million dollars in a normal training school for teachers and fifty thousand a year in supporting it and then allow its graduates to leave the state because they could obtain better pay elsewhere."—Northfield News.

If the state of Vermont is not prepared to advance the salaries of teachers to a point where a graduate of a modern normal school can afford to stay in the state it is high time that the whole educational system was given an overhauling. If we are becoming scared through the fear that our public school instructors may come to know too much then the people are in need of education more than the children. One great defect in the educational system in VeVrmont is the low salaries paid to teachers. If the editor of the News could take a trip into some of the western states and make only a casual investigation of this subject, the salaries paid and the requirements insisted upon, he would realize why it is that Vermont has no difficulty in securing the proper teachers. In one public institution in a far western state, of which the writer had a slight personal knowledge, the instructors in the grades, even to the primary, were college graduates but the compensation was of sufficient consequence to repay the teacher to take the four years of instruction that was considered necessary to fit her for the position.

FOR USE OF SANTA CLAUS.

Spruce and Balsam Trees Being Cut in Vermont Forests.

Rutland, Dec. 7.—With the approach of the Christmas season carload after carload of spruce and balsam trees are being sent to Boston, New York and other large eastern cities, large tracts of land in the Vermont hills being laid bare to supply the growing demand. Most of the cutting this year is being done at the south end of Rutland county, in the vicinity of Wallingford and Shrewsbury, where the loading of cars is going on rapidly. One dealer in the latter town already has cut and shipped over 100,000 trees.

According to the new law, dealers in Christmas trees must now take out licenses with the county clerks in the districts from which the trees are shipped, the amount specified being $50. The law was calculated to restrict the wholesale shipping of small spruce and hemlock trees and the consequent delpetion of timber. That the demand from the large cities is heavier than ever this year is the statement of several dealers. George Whitney of East Wallingford, who has cut many trees in the last few years, said: "I have had a greater demand this year than ever for Christmas trees. I have already about completed the work." Some dealers here account for the increased demand for Vermont Christmas trees on the ground that the Maine supply will be small this year.

BOTH HIS LEGS BROKEN.

James Judge of Bennington Thrown from Top of Caboose.

Bennington, Dec. 7.—James Judge, conductor of the local freight which runs between this town and Chatham, N. Y., was seriously hurt Saturday, near Brainard, N. Y. He was standing on the rear end of the top of the caboose when the train started suddenly and he was thrown to the ground. Both of his legs were broken above the knees.

The rest of the crew did not become aware of the accident until the next station was reached. In the meantime Judge had crawled off the tracks and flagged the next train. He was taken on board and brought to the Albany city hospital where his condition is reported to be serious.

Mr. Judge is a resident of Rutland, Vt., but has lived in this town for the past few months.

FINDS FIVE NEW CASES.

Dr. Holton of Brattleboro Says Family at Rawsonville Has Smallpox.

Brattleboro, Dec. 7.—Dr. Henry D. Holton of Brattleboro, secretary and executive officer of the state board of health, was in Rawsonville in the town of Jamaica Saturday, and examined some suspected smallpox cases in the family of Herbert Parsons, a farmer. He was satisfied that five children in the family had the disease and the house is quarantined. The schools in Rawsonville will not open for the present. The Jamaica and South Londonderry physicians do not agree with Dr. Holton in the diagnosis. Only two cases of smallpox developed in Brattleboro Saturday and both are in families where it has appeared recently.

DIES OF HEART DISEASE.

Richard H. Jones of Rutland Stricken at His Home.

Rutland, Dec. 7.—Richard H. Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Jones of Gibson avenue, aged 20 years, died of heart disease about one o'clock Saturday morning. He retired about midnight, but said nothing about nto feeling well. About an hour later his brother, who slept with him, heard his groan and called his mother. A physician was hastily summoned but the young man was dead before he arrived. The funeral was held from St. Peter's church to-day at 9 o'clock.
