THE IDEAL POULTRY HOUSE.

The ideal poultry house is difficult to describe. There seems to be nothing about the poultry business in regard to which there is a wider difference of opinion than on this point. It seems to be the general opinion that the type of house is not very important so long as it is dry, well ventilated, and the fowls have plenty of the proper kind of food. Food is the essential thing, and of course certain foods are much better than others. A. M. Brown of North Rochester, Mass., gives his opinion on this particular point in the following letter. He says: "I have fed nearly all the poultry foods on the market, but not with such returns as Page's Perfected Poultry Food gives. My hens have an average of 80 percent to their credit. Last winter it was 50 percent. I know this food is the best on the market."

If you want to know more about this food and the best ways of using it, write to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., for his booklet, "Profitable Poultry." It will be sent free, postpaid, to anyone mentioning this paper.

ABOUT THE STATE

A panther is again reported in Waterbury. This time it was seen on the way to Camel's Hump.

Mrs. M. D. Cross of Johnson was seriously burned last week by the breaking of a kerosene lamp.

The Methodists in Bennington cleared $2,600 from their fair, which closed Saturday night, November 6.

James Hodges of East Middlebury had his right hand badly torn a few days ago by catching it in a ladder hook.

Clarence Clark of Guilford Center fell while at school recently, striking his knee on a broken bottle and cutting it severely.

Eugene Granger of Winooski had the thumb and two fingers of his left hand badly cut a few days ago by being caught between two rollers at the woolen mill.

The young child of Mr. Morway of Samsonville ate strychnine tablets for candy Tuesday, but by the timely aid of a physician the child's life was saved.

Patrick Clune of East Putney fell down the cellar stairs Friday, cutting a gash over two inches long on the back of his head and receiving a bad shaking up.

As Harry Farrar was recently going across the fields to Newport Center from North Newport, he was attacked by a large buck deer and was obliged to climb a tree, but in a few minutes the deer took to the woods.

E. S. Putnam of Williamsville recently caught an animal in a dead-fall that puzzles the hunters and others. It has a tail like a mink, head of the cat species, is about two and one-half feet long and of a mouse color.

W. H. Parsons of Wardsboro met with a serious accident Tuesday while tearing down the chimney of a sugar house. He was on the roof and the chimney fell and carried him along to the ground, some 15 or 20 feet, breaking three ribs and injuring his head and face badly.

Arthur Crouch of West Brattleboro sustained a fractured rib a few days ago, resulting from a fall by the collapsing of the step ladder on which he stood to wash the front windows at J. L. Stockwell's store. Mr. Crouch stood on the top step of the ladder and when he fell he struck on his right side.

E. M. Chamberlin of Newport pulled a carrot in his garden last week, that measured 46 inches in length, though only about three and one-half inches in circumference. Whether it had started to make connections with some other continent, or was off in search of water during the drouth, is a question hard to decide.

A sensation over the abduction of a child has been experienced in Holyoke, Mass., the past few days. The child was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jenner A. Jones and was taken from her father's home by people who drove up in an automobile, one of whom is said to have been her mother. The mother formerly was Bessie Isadore Rice of Brattleboro, daughter of A. H. Rice, once proprietor of the harness shop at Brown's livery stable.

The Northfield village lighting system is to be extended to Northfield Falls, within a short time, to be used for house lighting and probably street lights also. There are a number of house and several stores there, besides the Davis woolen mill, and the demand for electric light had become urgent enough so that it was voted to extend the system. It is expected that work on the wire line will begin as soon as the material can be secured.

Arland, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Harris of West Brattleboro, is suffering from burns on his legs resulting from an accident Tuesday evening while his mother was preparing supper. The boy sat in front of the kitchen stove with his feet on the hearth and when his mother went to the stove to pour some boiling water from the tea kettle she lost control of it, causing quite a quantity of the water to dash over the boy. Her own hands were also burned.

The expense of the public improvements made by the town of Brattleboro and the village, the construction of the new water system and the work by the Connecticut River Power company to protect the town from damage on account of the setting back of the water, will total fully $75,000 for the past year. This added to the $100,000 expended in new buildings during the year makes a decidedly creditable showing and indicates a substantial growth and prosperity in the town.

It has just been learned that John Smith, a prisoner at the house of correction, who was serving a six months' sentence, escaped last Saturday and has not been recaptured. Smith got away early in the morning while at work about the new barn and was not missed until supper time. It is said that other prisoners let Smith have some clothes to take the place of his prison garb. The prison officials do not seem at all anxious to discuss the matter and have been keeping it very quiet.

Don Belleville of the island boat house staff at Brattleboro is nursing numerous bruises and abrasions as a result of an experience he had with an engine in one of the boats the last of the week. He had been cleaning and repairing the engine and when he attempted to start it, it "back fired" and blew him into the stern of the boat. He landed as gracefully as possible under the circumstances, but there are a good many corners in the stern of a boat, and each of them made a black and blue spot.

The new dam of the Woodstock Electric company at Taftsville was finished Wednesday. Construction was begun September 6th. Since that time 61½ working days have been required to complete the dam. From 30 to 40 men have been employed on the job besides the drivers of teams; and, exclusive of engineers, firemen and mechanics, the total days of labor on the work was for one man 1,190 days of 10 hours each or 21,000 hours work for one man. The cost of doing the work was approximately $10,000. The dam is a solid concrete roll. Its total length is 200 feet, and it stands on solid ledges its full length. This ledge or bed rock comes to the surface the entire width of the Ottauquechee river at this point; but at one spot near the east side a hole and seams extended down to a depth of 11 feet, and this had to be excavated. The base of the concrete rests in a channel cut about 18 inches deep in the bed rock, and the height above the foundation is 16½ feet.

Mrs. M. J. Larrabee of Brattleboro received a bad shaking up and numerous bruises by falling on the sidewalk Thursday evening. She caught her toe on a curbing and fell heavily. She was unconscious for a time and had to be carried home in a carriage. Her face was badly bruised and scratched by the fall and she had many bruises on her body and arms. A woman who was with her fell and broke her glasses from stumbling on the same curbing, and only a few minutes earlier another woman fell flat on the sidewalk from the same cause. Within 20 minutes one bystander saw five people stumble or fall down when the curbing was reached. It is only a few inches above the crosswalk and cannot be seen in the darkness.

Leoleta, the 10-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gleason Wilder of Brattleboro, was severely burned while on a visit in Bernardston, Mass., Wednesday. Physicians say that the infant has an even chance to recover, though she was horribly burned about back, legs and ankles. Mrs. Wilder and little daughter were visiting relatives in Bernardson, and the Widler child, in company with a little cousin about her own age, were playing on the floor when a member of the family attempted to lift a wash-boiler of boiling water from the stove. The boiler bottom dropped out, spilling the water upon both children, though the other child was not severely burned. It was impossible to secure a physician in Bernardston for a number of hours after the accident occurred.

A SOBER RACE.

The Anglo-Saxon and Latin Races Compared.

The unemotional nature of the Anglo-Saxon has long been a source of perplexity to the volatile races of southern Europe, with whom expression is life. Voltaire was quick to see the fundamental differences, and he summed up the whole matter when, as a result of his travels in England, he pronounced unfavorable judgment upon a people that ate soup only when they were ill.

On the other hand, the mercurial temperament of those southern nations has ever been a subject of considerable wonder and some amusement to us. One hardly knows what to make of a people to whom soup is an inspiration and sugared water a heady drink; for a true Frenchman can become as intoxicated on that mild beverage as a Texas cowboy on cactus juice. With him, everything is in the superlative degree. It is either the highest heights or the deepest depths, and there is no middle ground between a whoop-la and a sob. Extremes are his delight, and he is fairly enamored of contradictions. He flits in an instant from grave to gay. At one moment he indulges in most fervid oratory and is ready to die for any cause whatever; in the next, he cries, "Vive la bagatelle!" and jests at the most serious matters.

Two recent events, duly exploited in the press, illustrate these radical traits: A Sicilian actor, celebrated for his stirring interpretation of heroic casts, let slip his dagger in a moment of fine frenzy and cut the head of a spectator in the pit. From simulated rage to genuine tears was but the twinkling of an eye. Catching the wounded one up to the stage, the heartbroken tragedian threw himself before his victim, weeping copiously, and kissing him again and again, "Brava! Bravissima!" The audience went wild; the actor gracefully bowed his thanks; the play went on.

Film No. 2 rises upon a duel in France. At the fateful word one shot, and only one, was fired—a clear miss, even the seconds escaping. Upon being praised for his generous chivalry in withholding his fire, the other party modestly disclaimed any merit, admitting after some hesitancy that he had really forgotten to pull the trigger! Needless to say, there were mutual protestations of admiration and respect, and all left the field of safety, feeling that honor had been satisfied. Such irresistible nonchalance is equalled only by the famous duel of the great Sainte-Beuve, who, when a slight drizzle began, paused but a moment to raise an umbrella, and then, in a firm voice, directed that hostilities be resumed.

How restful to turn from these extreme exhibitions of emotion to the sober Anglo-Saxon ways; to observe in England, for instance, the cool demeanor with which the suffragette chains herself in public places, and the quiet determination with which the stomach pump is applied in her behalf. In our country, too, there broods a peaceful calm. From grand stand and bleachers, the prize ring, the foot ball field and the hustings come the soft murmurs of the assembled throngs, as they peacefully comment upon the umpire's decision or speak in low tones of the virtues of the political opponent. Down Breathitt way, they are mildly merry, burning a few ballot boxes; but that's their little custom, and a well bred militia is standing around to see that no one gets jostled.

All in all, we are a solemn, unemotional class. But, as we were saying, these Latin races are a very excitable people.—Washington Post.

Suggestions for Amateur Photography.

"Few things are more puzzling to the amateur photographer than to determine the length of time to give an interior exposure," says Woman's Home Companion for November. "The following hints were given the writer by a skilful professional, and have enabled him to obtain some very fine negatives with no waste.

"First focus carefully with 'open lense,' next put in your smallest stop, then cover your head with the dark cloth and look on the 'ground glass.' You will probably see only a very dim view, or even only a spot of light if the room is dark. Note the exact time on your watch, and then cover your head up again and watch the ground glass until you can see the entire picture upon it, even to the 'shadows.' It will surprise the amateur to see the length of time it takes one to see the entire picture in this manner, but the eye gradually becomes accustomed to the light and in one minute, as a rule, one can distinguish the entire picture. Then multiply the time by four, and that will give you the time in minutes to make your exposure. For example, if your time was one and one half minutes, your exposure should be just four times one and one half, which equals six minutes."
