ABOUT THE STATE

HAPPENINGS OF INTEREST FROM DIFFERENT SECTIONS

Peacham is conducting a campaign to secure a $5,000 academy endowment and is meeting with good success.

June 30, 1915, was the centennial of the first postoffice in Dummerston. Part of the old tavern in which the office was located still remains in use as a farmhouse.

Charles Sweet, a Fairfield farmer, was killed last Saturday by being trampled under his horses' feet in the barn at his home. He had just returned from St. Albans.

While feeding his hens Arnold Abbott of Bellows Falls dropped a $35 diamond ring among the fowls, which was immediately swallowed. He does not know which hen acquired the interior decoration.

A big force of men fought a forest fire on property belonging to Jerry Keefe on the back road to Westminister Sunday. Several acres of second growth pine were damaged. The fire is believed to have been caused by berry pickers.

James L. Packard, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Packard of White River Junction, is to receive an engraved medal from the Ralston hero commission of St. Louis, Mo., for bravery in rescuing his older brother from drowning in the White river.

Mrs. Exine Juneau, aged 58 years, died on the train at Essex Junction Tuesday morning, while en route from Worcester, Mass., to Montreal. She was traveling in a Pullman car, accompanied by her physician. Tuberculosis was the cause of her death.

Almost every day Burlington's chief of police receives word from the chief at Providence, R. I., giving notice of Ford cars which have been stolen from the latter city. According to word received in Burlington Wednesday three cars had been stolen that day.

Lewis Bills, of Newfane hill, met with a serious accident while playing baseball with the Williamsville team in Jamacia. He started to run from one base to another and turned his right ankle, breaking one bone above the ankle, and badly tearing the ligaments.

In Bennington Wednesday morning, 120 carrier pigeons were released from the American Express office, to which place they had been sent from Manchester, N. H., by John Warwick. As soon as they were released, the pigeons started rapidly in the direction of Manchester.

Lawrence A. Wilson of Boston, formerly pastor of the Congregational church at Hardwick and who was instrumental in establishing churches of that denomination in East and West Charleston, is to sail next week for Europe, to study war conditions, which he will use in lecture work.

Mrs. Mida C. Peabody, formerly of Rutland, but now in the employ of the government in Washington, was among the tourists held up a week ago in Yellowstone park. The coach in which Mrs. Peabody rode was not molested, but she was one of a party of 13 persons, one of whom was relieved of $40.

Darrow and Aiken of Putney bought a 40-acre pasture and now have several acres in strawberries, raspberries seed potatoes, cabbages, corn, pumpkins and peas, showing what can be done on abandoned land, as their venture has been highly successful. Mr. Aiken is building a two-story house on the property.

In the town of Wallingford, four miles southeast of the village, is the Wallingford ice gorge, where, even during the recent extremely hot weather, ice is in plain sight among the rocks and a fine spring of ice water flows. Last Friday, when the heat was oppressing, a party visiting the spot found the temperature not exceeding 60 degrees at any time during the day. The gorge is on the side of a mountain, where rocks tower upward for hundreds of feet.

A new system of gardens at Shelburne farms, the estate of Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, south of Burlington, has made the place a charming spot. Terraces, fountains, beautiful flowers and walks add a delightful touch to what was already a beautiful estate. A rockery is a feature of the garden, with several outlooks from which beautiful views of Lake Champlain and the Adirondack mountains may be obtained.

A New Orleans, La., paper of July 18 had the following concerning a Morrisville resident: "Orville D. Choate, 87 years old and wealthy, of Morrisville, Vt., and Mrs. Rosa A. Williams, 70, were married here after a courtship conducted by mail. They met yesterday, (July 14), for the first time." Mr. Choate who has been a resident of Morrisville for nearly a lifetime, is a pensioner and has recently been Commander of James M. Warner post. This is his fifth matrimonial venture.

Emmons Sargent, who graduated from the Stowe high school agricultural course in June, has received from Governor Gates a certificate of his appointment as delegate to the meeting of the Top Notch Farmers' club in San Francisco on August 5 and 6. The appointment is a recognition of the good work done by Mr. Sargent in his course of study, but carries with it no funds for the delegate's expenses.

Family Stranded in Burlington.

Overseer of the Poor Delaney of Burlington was called upon Thursday for assistance in an unusual case of destitution. A Mr. Miller with his wife and young child got the train that morning enroute from Bridgeport, Conn., to Montpelier. The man left his family at the station while he came up street to consult with the authorities. It appears from his story that when they started from Bridgeport, they had plenty of funds to reach their destination. The baby was taken sick on the way and they had to leave the train at a convenient station and remain there until the child got better. Medical attendance and living expenses during several days of enforced stop used all the money the man had and when he reached Burlington they could go no further. Mr. Delaney gave them food which they were in sore need of and arrangements will be made to send them to Montpelier.

WAR AFFECTS MANGANESE.

United States Output in 1913 Lower Than in 1913.

The production of manganese ores in the United States in 1914 amounted to 2,635 long tons, which was 1,413 tons less than the output of 1913, according to D. F. Hewett of the United States Geological Survey. The manganese ore shipped in 1914 was derived from mines in Virginia, South Carolina and California. The domestic output was small when compared with the imports of manganese ores, which amounted in 1913 to 345,090 long tons, and in 1914 to 283,294 long tons.

India, Russia and Brazil have been the principal countries from which manganese ore has been imported. In 1913 the largest imports were from India, amounting to 141,587 tons, and the imports from Russia were 124,337 tons. The closing of the Dardanelles and probably the scarcity of vessels for transportation from India in 1914 had the effect of reducing the imports from Russia to 52,681 tons and those from India to 103,583 tons. These decreases were partly compensated for by the increased shipments from Brazil, which were 70,200 tons in 1913 and 113,924 tons in 1914.

The output of all grades of manganiferous ores in 1914 was 445,827 long tons (mainly from the Lake Superior region), of which 60,414 tons contained more than 15 per cent of manganese and was used in the manufacture of low-grade ferromanganese and manganiferous pig iron.

As heretofore, practically all the domestic output of ferromanganese was made from imported ores, though some medium-grade ferromanganese was made from manganiferous iron ores of the Cuyuna range in Minnesota.

The largest part of the spiegeleisen was made from manganiferous zinc residuum derived from New Jersey mixed manganese and zinc ores, though for the first time since 1909 spiegeleisen was produced from the manganiferous ores of Leadville.

The price of ferromanganese was subject to considerable fluctuation during 1914 on account of the European war, and if the demand from the steel industry had been as active as in the preceding year prices likely would have been much higher than they were. For several months prior to August the price of standard 80 per cent ferromanganese was about $40 a long ton. During August prices ranged from $110 to $140 a ton, and although quotations were as low as $62 in November, the price advanced to $80 in December. If the domestic production of steel and steel products increases considerably on account of the temporary elimination of competition from European steel products, the sources of manganese supply may be abnormally taxed to meet the demand. The increased price, however, will stimulate domestic production and permit the mining of manganese ores which, under normal conditions, could not be profitably worked in competition with the higher grade foreign ores.

A Job Hunter Who Wanted a Cabinet Member to Meet Him at the Train.

In the July American Magazine a United States senator writes an exceedingly amusing article entitled "A Senator's Mail" in which he tells about the remarkable personal requests which his constituents make of him. He says that immense numbers of people write to him, asking for jobs, and among the strange letters which he publishes in the article is the following, which he received from a man who wanted a position in one of the departments:

"I want you to secure a position for me in the department of commerce and labor. Something at a salary of $3,000 a year will answer for a starter. I am qualified for any position of responsibility. I want to be in this department so that I can put some of these trusts out of business. It will be possible for me to reach Washington on the 5th of the month. As I do not know anything about Washington, have the secretary of the department find a good boarding place, and meet me at the train.

"P. S. I suppose I might board with the secretary of the department for a month or two until I get settled. I know we would both enjoy the intimate association."

It Did This Husband Good to Go Away.

In the August Woman's Home Companion appears an account of a husband who recently spent $375 in travel. From the standpoint of culture the travel probably did not do him any good, but from it he gained one thing of importance—a better appreciation of his home. Following is an extract from the article:

He and she had reached that state of mutual boredom that comes sometimes to people who have lived too close together and known each other too well. It seemed before he left as though they could not go on together, and she saw him leave without regret. But to her surprise the place seemed very lonesome after he had gone; and to his surprise he found himself roaming hotel corridors restlessly, vaguely yearning for the companionship that had so long been his life. And when at last he came home it was to discover that his home was the neatest, her cooking the finest, and she herself the most beautiful woman in the world.

"We sometimes wish that the position of 'traveling salesman' were not conferred on one man for life, but could be passed around, so that the lawyer, the doctor, and the preacher who have lived at home forever might each be separated from home at least once in a lifetime. It would add a wonderful freshness and zest to the comforts that too often become commonplace."

Health Officers' School Cost Nearly $6,000.

The cost for the state of Vermont of the annual health officers' school held here last week was between $5000 and $6000.

Each health officer attending the school received his mileage from his home town to Burlington and return, his hotel bills and $4 per day. Some checks were $35 for the four-day meeting.

The money was paid at the close of the last day's session, the treasurer of the state board, Dr. F. T. Kidder of Woodstock signing the checks.

Of the 246 health officers in Vermont, about one half are practicing physicians the remainder being selected from citizens whom the state board deems qualified to serve in the capacity of health officers.
