AN EXTRA SESSION SURE.—The President said this evening in reply to a direct question by a representative of the United Press that he intended to call an extra session of Congress not earlier than the 1st nor later than the 15th of September, unless unexpected contingencies should necessitate an earlier meeting. The President further said:

"While there has been no mystery or secrecy in regard to my intention in this matter, I think it not amiss that our people should be informed authoritatively that the time is at hand when their representatives in Congress will be called upon to deal with a financial condition which is the only menace to the country's welfare and prosperity. It is well for the people to take up the subject for themselves and arrive at their own conclusions as to the merits of a financial policy which obliges us to purchase idle silver bullion with gold taken from our reserve. One does not need the eye of a financier to see that this gold thus subtracted from the government's stock is eagerly seized by other nations for the purpose of strengthening their credit at our expense.

"It does not need the art of statesmanship to detect the danger that awaits upon the continuance of this operation. Already the timidity of capital is painfully apparent, and none of us can fail to see that fear and apprehension in monetary circles will ultimately bring suffering to every humble home in our land.

"I think that between now and the meeting of Congress much depends upon the action of those engaged in financial operations and business enterprises. Our vast national resources and credit are abundantly sufficient to justify them in the utmost faith and confidence. If instead of being frightened they are conservative, and if instead of gloomily anticipating immediate disaster they contribute their share of hope and steadiness, they will perform a patriotic duty, and at the same time protect their own interest. Things just now needed are coolness and calmness in financial circles and study and reflection among our people."—Herald.

INGALLS AND THE NEGRO.—When such a prominent man and good Republican as the Hon. John J. Ingalls recommends deportation as a cure for the negro evil it is high time that the remedy should be seriously considered. This eminent authority in a recent newspaper article shows clearly the folly of attempting to make an equal of the negro and the complete failure of the effort to make him a man and a brother. The erratic ex-Senator from Kansas seems to have given the subject a close scrutiny and certainly cannot be accused of being prejudiced against the colored race, hence his views must have weight. For years Mr. Ingalls has been a champion of the negro and one of the foremost men in the party which claims the guardianship of this "oppressed" race, and while still occupying the position of a friend of the negro he contends that the only way to give the negro happiness and to rid this country of a troublesome element is to send them back to the country which by nature they are fitted to inhabit, and whence their forefathers came. In positive language Mr. Ingalls says that the effort to elevate and educate this race has failed, that the right of suffrage was a mistake and those amendments to the constitution which were passed in the negro's favor should be repealed. —Cecil Democrat.

Mr. Ingalls was for years the leading Republican in the United States Senate and his conversion to the views he expresses can hardly be considered strange by those who have carefully watched the trend of events. It is simply the throwing off a mask and the bold enunciation of views always held but, for a time concealed, because of "what was in it."

HARRIS' STRANGE DEATH.

The New York Police Believe He Was Murdered.

Circumstances That Uphold the Theory of Murder—Others That Point to Suicide—An Inquest to Be Held at Gravesend.

According to the latest accounts from New York it now appears that the death of Edwin C. Harris, son of Benjamin G. Harris, of 609 St. Paul street, Baltimore city, whose body was found near Sturgis' Hotel, Coney Island, on the 1st instant, may have been the result of a murderous assault by some of the footpads that frequent that locality.

The theory of suicide, upon further investigation, is losing ground, and the belief that young Harris was the victim of foul play is gaining currency. The New York police have placed the young man Culbert, who was the last person who conversed with Harris prior to the discovery of his body, under arrest. Culbert stated yesterday:

"I believe that Harris was murdered, and I have formed that opinion from a cut that I have noticed over his left eye. That was, I think, the probable cause of death. The fact that a knife was found on his person proves nothing. In fact, I understand now that when the body was found the knife was seen to drop from Harris' waistcoat pocket, and not from the wound near the heart. I believe that my friend was murdered."

The autopsy will be held on the body today, under the direction of the King's county physician, Dr. Shepard. The inquest will probably be also held today, Coroner Kane having summoned a jury. The inquest will, it is thought, be continued until Monday. In the meantime the body will be detained at the Morgue at Gravesend. It has been embalmed.

John Harris, the brother of the dead man, is firmly of the opinion that he was murdered by Coney Island roughs. The fact that Mr. Harris believes in the theory of murder is the reason why the body was not sent to this city for interment.

The clerk of a Coney Island drug store remembers that a man answering the description of Harris purchased a vial of chloroform, signing the prescription blank that he was required to present, "E. Haviland, M. D." From the fact that two empty chloroform bottles were found near the spot where the body was discovered, the Coney Island police think that Harris committed suicide. The question of whether Harris was murdered or committed suicide is naturally of great concern to his family here. They are well-known Catholics, and if it should prove that it is a case of suicide Harris' body would not be allowed burial in consecrated ground. His friends in this city all think that he was the victim of foul play.

The family would not give out any statements today, being desirous of avoiding publicity. At Murray Hill, where Harris was employed, it was learned today that he had worked on Saturday last, but had not been seen since. It was said by one of the employees of the establishment that the knife found at Harris' side corresponded with one that he usually carried. It was admitted by members of the family recently that young Harris had used chloroform for medicinal purposes. Last year the dead man had a fall from a railroad car in North Carolina, and landed on his head. He is said to have been mentally weak ever since.—Friday's Baltimore News.

For a cold in the chest there is no better specific for most persons than well boiled or roasted onions. OLD MEDALS FOUND IN ROME.—According to the Popolo Romano, a treasure was lately found in digging the foundations of the new monastery of St. Anselm, which is to be built on the Aventine Hill by the monks of the Benedictine Order. Six workmen, it appears, discovered an earthen pot full of coins, as they thought, which they divided and were selling for a franc each, although they turned out to be medals of great value. The fact would have passed unnoticed, but the men quarreled among themselves, and the police, having heard of the find, succeeded in sequestrating forty out of one hundred medals in gold, and arresting the excavators, except one, who absconded with the remaining sixty medals, the value of which he had previously discovered. The medals date back to A. D. 164. They were struck by the order of the Senate and people in honor of the conquest of Armenia by Lucius Verus. There is about five dollars in the money value of each, but they have an artistic and archeological value, according to the Popolo Romano, which raises them to a far higher rate, amounting to $9,000.
