DUNNE COMPARES LOWDEN AND FORD

Latter Has Minimum of $5 Per Day as Factory Wage, While Pullman Company Pays $2.

DeKalb, Oct. 19.—Governor Dunne said in his address here today: "Some of our republican critics complain that Colonel Lowden is being attacked simply because he is rich, and others say that it is because he is a 'business man' and insure our hostility by his proposal to introduce business methods into the administration of state affairs.

"Both are wrong. Henry Ford is probably far wealthier than Colonel Lowden, and certainly a far more important business man. Yet Mr. Ford has attained the enmity of such great financial interests as are behind Lowden, because he has adopted business methods widely different from those of the Pullman company.

"The minimum wage with the Ford company is $5 a day for its 45,000 employes, and they work under modern humanitarian conditions with regard to hours and treatment.

"The 21,000 employes of the Pullman company receive an average wage of $2 a day and work 10 hours, while the Pullman porters get $27.50 a month—without board—and depend upon the public for tips to keep their families alive.

"There are many rich men in Illinois who have and deserve the confidence of the public and who are admirably fitted for public service.

"Our criticism of the candidacy of Mr. Lowden is that by reason of his associations, his sympathies and his sympathies he would devote all his energies, if elected governor, to the interests of the great financial powers that are trying to control our state government.

"This is not a campaign dream. It is a fact that there is an actual conspiracy in Chicago to kill the subway that has been long planned and is badly needed, to divert a great fund of $18,000,000 accumulated for its construction back to the traction companies and to extend the franchises of these companies.

"The present city administration of Chicago is in sympathy with this theft of the rights of the people. The election of Lowden is necessary to complete the program. Lowden is one of their kind and can be depended upon to deliver his share of the goods.

"The interests of the people of every city and village in the state are concerned. Think of what would follow if a public utilities commission were named by the public utility corporations as would surely happen in the event of Lowden's election.

"There would not only be an end to the general reduction of gas and electric light rates such as has been put into effect in 112 cities and towns by the present commission, but there would follow a literal riot of loot by the great corporate interests of Illinois.

"I think I may speak with some authority on this subject, for I had to contend with these financial wolves when as mayor of Chicago I tried to save the streets for the people.

"Is Mr. Lowden allied with these interests? Yes, if we are to believe certain prominent republican leaders and the columns of the republican and independent newspapers of Chicago.

"'His nomination was a distinct step backward toward reaction,' one of them said. 'I am not prepared to admit that Mr. Lowden is a great business man or entitled to speak as one with authority on the introduction of business methods in the state administration.'

"I do not understand that the many millions which afford Mr. Lowden so much power in the financial world were accumulated by his efforts. It has taken a long time to wrest control of the state house of Illinois from these financial interests which are so energetic and insistent for Lowden's election. It is for the welfare of the humblest citizen of this state to keep those interests from resuming control."

ARE FLOCKING TO WILSON STANDARD

Republicans and Progressives Look to President as Best Type to Head Government.

New York, Oct. 19.—President Wilson's administration of achievement is drawing to his standard republicans of prominence in all parts of the country. Among the most distinguished of these is Stephen H. Bashor, present progressive candidate for governor in Iowa.

"I am supporting President Wilson for reelection," Mr. Bashor stated in a recent speech, "and I find that 85 per cent of Iowa progressives occupy the same position. Mr. Hughes is not a progressive, either with a capital or a small 'p.' His tendencies are all reactionary. He is socially and intellectually an aristocrat. His first consideration is property, his second people. Throughout his life, he has been terribly afraid that something he might do would hurt property, but never at all afraid that he might injure humanity.

"The insurance investigation, in which he made his reputation as a lawyer, was a fight between titanic financial interests for the control of the vast resources of those companies. To get control, they had to show corruption, and, having shown corruption, they drove Hyde to Europe, McCall and McCurdy to their graves and took the property they left.

"Iowa and other states adopted a two-cent fare law, of the kind that Hughes vetoed as governor, because he said it would be confiscatory. He vetoed the five-cent car fare bill to Coney Island—the people's playground—for the same reason. Today he derides the eight-hour law.

"I favor Mr. Wilson because he is the antithesis of Mr. Hughes—because of his great work for humanity, because he has kept his people out of war, because, under him, the country has enjoyed an unprecedented era of prosperity. Why change?"

In Philadelphia, James Cozens, chairman of the executive committee of the Washington party, has come out strongly for Mr. Wilson. In a letter to Jacob H. Hoffman, relative to the latter's withdrawal as a republican candidate for election to the assembly, because of his desire to support the president, Mr. Cozens wrote:

"Your action was the only logical step to be taken by anyone who is at heart a progressive. I have been a lifelong republican, but this time I have made up my mind to join with the army of loyal American citizens who will support our great president."

From West Virginia comes the news that E. H. Hughes of St. Albans, progressive candidate for congress in 1914, is touring the state for Mr. Wilson, and that M. P. Shawkey, progressive leader of the state, has announced his support of the president and the entire democratic ticket.
