A Bunch of Pretty Girls Who Will Sing in Chorus at "A Night Out," Musical Comedy, in Elks' Theatre Tonight.

MUSICAL COMEDY IS SCHEDULED FOR ELKS' TONIGHT

Matinee Girl Opera Company Arrives at Noon: "A Night Out," Is Attraction This Evening.

The Matinee Girl Opera company arrived in Albuquerque on the noon train today and will begin three nights' run in the Elks' theatre tonight, presenting "A Night Out," a snappy, witty and refined musical comedy, written by Matthews and Ruhm. The Matinee Girls' is the title for tomorrow night and "A Stolen Corpse" is scheduled for Saturday night.

The Matinee Girl company carries 14 people and gets up a fourty horse show. The prices of admission are very moderate, 75 cents being the top.

The Las Vegas Gazette of Saturday has the following interesting news concerning the appearance there of the Matinee company:

The performance given last evening in the Opera house by the Matinee girl opera company was heard by a good-sized audience. Many people took it with the report of some of the Albuquerque musical enthusiasts again, the compliments spoken Russell and Dean were well deserved, yet it is given in their line. The chance is made of merits more and larger than to make anything a success, although the performance was good through the entirety. A number of the songs were encored and the company responded with other pieces. The show is free of the usually gross attempts at humor so common in such productions, and is clean throughout. The company is composed of good looking girls, who are good singers and quite a number of them are good dancers. The music is catchy and pretty, and the chorus work is above the average. The show is well worth the price of admission and should be seen by a good audience tomorrow night.

GREATEST ADVANCE TO WORLD PEACE IS DRAFT OF NEW TREATY

Submission to Ambassadors of England and France of Arbitration Agreement First Step in This Direction.

EVEN GERMANY WILL CONSIDER MEASURE

(Special Correspondence to Herald.)

Washington, June 8.—By the efforts of the state department, there will be a new step in the direction of world peace. The draft of an agreement between the United States and France, providing for the submission to an arbitration tribunal of differences which may arise between the United States and France, has been completed and will be submitted to the ambassadors of France and Germany.

The draft of the proposed treaty between the United States and France, which has been submitted to the state department, contains the following:

"The President of the United States of America and the President of the French Republic, being desirous of strengthening the bonds of friendship between the two nations, by the application of the principles of justice and of international law, in the maintenance of their rights and interests, and being desirous of strengthening the peace of the world, by the application of a method of arbitration, which, by reason of the impartiality and the force of moral authority with which it would be invested, would be the most efficacious means of insuring the maintenance of peace between the two nations, and of avoiding, so far as may be possible, the interruption of their friendly relations, which might result from the failure to settle by peaceful negotiation any differences which may arise between them, have resolved to conclude a treaty for the purpose of extending the application of arbitration to all differences which may hereafter arise between the two countries, to the extent and under the conditions stated in the present treaty.

"They have accordingly authorized the undersigned, duly authorized by their respective governments, who, after communication of their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles:

"Article 1. The High Contracting Parties agree that all differences which may arise between them, relative to the interpretation and application of treaties existing between the two countries, and which it may be possible to settle by diplomacy, shall be referred to the International Court of Arbitration established at The Hague by the convention of October 18, 1907, provided, however, that such agreement does not affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two countries, and does not affect the interests of a third party.

"Article 2. In each case of difference which may be referred to the International Court of Arbitration, the High Contracting Parties will conclude a special agreement to define the scope of the matter in dispute, the organization of the arbitral tribunal, the time allowed for the appointment of its members, and the procedure to be followed in the matter of the arbitration.

"Article 3. The special agreement in each case shall be made on behalf of the United States of America, by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and on behalf of the French Republic, by the President thereof, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and shall be in accordance with the provisions of the constitutions of the two countries.

"Article 4. The special agreement in each case shall define the matter in dispute, the time allowed for the appointment of arbitrators, and the procedure to be followed before the tribunal of arbitration, shall provide that the tribunal may, if the parties agree, adopt the procedure laid down in the convention of October 18, 1907, for the International Court of Arbitration, in so far as the same may be applicable, and shall provide for the notification to the signatory powers of the convention of October 18, 1907, of the agreement to submit a dispute to the International Court of Arbitration, in such a manner as may be deemed necessary by the two governments.

"The arbitral tribunal shall be composed of judges of the International Court of Arbitration, chosen from the general list of members of the court, except in so far as it may be agreed that it shall be composed of some other arbitrators or of judges chosen from some other court of arbitration established by agreement between the two countries, or by agreement between one of them and a third power, or in accordance with the provisions of the convention of October 18, 1907.

"Article 5. The decisions of the tribunal of arbitration, when it shall be composed of judges of the International Court of Arbitration, shall be rendered in accordance with the provisions of the convention of October 18, 1907, and when it shall be composed of other arbitrators, in accordance with the provisions of the convention of October 18, 1907, so far as the same may be applicable.

"Article 6. The present treaty does not exclude from arbitration questions which may be submitted to arbitration without the conclusion of a special convention, and it does not prejudice any rights other than those which affect the vital interests, the independence, or the honor of the two countries, which may be affected by a decision to submit to arbitration questions which may be the subject of a special convention.

"Article 7. The present treaty does not affect the obligations of the two countries towards other powers.

"Article 8. The present treaty shall be ratified by the President of the French Republic, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and by the President of the United States of America, by and with the advice and consent of the senate thereof, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Washington as soon as possible after the exchange of ratifications of the general arbitration treaty between the United States and France, signed at Washington on February 4, 1909, and shall take effect immediately after the exchange of ratifications. It shall be in force for five years from the date of the exchange of ratifications, and shall be renewable by tacit consent for a further period of five years, unless denounced by one of the contracting parties six months before the expiration of the said period of five years, and it shall be submitted to the senate of the French Republic and to the senate of the United States of America for their information."

The draft of the proposed treaty as the state department suggests that a commission of inquiry be established through the nations intended for the consideration of differences which may not be "internationally justiciable" that is to say, differences which may not be important enough for the tribunal to pass upon.

The power of this commission is to be that of recommendation. It is to be made up of judges to be chosen by the countries interested who are however members of The Hague tribunal. This commission may, at the request of either government, delay its findings one year to give an opportunity for diplomatic settlement.

It is the purpose of the treaty to keep the commission of inquiry going to investigate differences between the nations with the view, too, of preventing a settlement that will preclude the necessity of arbitration. The action of the commission, therefore, is not to have the effect of an arbitral award.

The really important feature of the treaty is the attempt of the arbitral move which has been made. Something of this sort has been tried before, but never before has it been made with the countries interested upon which there can negotiate. Heretofore this has not been the case. Very seldom before have two nations agreed to submit a question to arbitration without the exception of a clause providing that the question involved affects the vital interests, the independence or the honor of the two countries.
