EAVY INCREASE IN IMPORTS OF CATTLE

ports of the Department of Commerce Indicate That Our Export Business in Beef Has Had Heavy Drop.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—The ent transfer of the United States n the small list of beef-exporting ntries to the large list of beef-porting countries is sharply illus-ted by the August figures of im-ts and exports of beef and beef tle and a comparison thereof with August figures of earlier years t made by the bureau of foreign domestic commerce of the de-tment of commerce. This shows t the exports of beef and beef cat-have fallen from $14,000,000 val-in the eight months ended with gust, 1904, to practically $1,000,000 the corresponding months of 1913, d that the imports of cattle mean-e increased from 9,357 in the 8 nths of 1904 to 240,105 in the e period of 1913, and their value m $181,145 in 1904 to $5,631,842 1913. As to the beef, the import-ons in 1904 were insufficient to ify their statement month by nth, and the total value of beef ported for consumption in the full cal year 1904 was but $14,922, ile the single month of July, 1913, owed a total importation of 642,-4 pounds valued at $56,993; Au-st, a total of 1,151,626 pounds val-d at $89,264, and September about equal amount.

Even the value of the comparative-small number of cattle exported is w less per head than in earlier ars, despite the general advance in ices meantime. The average ex-rt price of the 18,069 head of cat-in the 8 months ended with Au-st, 1913, was $34, against an aver-e of $68 for the 418,885 head of tle exported in the corresponding nths of 1904. On the import side ere is a decrease of about 20 per nt in the valuation per head, the 0,105 cattle imported in the eight nths ended with August, 1913, be-g valued at $15 per head, compar-d with $19 per head for the 9,357 ttle imported in the corresponding nths of 1904. The character of e cattle imported differs, of course, dically from that of those exported, ing mostly, on the export side, rain-fed animals ready for slaugh-ring, and on the import side, grass d cattle in many cases but one or o years of age. Practically all of e cattle imported, other than those r breeding purposes, are brought om Mexico, that country having ppled, in the fiscal year 1913, 381,-27 of the 420,261 head imported for her than breeding purposes. Of e 1,588 imported for breeding pur-oses, free of duty, 945 were from ngland.

Imports of beef show remarkable ains within the very recent period. n the fiscal year 1904 the quantity f beef imported for consumption was 64,509 pounds valued at $14,922, gainst 923,378 pounds valued at 61,110 in the fiscal year 1910, and 957,708 pounds valued at $303,934 1913; while in the single months f July and August the imports ag-regated 642,394 pounds and 1,151,-26 pounds, respectively, and partial eturns indicate that the September igures will also approximate one illion pounds.

NOVEMBER FIRST SEES BIRD LAW IN EFFECT

Rigid Rules Will Be Put Into Effect for the Protection of the Migratory Birds of the United States.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17.—Following the proclamation of the president of the United States establishing regulations for the protection of migratory birds, the department of agriculture has set in motion machinery to make these regulations effective in every state on November 1, the date set for the operation of the proclamation. These regulations put under federal protection, for the first time, a large number of migratory game and insectivorous birds and thus places federal restrictions on the five million hunters of the United States. In enforcing these regulations federal authorities will cooperate with state game commissioners and other state authorities in carrying out the provisions of the law and to prevent complications in the local enforcement of the regulations.

The states have been grouped into thirteen units or districts each in charge of an inspector. Several of these positions in the west will be filled temporarily by regular experienced employes of the departmen. The work of organizing will probably begun in the middle states, the northwest, and the Pacific coast. The department expects to have the assistance of the game commission deputies in the states as well as the public generally and sportsmen in particular who are interested in the success of the new law.

Among the birds protected by the regulations are the brant, wild duck, goose, swan, stanes of various species, rail, several kinds of shore birds, pigeon, dove, wild pigeon, bobolink, catbird, chickadee, cuckoo, flicker, flycatcher, grosbeak, humming bird, kinglet, martin, meadow lark, night hawk, nuthatches, oriole, robin, shrike, swallow, swift, thrush, warbler, whippoorwill, woodpecker and wren.

The regulations for the enforcement of the law separate the country into two zones known as the breeding and wintering zones. The former comprises twenty-five states lying wholly or in part north of latitude 40 degrees and the Ohio river, and the latter comprises twenty-three states and the District of Columbia lying wholly or in part south of latitude 40 degrees and the Ohio river.

A close season has been established on the catbird, chickadee, grosbeak, humming bird, martin, meadow lark, bullfat, robin, swallow, thrush, whippoorwill, and woodpecker. The regulations contain a prohibition abolishing the hunting of all migratory, game, and insectivorous birds from sunset to sunrise. In Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, and South Carolina the close season for the reedbird extends from November 1 to August 31.

A close season until September 1, 1918 is established on such migratory game birds as the band-tailed pigeon, the little brown sandhill whooping crane, swan and curlew and on all shore birds except the black breasted and golden plover, Wilson or jack snipe, woodcock, and yellowlegs. A close season until the same date is also established on wood ducks in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Kentucky, California, Oregon, and Washington; on rails in California and Vermont; and no woodcock in Illinoi and Missouri.

A close season has been likewise put in force on all migratory Birds passing over or at rest on any of the waters of the main streams of the Mississippi river between Minneapolis and Memphis and on the Missouri river between Bismarck and Nebraska City. The killing or capture of any such birds on the shores or from any boat or floating object along these streams is prohibited.

The general open season for waterfowl in the northern zone is from September 1 to December 16 and in the southern zone from November 1 to January 16. Massachusetts has a close season on waterfowl from January 1 to September 15; New York excepting Long Island, from December 16 to September 16; Long Island, Oregon, and Washington from January 16 to October 1; New Jersey from February 1 to November 1; Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Wisconsin from December 1 to September 7; Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas from February 1 to November 1; District of Columbia, Kansas, New Mexico, and West Virginia from December 16 to September 1; Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina from February 16 to September 1; Florida, Georgia and South Carolina from February 16 to November 30; Missouri and Nevada from January 1 to September 15, and Arizona and California from February 1 to October 15.

The open season on rails, coots, and gallinules is from September 1 to December 1. Shooting is prohibited in New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Massachusets from December 1 to August 15; Connecticut, Michigan, and New York from December 1 to September 16; Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Wisconsin from December 1 to September 17; Oregon and Washington from January 16 to October 1; Tennessee and Utah from December 1 to October 1; Missouri from January 1 to September 15; Louisiana from February 1 to November 1; and Arizona and California from February 1 to October 15.

The open season for woodcock in the north is October and November, and in the south November and December. Shooting is prohibited in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and New Jersey from December 1 to October 16; Rhode Island from December 1 to November 1; Pensylvania and Long Island from December 1 to October 15; Delaware and Louisiana from January 1 to November 15; West Virginia from December 1 to October 1; and Georgia from January 1 to December 1.

The season for shore birds is September 1 to December 16. Killing of shore birds is prohibited in Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Long Island from December 1 to August 15; in New Jersey from December 1 to September 16; Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Wisconsin from December 1 to September 7; Oregon and Washington from December 1 to October 1; Florida, Georgia, and South Carolina from February 1 to November 30; Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas from February 1 to November 1; Tennessee from December 16 to October 1; Arizona and California from February 1 to October 15; and Utah from December 16 to October 1, where it is also forbidden 1, 1918.

SCIENTIFIC CALAMITY HOWLING.

(From the Cincinnati Enquirer.)

There was once a political economist named Malthus, who put forth a doctrine, at first widely accepted, that within a given time which he had calculated the earth would not produce sufficient food to feed the rapidly increasing population. When the period came to an end the people had more to eat than when he formulated his hypothesis. More recently Karl Marx, the father of Socialism, predicted that the rich would grow richer and the poor would become poorer, until a breaking stress would be reached. Events have caused the abandonment of that proposition and no reverence exists for it. Now comes Dr. J. H. Kellogg, presumably of some standing as a sociologist, to make the prediction that the last baby will be bor on this earth in 2013. Like Malthus and Marx, he appears to have promised his prophecy upon unreliable statistics and the faulty opinion of insufficient investigators. His views it will be noticed, provides the antithesis of the Malthusian idea, holding that the human race is failing to reproduce itself, whereas, the older writer believed that it was multiplying too fast. It is the height of foolishness for any man to attempt to look even a century ahead. Statistics, fully as good as Dr. Kellogg's, support the claim that men are living longer, this being due to improved conditions and better and a wider variety of food. What folly, then, to prophesy that nine centuries hence the entire human family will become extinct? It would be well for these erudite men of medicine to devote talents to producing something useful for those of the present century—say a good remedy for corns and bunions, an affliction, by the way, of which the sandal-wearing Greek and Roman happily knew nothing.

The Markets

Wall Street

The stock market closed strong. Virtually all the leading stocks moved upward swiftly today. The shorts, alarmed at their inability to provide further liquidation by raiding tactics were forced to take to cover. Indications that the short interest had assumed unwieldly proportions during the last fortnight and that the bears had too weak a following caused some of the large operators to change front and work actively for a rise.

The shorts, in their efforts to cover, were forced into competition with buyers for the long account, which soon pushed up the representative issues 1 to 2 points. Although there was no decided improvement in sentiment, the growing ease in money, encouraging news from trade centers and the strong technical position of the market were referred to as favorable to an improvement in values.

Bonds were irregular.

Closing prices on the more important stocks were as follows:

Amalgamated, 73 1-8.
Sugar, 107 1-2.
Atchison, 92 3-8.
Northern Pacific, 106 1-4.
Reading, 160 5-8.
