-your clothes are as personal as these

Somehow or other, though one classes one's tooth brush, razor or comb and brush as personal possessions, one's clothes are not so regarded.

Yet, clothes are every whit as personal and should be so made that the personality is properly brought out and developed.

The individual methods of custom tailoring so develop that personality—and the advantages thus gained cannot be over-rated.

DR. FOSSBERG BUYS IN HONDO PROJECT

Santa Fe, N. M., March 10.—Dr. E. G. Fossberg, the principal bondholder in the Santa Fe Irrigation & Improvement Co., yesterday bought in the Hondo project at a receiver's sale for $3,100, a nominal sum.

Dr. Fossberg is said to contemplate immediate resumption of construction work on the project, of which one dam is already more than half built and two others are projected.

LESS THAN THOUSAND DOLLARS DUE IN CURRY

Clovis, N. M., March 10.—The continuing prosperity of Curry county is shown by the fact that less than $1,000 of the 1915 taxes remain unpaid on the treasurer's books. Out of a total sum due of $113,000 this is considered a remarkable showing.

Over half of the $123,000 due for 1916 already has been collected, although the assessment rolls did not reach the treasurer until December, instead of the regulation date, November 1.

ONE WASHWOMAN DEAD: ANOTHER IS ARRESTED

Socorro, N. M., March 10.—Rosa Rivera, aged 21, a washerwoman at the Parvis hospital, is dead, and Gertrude Venezuela, aged 35, another washerwoman, is under arrest here following a shooting affair yesterday.

The Venezuela woman testified that a revolver on a nearby bureau fell and was discharged when some clothes on top of it were removed, the bullet striking the other woman, who was working on the opposite side of the same tub as herself.

Dr. Parvis testified at the inquest that it would be impossible for such a wounds as was inflicted to have been given in such a manner, and, further, that the Rivera woman's forehead showed powder marks. The inquest returned a verdict of accidental shooting, but the justice of the peace declined to sign the verdict and the Venezuela woman was held in jail without bail.

THE LITTLE BUG CRAWLS AROUND; HOW TO STOP HIM

Forest Service Gives Advice on Preventing Damage to Trees by Insect Pests; Box Elders Much Affected.

Local residents whose gardens are adorned by box elder trees have for years been troubled by a blackish red bug. This bug appears in large numbers during the first warm days of spring and again late in summer, and apparently delights in entering houses, crawling all over timid people, clumsily falling into crocks of milk, playing hide and seek among furniture, and other acts of aggression. Now housekeepers, when they first catch a glimpse of this harmless fellow as his army is being gathered together, sometimes think that a new, large, and ferocious bed-bug is invading their premises. But not so. The box elder bug lives for box elder trees alone, and claims no kinship with beds or bed-bugs.

This insect is found from coast to coast wherever the box elder is found. Originally it was restricted to Missouri and a few neighboring states, but in the course of the past thirty years it has migrated so rapidly that it is now abundant in every state west of the Mississippi river.

Life History of the Pest.

During the winter the bugs hide in sheltered nooks and corners, especially in the crevices of stone walls, beneath pavements, under rocks and boards, and in other places that afford shelter from the cold. Whenever the weather becomes warm, they appear singly or in clusters. When spring has really arrived, they leave these shelters and crawl or fly to the box elders, and occasionally the ash trees nearby.

From the time of their scattering in the spring until the re-appearance of large numbers of them early in the fall, they are much less conspicuous and are not likely to be noticed except upon careful search. It is at this time, however, that their eggs are laid on the buds and smaller twigs and that the numerous young are hatching and beginning their work on the trees. Late in the summer, bugs of all sizes and in various stages of development congregate in large numbers on the larger branches, on the trunks, and around the base of the trees. The insects crawl and fly around in large numbers until late in the fall, when they hibernate again for the winter.

The growing insects suck the sap from the smaller twigs and occasionally, work at the base of the buds, but fortunately, the damage to the trees attacked is not very serious. It is their habit of entering houses and congregating on pavements, porches, etc., which make them so objectionable.

Control of the Pest.

It is after the insects have all migrated to the trees in the spring that it is possible to destroy them. As long as they are scattered everywhere in the grass, on buildings, etc., it is futile to attempt to exterminate them. There is only one effective remedy, and that is to spray the infested box elders and ash trees late in the spring with kerosene emulsion. This material can be bought locally with directions for proper dilution. The spraying should be done as soon as possible after the insects have migrated to the trees.

Due to the fact that the insects can fly and crawl considerable distances, an organized spraying campaign, similar to that now started to prevent our cottonwoods from bearing cotton, is a necessity if the insect is to be exterminated, especially on those streets where box elders are abundant. Good spraying apparatus is expensive, but if the work is done cooperatively on a large scale, the cost per individual tree will be very low, and the efficiency of the work much greater. Extermination of this pest is perfectly possible, but only through organized effort. The work of a single individual will be wasted if his neighbors do not cooperate.

Deer Cost $50 and Costs.

Santa Fe, N. M., March 10.—The state game warden's office yesterday was notified that a justice of the peace for Lincoln county had fined J. F. Christenburg $50 and costs for killing a deer out of season.
