The Markets

New York Stock Exchange.

New York, Aug. 24.—Realizing sales, based mainly on the continued uncertainty connected with the railway labor situation, caused further variable recessions in today's hesitant market, coppers alone showing a better tendency. The close was irregular.

New York, Aug. 24.—The noteworthy feature of the forenoon, apart from its alternate advances and declines, was the marked cessation of activity, dealings diminishing to almost 50 per cent in comparison with the heavy turnover of the two preceding sessions. Rallies of the first hour gave way to fresh selling, which stiffened a factor, while rails fell under yesterday's final prices. Heaviness was shown by marine, preferred and some of the obscure industrials and specialties, but this was neutralized by strength in sugars and coppers, inspiration scoring the new record of 52½. Bonds were steady.

New York, Aug. 24.—(1:40 p. m.) Steels decline to 97 with corresponding reversals in other industrials, uncovered the reactionary trend of the early afternoon. Sugars also receded but coppers were relatively firm.

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 24.—By the will of the late General J. C. G. Lee, retired, an estate valued at about $100,000 is left to his widow and two daughters, Katherine and Mrs. Lillian L. Mills. The estate includes $10,000 in bonds and real estate in Jamestown, N. D., Ellensburg, Wash., and San Antonio, and stocks in banks in Los Angeles and mercantile concerns in Duluth and Portland, Ore. A collection of Indian baskets and rugs is said to be one of the fairest possibly owned in America is bequeathed in equal shares to the widow and eldest daughter, Mrs. Mills.

DULLNESS IS STILL NOTICEABLE IN THE BOSTON WOOL MART

Majority of Houses Report Business of Very Moderate Proportions During the Week; Rather More Inquiry Reported.

Boston, Aug. 24.—The majority of houses in the local wool market report business of very moderate proportions again this week. Two or three houses, however, have had a very fair trade, principally for foreign wools. There is rather more inquiry reported in the trade than was true a week ago, the newer interest starting the last part of last week. Nevertheless, the market must still be described as quiet, on the whole.

There is no long wool in the market that can be had at any sacrifice. It is still true that some of the poorer stocks of delaines wools are somewhat irregular, but the majority of holders believe in the fundamental soundness of the market and are in no hurry to sell their wools unless they get practically what they ask for them. When it comes to really staple wools there is no tendency whatever to really shade prices.

One of the mills have been showing interest in securing staple wools from the new territory clip and one operator is credited with having taken some 6,000 bags of the best staple half-blood to fine wools, altogether thus far these operations extending over a period of several weeks. How far this statement is true is a matter of speculation.

The Foreign Situation—Interest at the moment is somewhat of a standstill in the foreign markets. Most interest, so far as this market is concerned, is for probably in the coming South American clip. It is reported that contractors of the new clip have been going on now for several weeks and that a considerable quantity of wool has already been contracted on the sheep's back in both Argentina and Uruguay at prices which are on a level relatively with current quotations here, that is to say, the prices being paid there would no more than show a moderate profit here if the wool could be sold on the level of current quotations. It is rumored that some five or six thousand bales of wool have been contracted for in Montevideo account in Argentine and possibly half as much in Uruguay. It goes on to the condition of the clip as carried, some advices being to the effect that the clip is this year more nearly well ready than usual, while others state that the clip is in good condition as a general thing.

The situation in Bradford is without material change from that existing a week ago. Prices on both crossbreeds and merinos are steady and especially so on the better class of yarns and wool. The trade is still interested because of the government purchase scheme and it seems quite unlikely that the plan can be worked out to the satisfaction of even a considerable majority, and all the more because there is a serious questioning as to the real value of the scheme over a more natural method of handling the new English clip.

The rumors spread about that the English government has been seriously considering taking the London annual wool auctions under its direction in a manner similar to that by which it is proposed to handle the Empire clip, have also been causing no little comment and apprehension. The next London sales commence on September 5.

The Embargo Undercurrent—Official communications have now given the American trade documentary evidence to show that the war trade department of Great Britain is using the embargo for something more than the mere protection of Great Britain's current needs of woolen cloth and for those of her allies. It had been suspected by some persons hitherto that the "marking and blocking" which was latterly seen in evidence in the manipulation of the British embargo was hardly as important on the face of it as the underwritten, which it was designed more to cover. It now appears from this latest official information that great Britain intends to hold on to all the wool she can, in view of an early opening of the market English manufacturers might be caught napping, and in the close of the war be handicapped by the necessity of buying higher priced wools than competing nations. It is expressly stated in the communication in which reference is made above that the government may allow some shipments, to a limited extent and only if not needed at home, to the smaller neutral markets, of which the war trade department has less apprehension than of the United States.

Domestic Wool

Transfers of domestic wool have been of only fair proportions, and have been confined largely to scattered lots and odd wools. Fleeces have been rather neglected although there seems to have been rather some inquiry concerning them.

Ohio Fleece—There is one sale of a fair sized lot of Ohio fine combing—50,000 pounds—reported sold this week at 41 cents. Elsewhere the market has been rather dull. Some inquiry has been reported for delaine and the prospects are that the market for this class of wool will be widened during the coming year because of the probability that Australian wools will not be quite as plentiful to obtain. The general quotation is 46 cents, although this is not easily obtained, while on the other hand, 44 cents would hardly buy any.

Michigan Fleece—There has been a slack demand for Michigan fleeces, holders almost invariably demanding more than mill buyers think they can afford to pay, three-eighths being quoted at 41@42c and quarter-blood at 42 cents for choice wools. For Ohio unwashed of the best type, 31 cents is asked.

There has been one sale of quarter-blood combing wool reported this week at 43½ cents. Some half-blood pulled wool is also reported sold at a clean cost of 40 cents towards 40 cents.

Missouri Braid—The market for Missouri and similar braid wools has also been quiet. For quarter and three-eighths strains 40 and 41 cents is asked for the respective grades.

Pulled Wool—The demand for pulled wools has for everything very fine been good and prices are firm, steady at close, 55 cents in the grease for extra is quoted.

There has been some business done in Australian wools this week, mostly for wools of the French combing order, or fine combing qualities for which the demand is reported strong at 60 cents and up. Some fairly good combing wool was sold on a 50 cent basis. In addition to the many of these small lots which have
