BRITISH UNIONISTS SUCCESSFUL WHERE OTHERS HAD FAILED

They Have Succeeded in Getting a Statement of Allied War Aims from Two Leading Powers; All Eyes Turn Toward Germany.

By Associated Press.

London, Jan. 10.—Where other sources had failed, the British labor unions have succeeded in obtaining a statement of allied war aims. Two of the leading powers of the entente alliance in the world war have placed their cards on the table face up, and in this country it is thought that it remains for their opponents to do the same or find themselves handicapped in the eyes of the world by a charge of political cowardice or dishonesty.

The British workingmen asked their prime ministers to tell the nation precisely for what objects its manhood is suffering a daily toll of casualties exceeding more than a thousand men killed or wounded. Premier Lloyd George replied with a statement which fulfilled all their expectations in point of clearness and detail. President Wilson has seconded the British premier with an exposition of American war aims which it is asserted leaves only a few loopholes for criticism of vagueness and coupled with it a challenge to the central powers to make an honest plain reply.

The president's message is regarded here as a bitter and perhaps decisive reinforcement to "the diplomacy of defeat," a form of reaction which many publicists have been asking for as secondary only to a small measure in importance to the welfare of arms. The liberals of London—Britain have welcomed it with almost wholehearted approval as a platform to which they can rally collectively, while the conservatives naturally find cavilling for some discussion in details to the president's program for making the world safe for democracy.

Wilson's Speech Endorsed.

The labor party today gave unusual endorsement to the president's portrayal of the American war aims without reservations.

The editorials in the liberal papers and interviews with liberal, labor and socialistic public men were of the same tenor.

The only general note of a skeptical and discord was sounded by President Wilson's proposal for "freedom of the seas." The people of the civilization of the world whose power and safety rests almost wholly on her sea strength are not prepared to give away one of the strongest weapons in her armory without knowing exactly what they would lose or gain by doing so.

The old system of blockade practiced by America in the Civil War and the seizure of private property at sea has been one of the strongest war assets since the days of the Napoleonic wars. The liberal papers say that this could not be abandoned except under a system of a league of nations which would prevent wars, and few persons here are yet convinced that the league of nations plan is really a practical possibility.

The one point in the president's address which the liberals approve with the greatest enthusiasm is the president's sympathetic attitude toward Russia, a neighbor to whom the British diplomacy has been too slow and cold sympathetic toward the present Russian regime has warmed greatly since Lenine and Trotsky rejected the German terms. It is apparently the general belief here is that the Bolshevik no more represented the Russian people than the I. W. W. could claim to represent the United States.

Germany's Next Move.

All eyes are now turned towards Germany. The newspaper reports talk of acute political strife between the junkers and the junkers who stand in the forefront of the imperialistic class and the parties which may still support the Hohenzollern dynasty for a decree peace without annexations.

Some of the papers say that the Germans are only "shamming dead" and that their successes in Russia have rekindled their old ambition for the domination of Europe. The question is being asked everywhere: "Will the censorship permit the German people to read President Wilson's message?"

It is our expectation to hope that the present chaos of Russia the president's words can reach the ears of all the Russian people.

WAR CHIEFS ARE NOT RUNNING AROUND IN CIRCLES, SAYS CARR

They Are Doing Things at Washington, He Tells Rotarians in Giving Impressions Formed on a Recent Visit.

Capt. Clark Carr who recently returned from Washington, was the guest of honor at the Rotary club luncheon today and told the Rotarians something of the impressions of war activities he received at the capital. The men at work on war tasks, he said, were not running around in circles. They were doing things. The war had not been really felt here yet, the captain said.

While in Washington Capt. Carr met the secretary of War through a friend.

Capt. Carr urged Bain work in support of the chamber of commerce. He predicted a period of great prosperity for Albuquerque and the southwest.

W. F. Kramer of Kansas City, a member of the federal board of vocational education whose search is agricultural, outlined the development of government efforts to establish vocational training throughout the country.

He suggested that there was an excellent field in this city for continuation schools to which young people at work are taught the vocation they are in or can find appeals in them.

Mr. Kramer is here in the interest of plans to make vocational work part of the high school work. He attended a conference at Santa Fe recently and will visit other cities in New Mexico before leaving the state.

City Manager Paul Bellington, who is president of the club, spoke of the proposed ordinances to make soda fountains and soaring mirror theaters more sanitary. Until there was real control of the public health situation he said, no money would be effective. A health officer with board of health was needed, he said.

In addition to Capt. Carr and Mr. Kramer, guests of the club included Earl Mullton of Chicago, C. M. Foster of this city, W. S. Hawkins of Las Vegas, D. W. Moran of Las Cruces, W. R. Buchanan of Silver City, H. P. Jones of El Paso, Nathan Jaffa of Roswell, Dr. Oliver Byrd of St. Joseph's hospital, and R. H. Anderson of this city.

It was announced today that President Redington had been appointed state chairman on national community entertainment work by the district director of the thirteenth Rotary district, who is acting under the Cootick committee. He is to act in an advisory capacity with Mrs. K. V. Holcombe, field director who is expected to come to this state soon. Mr. Redington telegraphed his acceptance of the appointment this morning soon after receiving a telegram offering it.

The Menu for Today

"IF"—"The Seven Deaths" and "The Circus of Life," a five reel picture.

Lyric—"Lady Winslow" and a Mutt and Jeff comedy.

"Life's Whirlpool," the Metro wonderplay starring Ethel Barrymore which will be seen for the last time at the Lyric theater today afternoon and evening, is an "effectiveness" production. It was written and directed by the author of the Broadway Laurel Barrymore, the star being his sister, and its exterior scenes were photographed at the home of the star.

Miss Barrymore has a beautiful country home at Tenley Point, near Massapequa, N. Y. The grounds and house are most appropriate for the settings called for by the scenario of "the wonder role and Lionel Barrymore requested his sister to allow her house to be used as the background. This beautiful home has never before been seen on the screen, and those minds of its admirers everywhere will be interested to see Ethel Barrymore's home as shown on the screen. The star very generously entertained the company while the picture was being produced at Massapequa.

Both the director and his staff have made every effort to produce a wonderplay equally at the talents of both.

Besides the above, Manager Calvert is exhibiting "Mutt and Jeff," the popular cartoon comedy.

Pastime—"Bab's Matinee Idol" and a two-reel comedy, "Reckless Romeo."

One of the few "stunts" that remained to be accomplished by clever Marguerite Clark, was added to her list recently at the studios where she was rehearsing "Bab's Matinee Idol" under the direction of J. Searle Dawley.

This was the breaking of all "quick change artist" records in the changing of her entire costume within a space of two and a half minutes. When poked about this Miss Clark replied that it was one of the accomplishments she had learned at boarding school when the "rising bell" and the breakfast bell seemed to follow so closely upon the heels of each other and she had become expert of the art. "Besides," laughed the little star, "it was in keeping with the role for I'm sure that was one of Bab's stunts.

"Bab's Matinee Idol" is to appear today and tomorrow at the Pastime theater.

YAQUI INDIAN LAW IS TROUBLEMAKER OF N. W. MEXICO, CLAIM

Revolt in Sonora Caused by Statute Which Has Been in Existence for Generations; Have Been on Warpath 15 Years.

By Associated Press.

Hermosillo, Sonora, Mexico, Jan. 10.—The Yaqui Indian has been the trouble maker of northwestern Mexico for generations and his recent outbreak is but one of a large number which have occurred during the administrations of Diaz, Madero and other leaders.

Starting with the treacherous Yaquis along the Rio Yaqui in southwestern Sonora early in September, the revolt has spread to many of the allied tribes, including the Mayos, Yaqui who have been peaceful in the past and who derive their names from the old Mayo rivers with their kinsfolk.

In the Rio Yaqui river valley of southwestern Sonora, the Indian uprising was had its center. The tribes of Potam, Vacoma, Bacum, Cocorit, Colorado and Sinaqui Bivacis, have been scenes of extreme Indian raids and Mexican federal troops have been unable to cope with great numbers in repulsing these warriors. Within the past month reached its height when the fall harvests of corn, beans and garbanzo had been harvested. Storehouses where these crops were put away for the winter were looted and the Indians extended their field of operations far into the south toward Hermosillo, the capital. Ammunition and rifles were smuggled across the Sonora border for them and a number of engagements of high importance between the Yaquis and the federals resulted in the routing of the government troops.

The basic cause of the unrest among these northwestern Mexico Indians is the land problem. At one time these Indians owned and tilled thousands of acres of the most fertile land in the republic which was watered by the Yaqui river. These lands were gradually confiscated by the various governments and parceled out to favorites of the ruling powers. The Indians claim they were given inferior lands in place of their original holdings and insist upon the restoration of these tribal holdings. One American company now controls 200,000 acres of land in the Yaqui country, much of which is claimed by the Indians.

The Yaqui tribes were originally noted as people with a best for hunting in the mountains during the winter. They are stocky, sturdy and possess many of the traits of the American Indian. Fighting has lately been one of their chief occupations as they have been on the warpath either in their own interest or for the various de facto governments for 15 years.

During the days of President Diaz the Yaquis were dispossessed of much of their fertile valley lands by General Torres, the federal governor of Sonora. Large numbers were deported from the state to work in the hot lands of Yucatan and to Tres Marias Island, off the coast of Tepic. This was one of the chief grievances which caused the Yaqui war. The war continued until the outbreak of the Madero revolution when the Indians joined with Madero against their secular enemies of the old federal regime.

They did much of the hard fighting during the Madero and subsequent revolutions, especially at Celaya where they were General Obregon's chief reliance when Villa and his powerful army attacked the entrenched positions of Obregon's Carranza force. The Yaquis were given much of the credit for this victory which shattered Villa's dream of political power and drove him back to the border. As Aqua Prieta Sonora, the Yaquis again aided in defeating Villa and causing him to revert to his guerrilla campaign which included the South Texas and Columbus, N. M., massacre.

General Plutarco Elias Calles has undertaken a "hundred day" campaign against the Yaqui Indians in Sonora to suppress the present uprisings. He has entered the peaceful Yaqui villages in concentrating camps and has ordered all chiefs hunted down and killed. Wholesale deportations to the hot lands of Mexico have also been threatened.

The Yaquis are divided into two classes. One is the "Broncho Yaqui" which includes the "Chiefs of the fighters and the warriors of the tribesmen. The other class includes the "mansos" or peaceful Indians.

Numbers of attempts have been made to convert these Indians to peaceful ways. President Madero had a commission of Indians visit him in Mexico City. Later he sent a commission to treat with the tribal leaders. But the Indians claimed they were not given back their promised lands and were soon on the warpath. The present uprising is said by officials of the government to be the most threatening since the days of Diaz.

Chicago Board of Trade.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Prospects of some powerful demonstration of force in the wheat market tended to keep down the corn market. Business was light throughout. Opening prices were raised from the same to a cent and a half advance with January at $1.27 and May at $1.27½ to $1.27¾ were followed by a slight fall thereafter.

Subsequent gains were not to speak of, pronounced selling pressure and no further set backs to speak of took hold, with January at $1.27½ and May at $1.24⅞ to $1.25.

Oats displayed little independent strength, increased arrivals of hogs weakened provisions.

Later a sharp rally took place owing to the peace developments.
