Chicago Board of Trade

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Wheat showed an advance in price today at the outset, helped by an unexpected uptorch in quotations at Liverpool. The news that Europeans bought more wheat yesterday from this side of the Atlantic than was at first reported had a further stimulating influence. Moderate delivery of wheat appeared to be more in demand than July and the price difference between the two months widened to 15c, the greatest inequality so far. Opening a shade higher, with May at $1.18@1.18½ and July at $1.04@1.04½, wheat soon afterward ran up to $1.19½ and July to $1.04¾, but fell back somewhat in the second hour. Corn and oats prices were strengthened by the upward tendency of the wheat market. After opening unchanged to a shade higher, May 53¾@53⅞c, corn held close to the initial range.

Oats started unchanged, May 29 and later showed but little variation.

Provisions declined in line with hog values.

Substantially owners selling to realize profits brought about a setback in wheat prices, but only of a temporary sort. The close was unsettled at 1c net higher.

Country offerings of corn to arrive were light. The close was firm, ⅛@¼c net higher.

Close:

Wheat—May $1.19⅝; July $1.05⅝.

HOME BREW, HOOTCH AND MOONSHINE

"For the Wife and Kids"

"The wife and kiddies" plea has crept into the courts, trying bootleggers. The excuse offered by a bootlegger in a New York court, when he was answering the charge of having violated the law by disposing of alcohol, was that he could not find work. At his wife was sick and his youngsters needed food he turned to liquor dispensing as an easy and quick way of securing money. The judge, before whom he was tried, withdrew the fine that had been imposed and offered his services in finding a reliable job.

Oh Boy! A Whiskey Well.

Some people are born lucky and others merely live in Knoxville, Tenn. The prohibition enforcement officers in their search around that city found a "well" of whiskey in a residential section. The "well" was a copper container, which held three hundred to four hundred gallons of whiskey, and was buried ten feet under ground. A pump brought it to the surface and the owner of the "well" supplied his customers at all hours for as large a quantity of moonshine as they wished. The outfit was confiscated and many would-be purchasers of whiskey were forced to explain the object of their visit to the premises, before the court of the confiscation became public property.

After "Booze Clubs"

A special drive has begun against "booze clubs" that have sprung up in many cities since prohibition. These clubs are organized to make an extra dollar, under the guise of business. The business men drop into them on their way home at night to have a friendly drink before dinner.

What Judge Would Do

When judge Long of Boston refused to find James F. McLean guilty of keeping and exposing liquor for sale, although a still was discovered in his home, he explained that he was encouraging the prosecutor to encourage the making of moonshine. The judge further said: "In Boston are many men, some of whom are waiting, who are assisted by their wives in the manufacture of moonshine. I venture to say that some of our prominent citizens, who have their own little stills, might be hiding in the bushes when the police arrive to seize the illegal apparatus. If I had one I should probably have done the same."

Bootlegger vs. Millionaire

Frank A. Vanderlip, the well known New York banker, recently tried to clean up the village of Sparta and to do so bought up the entire village, paying large prices for some of the property. The objectionable establishments were requested to find another place to live in, while the law abiding were invited to remain. A former saloonkeeper, who sold his real estate at a high price, left the village for fear that he has learned and has opened a "soft drink" emporium, where hard liquor can be secured. Before he sold his property the saloonkeeper had been arrested on the charge of selling liquor illegally.

Killed by Cider Fumes

The largest cider vat in New Haven, Conn., needed cleaning and three men were engaged for the work. The staging on which they stood broke and they were precipitated into the vat. Two of them were rescued promptly but the third died from inhaling the fumes before he could be taken from the vat.

WHAT STATE IS THIS?

Study the picture below with care and you will be able to have the answer before it appears in tomorrow's Herald.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER:
MINE — E + NEST — T + POT — P + A — MINNESOTA

NEW, TRUE AND NO LOVE

$48 per, Love's Stipend

A class referendum taken at Goucher College, Baltimore, shows the girl seniors of that institution think a young couple can safely wed if the man is assured an income of $48 a week. Few of them thought it necessary to have an income of more than $4,000, and only one indicated the man of her choice should show earnings of $5,000 a year. One young miss set her limit at $850, without a child, and at $1,000, with one child.

Wives Easy to Get

An American mining engineer, visiting in England, decided he wanted to take an English woman to wife. He appealed to the mayor of Falkirne to help him. The mayor published his plea and several thousand answers were received. One widow wrote that she did not think much of married life. Last her former experience, but that she was willing to take a chance with an American. The replies were not confined to the women of Falkirne but came from all parts of England.

Shunned Love

Four brothers started a small farm at Roosville, Staten Island, N. Y., more than half a century ago and prospered in their endeavors. They decided that bringing a wife or wives into the home would cause dissension and made a pact not to marry. This pact has been kept and only one of the brothers, Andrew Imdie of Westfield, Staten Island, now lies the four score mark, survives. Jesse Imdie died recently. Isaac Imdie died a few years ago and William was killed by a trolley car a year ago. They were all well known librarians on Staten Island and Andrew, who inherited the property of his brothers, is the only one of the family remaining.

Murderous Love

Sarah Kline, 23 years old, a Brooklyn girl, claimed to give her family the advantage of being in a free country. She wanted to postpone her marriage to Nathan Silas until she could earn enough money to bribe her relatives over from Russia. This did not meet with Hag's desires and he issued an ultimatum that she must marry him at once. When she refused he shot and killed her and turned the revolver on himself, inflicting a serious wound, from which the chances are he can not recover.

Love's Target

Because her husband, Charles E. V. Lens, broker and oil promoter of West Islip, Long Island, New York, threw big bouquets at her and frowned them with the matter on which the first resented, Mrs. Jane D. Lens asked the court to award her alimony of $100 a week and counsel fees of $2,000, in her separation suit. The court awarded her $50 a week alimony and counsel fee of $500. Lens makes a sweeping denial of the charges against him and claims that his wife took his money out from in front of a New York City hotel one evening, and drove away in it leaving him "flat."

Mr. Laws to Blame

Paolo and Francesca were two fabled lovers of whom Dante wrote centuries ago. They were made famous by the action of an "in-law," to-wit, Paolo's brother, who happened to be the husband of the fair Francesca. All of which was to the fact that Francesca Paolo Franceschi, of Passaic, N. J., reverses the situation a little and blames "in-laws" for his marital troubles, but the "in-law" in chance are his wife's sister and her mother. He claims his wife continually longed for the presence of her mother and her sister, but that when they came into his home constant quarrels and bickering resulted.

Dodging Alimony

Mrs. Harriet Loeffler has brought suit against her husband, from whom she has secured a decree of separation, asking that he be forced to give security for the payment of the alimony awarded her by the court. She further brings out in the name of her 12-month old son for libel, alleging a reflection has been made on his legitimacy by his father. George H. Loeffler, her husband, is 20 years old. He is the son of a wealthy builder and will be given control of a large fortune when he comes of age. The statement is made in the suit that he has threatened to give all his money to his mother to dodge the payment of alimony.

No Proper Love

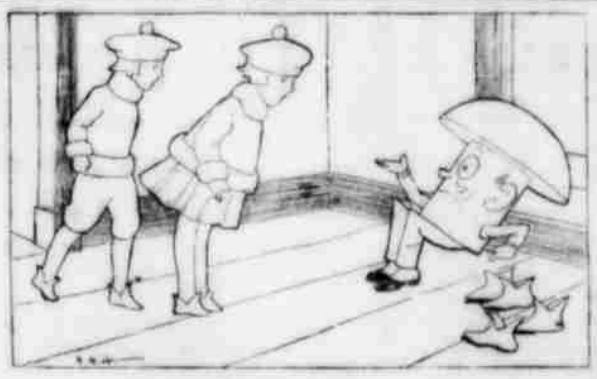
Anthony Erbe of Mineola, Long Island, N. Y., declared in his will that his wife did not show him the proper love and affection and that four of his children were unfaithful. As a result he left his widow $1, and three of his sons $1 each as their share of his estate, which amounts to less than $2,000.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Runaway Feathers

STORY NUMBER 662

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON



The Green Shoes

When do you think Nancy and Nick found when they reached the little house?

"The Green Shoes!" Yes, there they were, and beside them, smiling out of his funny new little eyes was the magical Mushroom.

"I thought I'd feel you a bit this time," he said. "I wondered if you had enough perseverance to climb when you didn't find the shoes on the ground."

"You're ever so nice, Mr. Mushroom," said Nancy. "We're allowed to climb now, since Daddy nailed the house all nice and tight and put in some new boards. When we told him that it wasn't a house at all but a longitudinal elevator that went up into the sky among the clouds and even up to the stars sometimes, he said he thought he'd better stop the leaks or we might fall through."

"Where are you going now?" asked the Mushroom.

Hopkins said that some day he would take us to the "Land of Runaway Feathers," answered Nick. "And we hoped he would pick today."

"All right," said a cheery voice close by, and suddenly Hopkins appeared from nowhere at all. "I'm ready. Will we come along, Mr. Mushroom?"

The Mushroom said he'd be glad to, having a few minutes to spare before the Fairy Queen's week.

Hopkins moved the iron handle and when all four were being lifted into the wonderful realm called the "Land of Upside-Down-Air."

They passed the "Land of Lost Balloons" and the "Land of Lost Kites," like the second and third floors in a department store. Then they passed "Soap Bubble Land" and the "Land of Everything." At floor No. 4, you might say they stopped and got out.

"Here we are," said Hopkins. "Welcome to the Land of Runaway Feathers. Here comes Mr. Crampfog right now. I told him to expect us."
