AMUSEMENTS.

That Boy Tonight.

The coming of the ever funny farce-comedy "Peck's Bad Boy" at the Opera house Thursday, October 6, will delight every small boy, for there is nothing short of a circus that will make the eyes of the small boy sparkle with delight as quickly as a sight of the flaming posters along the walls announcing the coming of "Peck's Bad Boy." But not only does the small boy enjoy it but adults as well, for it carries them back to days of long ago and for the time they forget all cares and become themselves back to their boyhood days. The play is full of bright and sparkling specialties, catchy music, combined with the pranks of the bad boy, make it one of the most entertaining of plays.

"Why Girls Leave Home."

Manager D. T. Williamson will present on Saturday, October 8, for a matinee and night, at the Cairo Opera house, for an engagement of "Why Girls Leave Home," which was one of the pronounced successes of last season. The play is one that goes with a ring and a swing that make the audience resound with laughter and applause, yet at times it causes a nerve-racking.

The story, one of frailty of the weaker sex and manly perfidy, is told according to the adage that "Truth is stranger than fiction." The author has drawn from the facts of one of the most sensational tragedies in recent years, in which a brother was accused of killing his sister because of her willfulness. It is told with remarkable fidelity to details and incidents, in a plain, everyday manner, devoid of claptrap, mawkish sentiment or morbid sensationalism.

Hanford Coming.

Mr. Charles B. Hanford, who has always been an enthusiast in the matter of stage properties, has made an especial study of the costuming of Don Caesar de Bazan, which he will present at the Cairo Opera house on Tuesday, October 18. The little touches of detail have been minutely watched with the keen delight of an enthusiast, and in the presentation of the play the costuming will reflect the spirit of the times in which the characters are cast as accurately as does the dialogue.

Musical Treat.

The programs arranged by Mr. Ellery for the concerts of his great Italian band are made up almost entirely of classical and grand operatic music. It has been the custom of nearly all band managers and leaders to yield to what they regarded as the popular taste in music, with the result that little by little the appetite of the public has become accustomed to music which may be termed trashy. That American audiences have come thus vitiated is largely the fault of those whose business it is to entertain them, but Mr. Ellery considers that the best music, if properly interpreted and ably executed will find more admirers than music of an inferior quality. He claims that to appreciate the finest music, at least in a measure, it is not necessary for a person to be profoundly instructed in the art. Music, he says, is really the voice or the language of the soul and when played with sincere feeling, it is sure to find response in the hearts of all men and women worthy the name of human beings. The feeling for good music, once excited by hearing it, the understanding follows quickly and after a short course of really fine musical entertainments people come not only to love, but also to comprehend the best that can be offered them. This band will play at the Cairo Opera house for matinee and night on Tuesday, October 25.

DISH SMASHERS

MUST PAY FOR CHINAWARE—RESTAURANT MAN TELLS HIS TROUBLES TO BULLETIN REPORTER.

"Yes, we are compelled to charge our help for broken dishes and the like when it is due to carelessness," said a Cairo restaurant man yesterday as he emerged from the kitchen where he went in response to a terrific crash caused by falling chinaware. "If we didn't make our help pay for breakage the house would go bankrupt," he continued, "and there wouldn't be enough dishes in the place in a month to feed half a dozen people."

"A person who has had experience in the restaurant business has no idea of the loss in broken dishes," he said, "and the cost to Cairo restaurant keepers of replenishing them amounts to hundreds of dollars every year. It seems a hard rule to enforce, but it must be done in self-defense. Any amount of cautioning will not prevent waiters from overloading trays and frequently they drop and break a large number of dishes only a day or two after receiving a week's pay when the amount due them is not sufficient to cover the loss.

"There are many other things in the restaurant and hotel business which prevent it from being alone one of profit and pleasure. The person who will invent a contrivance for fastening towels, soap, combs, brushes, etc., so they cannot be removed from rooms will reap a fortune. The loss in this way cannot be fully appreciated by others than those who pay the bills.

"A few years ago it became a fad among theatrical people to collect door keys and the hotel people suffered as a result. The followers of this key-collecting mania sometimes carried dozens of the stolen keys in their trunks and took pride in exhibiting them to their friends. Most of the keys doubtless reminded them of some incident which occurred in the town where the company played and if they could talk might tell some interesting bits of gossip.

"With a 'Careful there, boy, you haven't enough coming to you to pay for that tray of dishes if you drop them,' the restaurant man turned his attention to the waiter that had just spilled a cup of hot coffee in the lap of one of the dignified guests.

CAIRO "POTE"

H. H. HALLIDAY TELLS OF HIS EXPERIENCES AT MEETING OF BOXMAKERS IN CLEVELAND.

The following is taken from "Packages," a boxmakers' journal, and relates to the national meeting of Box and Box Shook manufacturers:

H. H. Halliday, the official "pote" of the box making industry, being approached by Packages for some poetic expression of his experiences at the Cleveland meeting, kindly responded by lightly tossing off the following. Mr. Halliday stated that he did not have quite enough "highballs" at Cleveland to get his muse in the best working order, but that she is feeling pretty vigorous, after all, we think our readers will agree. He writes:

ON THE CLEVELAND MEETING.

Again in Chicago, the Indians met,
Bound for Cleveland, Stephen's whistle we wet.
Moore, as usual, had arranged the trip
Short-changed us on tickets and bought him a grip.
His kodak lex was all he took,
Enclosed, very neatly in a cottonwood shook;
But in Stephen's office, his plans he disclosed,
Touched each for a "twenty," and bought him some clothes.

Carey and Jarboe were there, in all grace;
The dago, dressed up in his wrinkled face.
His wife, remembering our Boston week,
Had removed from his grip the box of Cremo's,
And on his hat, in a bold round hand,
Had painted the sign, "This is a Married Man."
Having, in mind the trip before,
The midnight telegrams, pushed under his door.

Mastery, the president, started a day ahead,
"Old Age" claim the gang, putting him early to bed,
And on to Cleveland, sober and straight,
Cut out the "Indians," on account of their gait.
Too bad, "Old Man," we're sorry for you,
That the pace was too rapid, or the drinks, too few.
But, after your official career is ended,
We hope with the gang, your "jalopa" will be blended;
So brace up, dear Beanie, get a new lease of life,
Get into the wagon, full of strenuous strife.

Charlie's aunt, at the concert, her cup full of woe,
Could have been much relieved, by Christ "miser of dough!"
But Defelsaugh told her, with his round fat face,
That it was neither the hour, nor the time, nor the place
To roast the boxmakers into a spell.
And they resented the slam, with a Hoo Hoo yell.
That made the "roaster" sorry he spoke,
For we will not be gayed, by any "old bloke."

A new claim "Indian," Greble, by name,
We took on this trip, to get him into the game.
His shiny bald head and glasses of gold,
Made Whalen, the "string man," sassy and bold;
But after two days of this strenuous life,
He grew sick at heart and wanted his wife.
For Jarboe, his room mate, in tone so sweet,
Told Greble his hair was all on his feet.
This broke the last straw, that bound him to us,
And he left us that night, in utter disgust.

The "Bamboo"—a "daisy"—my, boys, what a treat!
And Viggo and Limbach were on the front seat.
The wife to call Porter, were one, two, three,
But the way "she" had called him, mystified me;
For after the next announcement Hahn had made,
Porter ducked out, while the orchestra played.
A tune heard so often, if not on a "bike,"
The hoochie coochie air, heard now on the "Pike;"
And the gang all asked, "Is Porter in bed?"
But the answer, that came back, was "What the woggle bug said."

If any of this story remains to be told,
Pressure of business prohibits my thoughts to unfold;
But Moore has insisted that this story must come,
Notwithstanding the low price of cottonwood and gum.
With kindest regards to all of the "bunch,"
We will bend our best efforts, giving prices a "hunch."

"QUEER CASES"

POLICE ARE CALLED UPON TO ADJUST FAMILY TROUBLES—OTHER STRANGE REQUESTS.

"The police force frequently have some queer cases," said Chief Price yesterday to a Bulletin man, "and some times we are tempted to lock up the persons making the complaints instead of the persons charged with wrong-doing. Many people do not realize the duties of the police and the officers are often called upon to settle little family difficulties in which they have no interest and no right to interfere. Only last week a woman with two small children applied at police headquarters and wanted an officer to go in search of her husband, who had left home because of some family differences and was spending the night down town with some companions. The man had sent his vest home to let his wife know that he was all right, but she thought a policeman might be delegated to find her husband and send him home. When informed that it was not in a policeman's power to hunt up a man and return him to his family the little woman seemed greatly surprised.

"Another case recently," continued Chief Price, "was that of a man who came to Cairo and was spending the night at one of the disreputable houses. He had a considerable sum of money—nearly two hundred dollars—and some diamonds which he gave to the landlady of the place early in the evening. He later asked for them and they were returned to him after which he spent a short time in the house, at the end of which time he declared the money and diamonds had been stolen from him. An officer was summoned and when I arrived I found the man and a woman in a room, the furnishings of which had been turned topsy-turvy and almost torn to pieces. The woman was crying and her face was bloody as a result of wounds inflicted by the man in an endeavor to make her return the money and jewels which he claimed she had stolen. A search of the room was instituted, but the valuables were not found. As a last resort I decided that I would search the man. Such a proceeding seemed to him absurd and he was as greatly surprised as anyone when the money and diamonds were found rolled up in a hand kerchief in his hip pocket, where he had placed them a short time before.
