Bold French Robbers.

A rich Parisian lady recently had a memorable adventure. On leaving the theater one afternoon she hailed a taxicab. Instead of driving her to her home at the address she gave him, the chauffeur drove to the Bois de Boulogne, and entered the wood, where the taxi was surrounded by five men, who hustled the lady out of the cab and, possessing themselves of her furs, outer clothing, and jewelry, were driven off in the taxi by the chauffeur, who was evidently in league with the robbers. The lady was left thinly clad and shivering with cold in the wood. She reached her home some hours later, and now lies dangerously ill with an attack of pulmonary congestion.
