San Juan Basin Is Swept by Floods; Traffic Suspended

FARMINGTON, June 1.—The effect of the series of floods which have visited the San Juan basin for the past week is now being felt in this city, and no mail has arrived for over a week. In all parts of the basin bridges have been washed out and it is thought that it will be at least two weeks before trains will be moved again. The water in the San Juan at Pagosa Junction is said to be higher than it was in the year 1911, which was one of the worst floods in history, and many the residents in that section are anchored to trees to save them from being washed away. The high water is caused by melting of late snows in the upper

Big Oil Derrick Goes Up One Mile from Carlsbad

CARLSBAD, June 1.—The oil boom has come to stay and a big derrick will soon be erected by the Pool Oil and Gas Company within one mile of the city. Much of the material is now on the ground for the erection of the derrick and the machinery is in transit. A contract of 10 inch casing is on the local siding, and as soon as the equipment is all on the well the big drill will be started. The rig is one of the best ever seen in this part of the state and will go a depth of 3000 feet unless oil is found at a lesser depth. It is expected that the well will be spudded in some time in July.

New Mexico State Banks Are in a Healthy Condition

SANTA FE, N. M., June 2.—According to figures given out by the state bank examiner comparing the report of the condition of New Mexico state banks at the close of business February 28 and May 4, the loans and discounts have increased $1,229,650.41; deposits, $600,340.29; bills payable and rediscounts, $208,196.36. Total resources, $1,124,655.77.

State banks followed the custom established by national banks, renewing their paper for the purpose of extending needed additional accommodation to stockmen and farmers. This accounts for the increase in bills payable and rediscounts.

Something New—

The Overland "4"

AFTER using Overland 4 for the Apache war for the Motor Transport Corps Transcontinental Convoy Dr. S. N. Johnson, Official Lecturer for the Lincoln Highway Association says: "I found the Overland 4 so suited to my needs that I rode in it from stories all the way. It must be the late spring advertisement, but even when the roads were rough I rode in the night stops without failure. It is a marvel of ease and comfort."

Last Night's Dreams

—What They Mean

(Did you dream last night?)

ROCKY MOUNTAIN, Montana and West Indian dreamers that the dream industry produces an enormous revenue annually. Some of the dreams are "Fatal," as a Pullman porter dreamed last night of the outcome of the grand number of dreams which he has contributed to the course of his precious life. It dates up a few days "some nothing to the experiences of the day which has since mostly passed to us be found in every dream," that is, anything real, remarkable, close or thought about. It would seem as if the dream phenomena were having taken over from the prevailing war some recent experience as a starter then had added to it real scenes of material the commonness of our mother years, later experiences and impressions, some at night as to have been surprises only one or more times appeared at the time they called into existence, our secret wishes, suppressed desires and psychic characteristics of the possession of which we were, perhaps, unaware in our waking state.

Bridges seem to be thrown out to each of those as the dream consciousness selects to enable them to mingle with the dreams from this standpoint, but in order to do so successfully it must be done at once on awakening, for though some dreams are so strong that they can be remembered for years, as a rule the dream either disappears rapidly and to can only remember a fragment left and there. The experiences of the day which has most recently passed which is brought now into the realm of shadows is frequently Englished as discovered, but can be discovered upon a close analysis. That a lady dreamed one night that she had found a fine baby sewed up in a feed sackcloth. The day preceding she had admired one of her neighbor's children and had strayed at the market to buy a fish on her way home. The inquiring would go further in interpreting this dream. They say that to see a fish in a dream means good fortune, especially if they are white or red. To see fish swimming about, unless the water is muddy, is an omen that rich and generous people will do you favors, and to dream of catching fish means you will be successful in love and business. But to dream of dead fish is unfavorable, and if a live fish slip out of your hand you will marry a person of a roaming disposition. Also, with a slippery fish, beware of slippery friends. To get fish and catch nothing means disappointment in business, just as it does in the actual world.

Mother's Cook Book

To keep a household running smoothly, prepared, regular, made recipe, and cheerful always and to do it indefinitely as it was, with a limited salary, perhaps little help to complain, no grumbling, no complaint, not unlikely expected to this world.—David Harum.

Today's Food.

For a meal which is a meal is food? be sure to try

Spaghetti Par Excellence.

Take one package of spaghetti, break into small pieces and cover with boiling salted water; stir lightly until all is boiling. When tender pour off the water, drain in a colander, pour over cold water to make the spaghetti free. Take one can of tomatoes, strained to remove the seeds, add a can of tomato soup, two large onions cut in bits, one fourth of a teaspoonful of cayenne pepper and a teaspoonful of chili powder, four tablespoonfuls of sugar, three teaspoonfuls of salt, six slices of bacon diced and fried. Mix all together and add the bacon fat. Put in layers in a baking dish with the spaghetti. Bake two hours.

Cranberry Salad.

Soak one package of gelatine in a pint of cold water until well softened, then pour over this two quarts of boiling cranberry juice, add the juice of one orange and sugar to taste. When cool add one pint of shredded blanched almonds and one pint of celery. When cold slice and serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Head Lettuce With Sherry's Dressing

Prepare the lettuce, drabbing well and dry carefully to remove all water. Take one cupful of olive oil—very oil will answer—two tablespoonfuls each of minced green and red peppers, one small Spanish onion chopped, one tablespoonful each of minced parsley and powdered sugar, half one-fourth of a cupful of vinegar. Make in a mixer or jar for five minutes. Pour over the lettuce and do not serve on the lettuce until the last minute as it wilts the lettuce.

Salmon Rarebit.

Heat one-fourth of a cup of butter or better substitute, when bubbling add one tablespoonfuls of flour, rub and mix until perfectly smooth, then add a pint of milk and when thickened a cup of cubed, white old cheese and salt seasoned, one egg beaten with a pinch of salt and a pinch of cayenne. Serve on toasted crackers or thin slices of toasted bread.

The Sandman Story

MR. MOUSE & MR. FROG

ONCE MR. Mouse, who had been visiting from the farm where he lived to Mr. Toby and his family, was caught the road by his uncle and selected down by the pond.

"I may as well jump in and drown myself," said Mr. Mouse, feeling very sad and discouraged. "There is no place I go where I can get back my father and."

"What is the matter, my friend that you seem so sad?" asked Mr. Frog, who sat on a lily pad for days, and heard all what Mr. Mouse had said. "Why could you drown. Just because you have lost the way? I live in this pond, and I do not drown."

Mr. Mouse now felt he had a sympathy friend, and Mr. Frog all an counsel.

"I just did quite pad mind and things in the here—just a little: and way that cat should be so disagreeable and unfriendly. I can't understand," he said.

"We cannot eat those things," said Mr. Mouse, "so why she forbids me I cannot see. I was she ever come here and try to drive you out of the pond?"

"Never," said Mr. Frog. "I have my troubles with the boys, who try to stone me, but I can always escape by jumping in the pond; and Mr. Dog barks at me when I come out in the big sometimes, but he cannot get me. So I just let him bark. It is very funny to see him, too, so I just laugh to myself and stay here as long as I like. Why don't you come here to live? I feel quite sure if you would live on bugs and water and such things as you would better you."

"But suppose I can't get out if I jump in your pond?" said Mr. Mouse, "and suppose I should not like your bugs? I do not feel at all sure I could live on the things you spoke of."

"Come with me for a visit," said Mr. Frog. "I'll pass you down. If you don't like it I will bring you right back."

"How will you manage that?" asked Mr. Mouse.

"You get on my back and cling tightly, and if you don't like it when I go under the water you just pinch a little and I'll come right up," said Mr. Frog.

It wasn't a second before he was back again, and Mr. Mouse rolled off on the ground, choking and gasping for breath.

"Why, you did not even get to the bottom of the pond. You pinched almost as soon as we started," said Mr. Frog.

"I knew I did. I knew at once that I should never like the water for a home."

"I can't see why," said Mr. Frog, thinking. "There are no cats here and plenty to eat."

"There may be no cats, but there are worse things than cats. I have found," said Mr. Mouse. "Why, that water would kill me. I can run away from Puss if I look sharp, but I could not run away from the water, and so far seeing, how can I see with my eyes full of water?

"No, thank you, Mr. Frog; I guess I will run back to the barn and take another chance with Mrs. Tabby."

"What funny folks there are in this world," said Mr. Frog, as he watched Mr. Mouse out of sight. "He'd rather live in a barn than in the water. Well, well."

Beauty Chats

By EDNA KENT FORBES

PERFUMES

BERNICE writes—"I have recently been reading a number of books about England in the middle of the last century—Wilde's 'Dorian Gray,' Thackeray and others—and I notice in many of them mention a perfume—'mignonette' they call it—as being used by the fined women and beauties of that day. Is it a real perfume, and if so can it be bought now? It must be lovely to have made such an impression upon writers. Can you tell me how it is made, and why it has such a curious name? I read that chats on wearing a distinctive perfume, and wondered whether I could adopt this as my own."

Yes, I can tell you something about it, and how to make it, though I cannot say whether all druggists carry the needed ingredients. It was named for the discoverer, one Frangipani, a gentleman of Rome who lived in the time of the Crusades. The lovely ingredients are all spices or oils. Extract orris, 1 ounce, extract vanilla, 2 drachms, oil of bergamot, 10 drops, oil of clove, oil of cinnamon, 5 drops each, powdered myrrh, 10 grains, rectified spirits, 4 ounces.

The formula I obtained from an old book on sweet scents and cosmetics. The oils and essences are mixed, the whole is shaken up and allowed to settle for a week, being shaken up several times during the day. Keep in a dark place during the week.

The study of perfumes is full of fascination. For one thing some odors seem and which evoke pleasant memories and which evoke pleasant memories and which evoke pleasant memories
