[illegible] CURES EXTRAORDINARY

Blows On the Head Sometimes More Successful Than Doctors.

The strange case of Dr. William Griggs, whose memory was recently restored after three years of complete oblivion, is the latest addition to the long string of cases in which accidents and blows have accomplished cures which medical skill has been powerless to effect.

It may be recalled that Griggs had lost all memory of his doings since [illegible] 1903, when he was [illegible] of the Clyde Shipping [illegible] steamer Portland, and that he regained his identity and his recollection of the intervening period after he had been brutally attacked [illegible] by four men in the neighborhood of the Elephant and Castle.

A very curious story of a similar case was told some time ago by Major [illegible] Maunderson, of Tiverton. In his words we quote: "In India, during the cold season of 1854-55, some eight or ten officers quartered near Lahore were out hawking, having deer and ebara, and during a run after one of the latter, Col. Sam Fisher's horse blundered over some soft ground and fell with him. The only injury he received was loss of memory. He had fallen on his head; but a good helmet had saved his scalp. It was about midday, and we got a native cart and he rested on it for some [illegible] without getting better. We kept asking what he was doing to have taken [illegible] and so on, and, though in [illegible] India the Crimean war was [illegible] body's thoughts, he could [illegible] nothing about it. As the [illegible] short at that season in [illegible] India, and we were some [illegible] from Lahore, and no vehicle to drive on to be had, [illegible] that he should be carried [illegible] the charpoy by coolies. [illegible] to and insisted on riding [illegible] A brother subaltern, Worthington, [illegible] with him. By the time we [illegible] Lahore it was dusk, and [illegible] fell with him over one of the [illegible] kunkub, collected at the side of the road for metaling it. He again [illegible] his head, unhurt, but his memory [illegible] completely restored."

More remarkable [illegible] rience of William [illegible] the Union army, who was [illegible] wounded in the head at the battle of Gettysburg on July 2, 1863. After [illegible] covered from his wound, but the machinery of his brain seemed [illegible] stopped. For forty years his mind was an absolute blank so far as [illegible] events were concerned; but he [illegible] a vivid memory of his life up [illegible] fatal day in 1863, and could [illegible] long-dead men and trivial incidents of his young days with marvelous [illegible] On July 22, 1903, he was thrown [illegible] horse on his head, and after recovering consciousness, found his memory completely restored and the long dark period of his life revealed to him in its smallest details.

A few years ago a woman who had been for many years insane secured possession of a revolver and fired a couple of bullets into her head. She was taken to a London hospital, where the bullets, one of which had penetrated the brain, were removed, and after a few days she recovered consciousness. To the amazement of her family and friends, it was found that, with consciousness she had regained complete sanity, the injury to the brain having, in some mysterious way, restored her to soundness of mind.

More recently the fear of an accident was the means of restoring speech to a dumb man. Mr. J. Moore, of Gosport, had been dumb for four years when, on returning home one evening, his bicycle skidded. In his alarm he shouted, and was so startled and surprised at hearing his voice that he called out again and again until he was convinced that his long-lost voice had come back to him.

It is not many years since a remarkable case of dumbness excited great interest in medical circles in Germany. Twelve [illegible] Bavarian cattle [illegible] by a horse [illegible] completely lost [illegible] A year later he [illegible] horse to the [illegible] the animal—who [illegible] in him—began [illegible] dangerous mania [illegible] are told, "lost his [illegible] and after a [illegible] talk, and com[illegible] speech, to the [illegible] of his friends." [illegible] the case of a [illegible] Paul Stengel, who [illegible] in the head by a [illegible] of a sentence [illegible] and rendered [illegible] days. On re[illegible] for many months [illegible] until, as fate would [illegible] down a flight of [illegible] head. He was [illegible] condition, and on [illegible] the first words he [illegible] completion of the sen[illegible] so rudely interrupted by the horse's kick some month's earlier. It is gratifying to record also that Herr Stengel's memory was quite restored by his second accident.

To give but one more example, Some time ago a Devonshire gentleman, who had been totally blind for nearly twenty years, sustained a fracture of the skull in a carriage accident. In the necessary operation part of the skull which had been driven into the brain was removed, with the astonishing result that when the patient gained consciousness he found to his delight that his sight was restored to him.—Tit-Bits.

Dr. Armstrong makes his next visit here in person on March 4-5. 51-3t

[illegible]

[illegible] little sermon [illegible] Let us all read it [illegible] right point and apply it.

There is no more pernicious habit than that of getting mad. Standing with a chip on your shoulder is a poor occupation. Those who are so long that every day stay on them should be amputated. People who grow angry at everything to the point of losing control of themselves never control anybody or anything. They are [illegible] nobody likes a person who makes [illegible] to be getting mad. They are always unhappy, for anger and hatred do not eat out of the same dish. They are forever at unrest, for repose cannot abide in such disagreeable quarters. They are like a horse which says 'buggers' and jumps from one side of the road to the other. The tension on their nervous system is very great, so they generally wind up in bad health and often with nervous prostration. I heard a preacher say once that he hated to know any of the congregation who had fallen out with his predecessor, for he was so afraid they were chronic 'getters mad.' And he generally found that they were. The sign had always proven so true that he found it difficult not to be prejudiced. If I were one of those unfortunates I would quit it, and if I could not quit it, I would conceal it and attempted to deny it, and if I could not conceal it I would move away. It is so comfortable to be at peace with the world and in a good humor with everybody. It is so gratifying to even your friends, with your acquaintances, never see a sight, nor understand an [illegible] it. Poor, deluded man, who thinks that he got even by getting mad.

STATE BOARD OF TRADE MEETING

An Interesting and Profitable Meeting Last Week at Jacksonville.

Hon. F. C. Gilmore, of the Pensacola Board of Trade, attended the meeting and reports a [illegible] gathering, they having [illegible] consideration the procurement of [illegible] immigration, manufacturing enterprises, etc. Mr. Gilmore is [illegible] on plan and scope. [illegible] principal object of the last meeting, however, was to devise plans for securing immigration and on this line the committee on plan and scope reported the following resolution, which was adopted:

"Whereas, The [illegible] and scope of this meeting is, to [illegible] outlined by the language of [illegible] call, to discuss the question of immigration; and

"Whereas, Your committee feels that the needs of [illegible] as well known as to require further discussion, and the hand[illegible] committee, and that the needed emergencies of the state can [illegible] by legislative enactment creating a Department of Immigration which [illegible] work or the employment of capital and desirable immigration; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the following Bill, to be entitled 'An act to establish the Bureau of Immigration and prescribe the duties of the Commissioner of Agriculture and Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture in relation thereto and making an appropriation for conducting the same, and providing for an Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture and his compensation,' be reported to the Legislature of the State of Florida, with a recommendation that the State Board of Trade [illegible] be passed, as the industrial [illegible] of the State of Florida demand the enactment of such a law.

"Resolved, further, That the President of this Board [illegible] appoint a Legislative Committee whose duty shall be the bringing of this resolution to the attention of the next Legislature.

"Resolved, further, That this Committee on Plan and Scope further recommend that a fund of not less than $5,000 be raised for the exclusive purpose of advertising the resources and climate of the State of Florida to the people of the United States and Canada."

The State Board of Trade gave its attention to much other important business. A Congressional investigation of the manner of conducting peonage cases was asked. The good roads movement was heartily indorsed as an aid to immigration, and the meeting passed resolutions asking for legislation that would rehabilitate the American Merchant Marine.

There will be an important meeting of the Board of Trade at the Elks' Hall, on Tuesday evening at o'clock. Every member is requested to be present, and all business men are earnestly invited to be present.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society

The mite-box opening for the present quarter was held in the home of Mrs A. E. Caldwell. Although the weather was rather uncertain, there were more than twenty ladies present, and with their cheery faces and little "pink boxes" it made a goodly company.

Our efficient president had arranged a short, but very interesting program. In being carried out it was interspersed with pointed remarks from the heart, which seemed to reach the hearts of those present, bringing out a feeling discussion on the present condition of the starving Chinese, and request for help, which is being given.

There was a duett rendered by two of the members, "To him that believeth," that carried with it a world of good.

During a social hour of hand-shaking and chatting, a most delightful menu of hot chocolate, etc., including home-made candy, was served by two sweet young ladies, daughter of the hostess and her friend.

The exercises closed with an announcement from the treasurer of the fund from the "pink boxes," followed by "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and a closing prayer. With what has been since collected from some who were not present, the sum amounted to more than $35.00.

See Here!

[illegible] to be found that [illegible] persons among [illegible] are alive to the advantages of producing crops of [illegible] fruit to supply the wants of our own folks, and those of the municipalities in this State and [illegible]

[illegible] time to begin the good work. Let no more than 4 or 6 farmers in the county undertake the experiment on no more than one acre each, there would result, say on six acres of ground, at five feet apart each way, 10,088 hills, containing three melons each, which at a most reasonable estimate may be relied on to mature three melons each, or nine to the hill, or 60,774 saleable melons on the total six acres. This fruit finds ready sale in our local market at 5 cents apiece, and the aggregate of such a crop on six acres would amount to $4,538.70. That's no contemptable sum, even when divided among six producers, if so many need be in the undertaking.

Of all varieties of musk melons now in the market Rocky Ford, an improved variety of netted gem, is probably to be preferred for planting in our Florida soil. This is a small green-bushed netted melon weighing about one and a half pounds, one of excellent quality, and a good shipper. Pure seeds grown at Rocky Ford, in Colorado, may be procured from Peter Henderson Co., 35 and 37 Courtland street, New York, by mail.

Two shovelfulls of well rotted stable or barn yard manure scattered broad cast over and immediately around each hill at time of planting, then slightly dug in, is highly essential to the production of vigorous vines and well developed fruit. Application of from 150 to 200 pounds of nitrate of soda applied about three weeks after planting results usually in an increase of about 115 per cent. of yield.

Let there be no lack of this wholesome, refreshing fruit in our home market this summer.

Do Not Crowd the Season.

The first warm days of spring bring with them a desire to get out and enjoy the exhilirating air and sunshine. Children that have been housed up all winter are brought out and you wonder where they all came from. The heavy winter clothing is thrown aside and many shed their flannels. Then a cold wave comes and people say that grip is epidemic. Colds at this season are even more dangerous than in mid-winter, as there is much danger of pneumonia. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, however, and you will have nothing to fear. It always cures, and we have never known a cold to result in pneumonia when it was used. It is pleasant and safe to take. A Store What Advertising Makes It.

Schiller wrote: "Every man stamps his value upon himself. The price we challenge for our wares is given."

This statement contains most of the philosophy of advertising. Particularly does it explain the various degrees and kinds of store [illegible].

Almost without exception stores come to be the concrete effect of the advertising that is done for them. They come to typify the net publicity that have been carried through for them.

In almost every city in the world the biggest and best store is the one that has been advertised in the biggest and best ways. The next store in importance has also been second in the intelligence and enterprise shown in its advertising. And the comparison will hold true down to the tenth store in importance—or the last one of all.

So that, to paraphrase Schiller, every merchant stamps the character of his advertising upon his store. And the sort of reputation we challenge for our enterprises is given them.—Exchange.

"Home the Proper Place."

Some people think it a mystery that notwithstanding good advice their boys grow up to be wild and reckless young men. If these boys were taught from infancy that home was the proper place for them after dark, rather than prowling around the streets, annoying well and sick people alike, much of this mystery might be explained, and young men with better moral character and more intelligent minds would be the result. No parent need expect pure morals in a boy that prowls the streets at night, even if he does go to Sunday school.—Gainesville Sun.

DR. E. H. ARMSTRONG.

Few people realize the importance of having any eye or physical [illegible] looked after immediately upon [illegible] ing same. Especially is this [illegible] eye troubles, as the eyes, [illegible] full supply of one-tenth of the nerve force of the body, through defect, which may or may not be cernible to the patient, but is [illegible] strain upon this one-tenth of the [illegible] ous system, are thereby deranged in sympathy the remainder. Often the eyes, which are so defective as to produce a strain of as high as 40 per cent. do not manifest any trouble in themselves. The possessor has good vision and does not realize that his nervousness, stomach trouble, constipation, or perhaps general debility comes from the sacrificing of nerve energy or other departments to meet this excessive demand for the operating of his eyes and the giving of good vision. Such cases may take drugs all their lifetime and never be cured, as the drugs cannot reach the seat of the trouble. The only practitioner who is competent to handle any physical ailment, no matter where it manifests itself, is the one who knows the entire machinery and operandi of the body, so that he can determine without doubt the cause of the tronble, as it may be located at a considerable distance from the point at which it manifests itself.

Neurological treatment covers the above ground. Neurologists are taught to [illegible] possible points [illegible] a cause [illegible] ment of [illegible] ifested [illegible] nervous [illegible] causes of [illegible] and the [illegible] fail. Huteson [illegible] Fla., and in Miss [illegible] of Tallahassee, as well as [illegible] others in this locality, so anyone [illegible] can easily prove to their [illegible] satisfaction that it is THE system for [illegible] of the above-named [illegible]

Dr. [illegible] W. H. [illegible] associate [illegible] graduate [illegible] Henager [illegible] McCormick [illegible] Chicago [illegible] St. Petersburg, Fla., are the only practitioners of this system of treatment in the State of Florida.

Dr. Armstrong, personally, makes professional visits to Tallahassee, and will be here regularly hereafter, on the first Monday of each month. His next visit will be on Monday, March 4th, and he may be consulted at the Bloxham Hotel.
