☞ All foreign advertisers must pay in advance. It will be useless to send advertisements with the request to "publish and send bill." Patent medicine manufacturers must pay according to published rates, and in no instance will their special notices be published except at 20 cents per line for each insertion.

☞ Our Agents are notified that it will be useless to take advertisements for us at less than the above rates, and they must add thereto their commission. POSITIVELY NO CREDIT OR BARTER.

☞ Advertisements for all charitable purposes charged at regular rates. Heretofore newspaper men have been expected to contribute in proportion to the public, and then if they charged for their work, it was looked upon as extortion. As well ask a merchant to give money and charge nothing for his goods.

☞ All communications to advance the interests of any individual, or corporate body, must be paid for as advertisements. We shall determine for ourselves what is for the public benefit, and what ought to go in our columns.

☞ Obituaries will be charged for at advertising rates.

Wisdom to the Point.

The Memphis Avalanche makes some sensible remarks, which we append, and would intimate that they have an application to many whom we have heard talk. The Avalanche says:

The most despicable mouthing that is heard at the present time, is that of the Southern sorehead who, having failed to do what he knew was his duty, in the recent war, spends his time in senseless lamentations against secession as the primary cause of all his ills and the loss of his property in slaves. These creatures should be spurned by all decent men, and their own faithlessness to a cause the loss of which was a loss of their property, should be hurled into their teeth when they indulge in this disgusting twaddle, and unmanly exhibition. The abolition of slavery was not the result of the secession of the Southern States. It was the avowed purpose of the predominant political power in the nation. The New York Times—an abolition organ of high standing—in a recent number, used the following language:

"Mr. Seward's public efforts were aimed at its overthrow, and when in 1860 a President was elected hostile to it, Mr. Seward knew its days were numbered. If peace had been preserved, the political power of slavery would have been diminished, its ambition would have been arrested, the whole power and influence of the National Government would have been against it, and its doom as an element of our political and social system, would have been sealed. But the South saw this as well as Mr. Seward, and they determined to destroy the Union in order to preserve slavery."

After this frank admission on the part of leading abolitionists, we hope to hear no more about the abolition of slavery having been caused by secession. Let those who are disposed to believe such reports, be satisfied that Mr. Seward and the leading abolitionists knew what was their purpose, and that slavery was abolished because of the failure, and not of the secession movement. Let the Southern heart be no longer sickened with the loathing utterances of these mouthers on the street, and the no less despicable creatures who find their satisfaction in carping at the "Lost Cause" through the columns of the press.

There are few journals in the country that speak with the same uniform good sense and pointed force as the Lexington (Ky.) Observer. It thus disposes of a matter about which there has been much tedious twaddle:

We constantly hear and read of questions settled by the war. We confess we know of but two questions really decided by that war: that the separate national existence of the seceded States was put an end to, and slavery destroyed. Many questions of the science and art of warfare were perhaps decided. New proof of the rascality of men were given—and many vast fortunes made by unprincipled scoundrels, and lost by unfortunate sufferers. Heroic deeds and infamous acts were performed. Glorious memories and vast debts and desolation survive it. But politically—in its high sense—the only settlement made by arms thus far was that the attempt of the South to establish a nationality failed, and slavery has been destroyed. What the future has in store God only knows!

Prentice sagely observes: A father may transmit a sound and healthy constitution to his son and the latter destroy it by vicious excesses. Our revolutionary fathers bequeathed to us the best Constitution in the world, and we are shattering it as recklessly as a miserable profligate shatters his own.

The Supply and the Price of Cotton.

We have read with attentive interest an article upon this subject, in De Bow's Review for November. The article is stated to be written by Mr. Hutchinson, of Memphis.

If the Review had a general circulation among the people of Tennessee, modesty would dictate to us to have nothing to say, upon a topic in regard to which we have no claim to be particularly well informed. But we are well aware that, while speculators keep posted on all points, there are thousands of cotton growers in Tennessee who will never read Mr. Hutchinson's views. To put these latter upon a fair footing in the sale of their hard-earned produce, is our sole motive for meddling with the subject.

The facts and reasoning adduced by Mr. Hutchinson have satisfied our mind, that the supply for the cotton year commencing 1st September 1866 will be greatly deficient, and consequently that there must be an advance in prices. When that advance will take place—whether during the winter, or not till next spring—we pretend not to anticipate. But we feel sure that it must come; and therefore venture to advise the people to hold on to their cotton for the present. If anybody must have money, let him sell just enough to supply his immediate and pressing wants, and withhold the remainder. "Let him rather prefer to count his bales than his greenbacks." As far as possible let the cotton be placed in safety from fire and other accidents, and then let the owner wait, in confidence that waiting will win.—Nashville Gazette, 7th.

The Radical organs are amusing their readers with such nonsense as that the recent elections were the death-blow of the Democratic party, and an overwhelming popular verdict against the policy of the President. Now, every one who has examined the election returns from the States referred to is aware of the fact that, so far from showing any decline in the strength of the Democratic party, there was a very considerable absolute gain in almost every instance. If the elections proved anything, it was that the Jacobin party is losing ground, and that it is on the downhill road to perdition. The Democrats, it is true, were not able to carry these States, but they were able to make heavy gains in the popular vote. The Radical majorities built up during the war were too large to be overcome in a single contest, but the result shows that our party still possesses tremendous power and great vitality. It is not dead, nor anywhere near it. It will live to put the last relic of radicalism below ground, and to heap a weight of opprobrium upon its grave which will secure the world against the possibility of its resurrection.—Louisville Courier

A GOOD RULE WORKS BOTH WAYS.—Men should practice some little of what they preach. For instance the merchant who preaches encouragement to home enterprise, should not get his head bills printed in Cincinnati. Or if he does he ought to be careful not to allow them to be stuck up with the Cincinnati imprint on them. Not that the imprint does any especial harm, but that it takes all the point out of his preaching. Again, men who expect to make a profit on the goods they offer for sale should, merely for the sake of consistency, allow others a like privilege. To illustrate: When a merchant wants a circular printed, for the sake of consistency, he should not say to us, "why I can get it done in Louisville or Cincinnati at ——less than what you charge!" Unless, forsooth, he proposes to let us have goods at Louisville or Cincinnati prices. We make these remarks upon general principles and under our general privilege of lecturing, but if any reader finds the advice applicable to his own case, we beg him to accept it with our compliments. Were we in charge of a printing establishment in Louisville or Cincinnati, we should make it a point to do printing as well and as cheap as any other establishment in the same city, but as we happen to be located in Columbia, Tennessee, we prefer to regulate ourselves to prices that rule here. If any good people dont like it they have our full and cordial permission to let it alone. We are neither running a charity machine nor printing for Cincinnati customers.—Columbia Herald.

Colfax, the present Speaker of the lower house of Congress, recently delivered himself of a speech at Detroit. From the following extract, those inted may gain some instructions of the probability of compensation from the Government for losses during the war:

When we assembled the first day, we found a pile upon our table, with claims from the South, asking for restitutions for desolations committed during the war. They came and told us very sad stories about our soldiers during the war. They said that these boys in blue were desperate cases. I told them it could not be so. They said that these boys in blue had wonderful appetites. I wish they had done more. When we go again, with a torch in one hand, and the sword in the other, we will compel them to submit, or we will sweep them with the besom of destruction. [Cheers.] We tell them that not cent should they ever receive from the national treasure. [Cheers.] Though they may have lost millions of dollars, I believe that any one of our brave boys in blue that died on the field of battle is worth millions of that property combined. [Cheers.] When we passed this resolution, every Democrat but six voted against it. But while this Congress is being sustained, not one dollar will they ever receive for the losses they sustained during the war. [Cheers.]

The La Grange (Geo.) Reporter says "there's life in the old land yet," as a furniture man in that city has in course of completion seventeen baby cribs, most of them (the cribs) made to order.—Brick Pomeroy.

THERE is a local editor in one of the rural villages of California, who seems to be in clover. He dishes up his local items in a very impressive manner.—Hear him:

"All night long in the sweet little village
Is heard the soft note of the pistol,
And the delicate speech of the victim,
As he's being shot through the gizzard."

GREAT DISTRIBUTION

Of Rosewood Pianos and Melodeons, Fine Oil Paintings, Engravings, Silver Ware, Gold and Silver Watches, and Elegant Jewelry, consisting of Diamond Pins, Diamond Rings, Gold Bracelets, Coral, Florentine, Mosaic, Jet, Lava, and Cameo Ladies' Sets, Gold Pens with Gold and Silver Extension Holders, Sleeve Buttons, Sets of Studs, Vest and Neck Chains, Plain and Chased Gold Rings and Chains, etc. etc., etc., etc., valued at which they need not pay until it is known what is drawn and its value.

THE AMERICAN JEWELERS' ASSOCIATION call your attention to the fact of its being the largest and most popular Jewelry Association in the United States. The business is, and always has been, conducted in the most candid and honorable manner. Our rapidly increasing trade is a sure guarantee of the appreciation of our patrons for this method of obtaining rich, elegant and costly goods. The sudden stagnation of trade in Europe, owing to the late German war and recent disastrous financial crisis in England, has caused the failure of a large number of Jewelry houses in London and Paris, obliging them to sell their goods at a great sacrifice, in some instances less than one third the cost of manufacturing. We have lately purchased very largely of these Bankrupt Goods, at such extremely low prices, that we can afford to send away Finer Goods, and give better chances to draw the most valuable prizes than any other establishment doing a similar business. OUR AIM IS TO PLEASE, and we respectfully solicit your patronage, as we are confident of giving the utmost satisfaction. During the past year we have forwarded a number of the most valuable prizes to all parts of the country. All who patronize us will receive the full value of their money, as no article on our list is worth less than One Dollar, retail, and these are no blanks. Parties dealing with us may depend on having prompt returns, and the article drawn will be immediately sent to any address by return mail or express.

The following parties have recently drawn valuable prizes from the American Jewelers' Association, and have kindly allowed the use of their names:

Chas. J. Hunter, Esq., Treasury Department, Washington, D.C., Piano, value $300; Miss Anna G. Yates, 52 St. Mark's Place, N. Y., Sewing Machine, value $75; Brig. Gen. L. L. Hanson, U. S. NOTICE
COTTON PLANTERS
SHIPPING COTTON.
WE TAKE THIS METHOD OF CORRECTING the impression that seems to have become general throughout the country, that the Internal Revenue Tax of three cents per pound on cotton must be paid before it can be shipped to Nashville. We have authority to say that the same regulations that existed last year will be continued until the meeting of Congress in November.
All persons North of the Tennessee River can consign cotton to Nashville, without prepaying the tax or giving bond.
We keep constantly on hand large supplies of Bale Rope, Bagging, Iron Ties, Cotton Gins, etc., to which we would respectfully call the attention of our friends, and all others interested in cotton.
