WASHINGTON LETTER.

(Regular Correspondent.)
Washington, D. C. July 15, 1901.

That there are a number of republicans, some of them prominent, who would like to prevent the election of "Dave Henderson, Speaker of the next House is certain, but it is equally certain that there are not enough of them to do it. Consequently, the stories of an organization to try to defeat Henderson, are moonshine. Politicians do not knowingly put their heads against stone walls. If there were even a fighting chance to beat Henderson, the fight would be made, but as there isn't, the men who dislike him most are likely to be found shouting the loudest for his nomination by acclamation, in order that they may not be left out when he distributes the Committee favors. Personally, Henderson favors tariff reform of some sort, although he probably does not go as far as Representative Babcock, but what his personal opinions are, will not affect the result, as he has a record showing that there is never any difficulty of his being completely controlled by the party bosses. That is one reason why his re-election was assured before the adjournment of the last Congress. The bosses know his measure and do not care to take any chances with a new man.

Democrats have done a great deal of talking among themselves about the Ohio democratic platform, but few of them care to express opinions about it for publication. One of the exceptions is Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, who said of it: "The Ohio platform is all right and should receive the support of every democrat in the Buckeye state. It conforms to existing conditions and states the issues of the campaign in language clear enough for anybody to understand. I suppose the republicans thought the democrats would re-affirm the Kansas City platform and renew allegiance to Mr. Bryan and all that sort of thing. But they were fooled. Mr. Bryan, I am satisfied, is as popular with the democrats of Ohio, as he was in 1896 and in 1900, but there was no need or necessity to discuss him in the State Convention. It would have added nothing to have placed free silver in the platform, and it might have caused a division in the ranks. As it is, the Ohio democrats have agreed to bury the past and have formed a line of battle on conditions that have arisen since the last campaign. I believe as Conventions are held in other states, the people will witness the democratic leaders following in the footsteps of the Ohio democrats. The democrats of the South have the greatest respect for Mr. Bryan and he can always depend upon a royal welcome when he comes among us. It does not signify that he has lost popularity, when the democrats in Convention decline to mention in state platforms the issues as set forth in the late National Convention. We must meet changed conditions and that cannot be done by sticking to the issues of the past." As to immediate national issues, Mr. Bankhead said: "The republicans seem to be divided on the question of tariff revision and the adoption of reciprocity treaties. I am in favor of tariff revision and it must come sooner or later. I am opposed to trusts and I believe that the only way to kill the trusts is to pass a revenue tariff. Hovey says that the tariff is the mother of trusts, and he ought to be good authority." The charges against the Collector of Internal Revenue at Louisville, Ky., of having violated the Civil Service law, together with the opinion of the Civil Service Commission that the evidence sustains the charges, have been referred to Mr. McKinley. As it is well known that the violations of law, of which there is no doubt, was investigated by the republican boss in Kentucky, under ordinary circumstances, Mr. McKinley would not deem it advisable to take any steps that could be regarded as a rebuke to them, but rumor says the circumstances in this case are not ordinary, and that there is concealed therein a plot, which involves the election of a successor to Senator Deboe. According to this rumor, Mr. McKinley is being urged to take advantage of the charges to remove Collector Sigmund and to appoint in his place J. A. Craft, a former democrat, and a part of the plot is that Col. H. W. Knott, Editor of the Louisville Post, who professes to be a democrat, but who supported McKinley in 1896 and in 1900 and who is now supporting the administration policy, it to be sent to the Senate as an administration Senator by the combined votes of administration democrats and republicans. As the story is told in Washington, Col. Knott pledges himself to get enough of his kind of democrats elected to the Kentucky legislature to make a majority with the republicans added. Perhaps when the story becomes known in Kentucky, the democrats will be able to make it impossible for Col. Knott to carry out his part of the plot, even if Mr. McKinley agrees to become a party to it.

OFFICE OF—

LOUDEST POINT TOBACCO INSPECTION,
No. 211 S. Charles St.
Baltimore, July 10, 1901.

To Our Patrons: We take pleasure in announcing that we have recently provided a first-class box for the use of our customers, so that instead of using the street cars, there is now an easy and comfortable way of reaching our warehouse and Light Street wharf, which is immediately adjacent to the tobacco market not exceeding twelve minutes each way.

These vehicles are equipped with the latest and will be cheerfully furnished transportation.

Again we urge you to mark your tobacco "Locust Point," and advise us by mail of the shipment, for which purpose we will furnish, upon application, cards to be tacked on the hogsheads and postal tags added to us.

Once again we call your attention to the great importance of marking and advising by mail every shipment intended for our warehouse. If you cannot mark the hogsheads, then write us that you have shipped them. If you cannot write us, then mark the hogsheads, but be sure to do one or the other, or both, and under all circumstances insist that the steamboat and railroad agents shall manifest each and every hogshead "Locust Point." A careful compliance with these instructions will insure your tobacco being inspected at our warehouse. Faithfully yours,
