Neuralgia, Rheumatism

What Causes Most of Our Pains and Aches, and How to Cure Them.

Half the world suffers from pains and aches when there is not the slightest reason for so doing. Headache is enormously frequent and leads to serious results. Backache is most common and keeps thousands in misery. Neuralgia pains of side or chest for most myriads of various. All this suffering is unnecessary, and can easily be remedied. Speaking about the subject the well-known James Brown, 17 Market St., New York City, said to the writer: "I have been under the care of many doctors for neuralgia and rheumatism, which I had terribly in my back and side. So badly did I suffer that I was unable to attend to my business for three years, before I came across the right remedy to cure me. This remedy is Dr. Greene's Nervura, and I have been perfectly and completely cured by this wonderful medicine."

Stiff and Lame From Rheumatism.

Perhaps the most terrible case of neuralgia, and the most wonderful cure on record was that of Mrs. Louisa T. Knight of 426 Broadway, Chelsea, Mass. She suffered from an alarming attack of sciatica, and for eleven months the pain was so frightful that she could not sleep over ten minutes at any one time. "My heart felt thanks," she said, "to Dr. Greene's Nervura, for the great benefit I received from this most wonderful remedy. I cannot say enough in praise of it. Before taking up the second bottle there was great relief, and now I am cured, and gaining in strength every day. Let me be the good medicine. I wish I could tell every suffering one about its curative powers, and I will answer letters in regard to it to any one who would like to inquire about it."

OH! MY BACK!

Alonzo Patchin, Esq., of Rosendale, Ulster county, N. Y., spoke with enthusiastic emphasis concerning this remedy: "I have suffered, he said, "for many years with a terrible neuralgia in my heart and neck, and, oh dear, how it pained me all through. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura and it cured me completely of the fearful pain. I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best medicine I ever saw or used."

Doubtless headache torments more people than any other difficulty, but the most aggravated case was that of Mrs. Mary Green of Basin St., Norristown, Pa. "For over 20 years," she said, "my life was made miserable by frequent and terrible headaches. At times they were so severe I feared I would go insane. I was treated by nearly every physician in this city, but none could cure me, or even relieve me except by large doses of morphine. My head would shake so badly it had to be held. No one could suffer more than I did. At last I bought a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and the very first bottle stopped the headaches, and I have never had any trouble with my head since that time. After suffering for 20 years I was cured by Dr. Greene's Nervura.

Another remarkable cure by this same remedy which has come to our attention is that of Mary M. Dunlap of West Hempstead, N. H., who suffered severely with that very distressing complaint, nervous and sick headache. After telling of her wonderful cure, she added: "I think Dr. Greene's Nervura is the best medicine in the world."

That Nervous Headache.

Dr. Greene, of 34 Temple Place, Boston, Mass., the discoverer of the famous specialist in the cure of nervous and chronic diseases. The doctor has devoted special attention to all forms of chronic diseases, through letter correspondence, and will give to mail his opinion and advice in any case, free of charge. The perfection of this system renders a complete cure almost assured, as his success in treatment by correspondence is wonderful and unequalled.

N. B. Let no sufferer hesitate to fill out, or write to, Dr. Greene about your case, and a carefully considered letter, fully explaining your disease and giving you a perfect understanding of all its symptoms, will be returned, free of charge.

Nightfall in Dordrecht.

(Wooster Song.)

The mill goes lolling slowly around
With steady and sonorous moan;
And by little one-hoses in the kindly sound
The town of the mill falls asleep.
White round and round those big white wings
Grimly and ghostlike creep,
My little one-hoses that by the old mill sings:
"Sleep, little tulip, sleep."

The sails are reefed and the nets are drawn
And, over his pot of beer,
The fisher, against the morrow's dawn,
Lustily maketh cheer.
He moves at the winds that roper along
Upon the tarred plantation deep,
But we, we hear his little lullaby song
Of "Sleep, little tulip, sleep."

Sleepy old Frihe, in slumber sound,
Dreams of the stormy north—
To-morrow how proudly he'll troll you around
Hitched to our new milk cart
And you shall help me blanket the kine,
And fold the gentle sheep,
A job we for betting a-sown in time—
But now, little tulip, sleep.

A Dream-time comes to flutter the eyes
That wearily drop and blink
While the old mill buffets the beaming skies
And sends at the stars that wink;
Over your face the pinky wings
Of that beautiful Dream-time sweep,
And, rocking your cradle, she softly sings,
"Sleep, little tulip, sleep!"

A Clean Job.

A despatch from Texas announces that a quarrel over a calf of the value of $6 has resulted in the death of both disputants, one being shot by the other, and the second falling under the fire of a deputy sheriff who undertook to arrest him. There is one thing to be said about this affair—it was as clean a job as we have ever heard of. At the latest accounts the six-dollar calf was doing as well as could be expected.

A gray hair was copied among the raven locks of a charming young lady. "Oh pray pull it out" she exclaimed. "If I pull it out, ten will come to the funeral," replied the lady who made the unwelcome discovery. "Pluck it out, nevertheless," said the dark-haired damsel. "It's no consequence how many come to the funeral, provided they all come in black."

We see that several of our contemporaries are disputing as to which of them "has had the best article on "Milk," etc. The best article we ever saw on milk was cream.—Christian Register.

Disorders which Affect the Kidneys

Are among the most formidable known. In stubborn Bright's disease, gravel and other conditions of the urinary organs are not ordinarily cured in severe cases, but they may be averted by timely medication. A marked stimulant of the urinary assets has ever been found in Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a medicine which not only affords the requisite stimulus when they become inactive, but increases their vigor and severity power. By increasing the activity of the kidneys and bladder, this medicine has the additional effect of expelling from the blood impurities which it is the peculiar office of those organs to eliminate and pass off. The Bitters is also a purifier and strengthener of the bowels, an invigorant of the stomach, and a matchless remedy for biliousness and fever and ague. It counteracts a tendency to premature decay, and vitalizes and invigorates the aged and infirm.

About Insects.

The Free Press gives this report of a recent lecture on injurious insects in the winter course at Burlington, given by Prof. A. B. Cordley:

One tenth of all the crops in the United States are destroyed by insects. The question is, can any of this destruction be prevented, and if so, how? All insects pass through four stages, first, egg stage; second, worm stage, in which the insect gets its entire growth; third, pupil stage; fourth, adult stage. Nearly all plants can be sprayed with Paris green or London purple without damage or injury to the plant. If Paris green or London purple is taken and sprayed on apple trees just after the blossoms fall it will in almost every case kill the worm. If you wait until the worm passes its first stage the remedy will not be effectual. There are lots of patent exterminators on the market that are advertised as remedies for different kinds of insects, but we should let them alone, except in one or two cases. It is not so much the strength of the remedy as in the way it is put on; ammonia used with a remedy increases the injury. When Paris green or London purple is applied just before the blossoms fall, and just after, it gives us apples free from worms, or scabs. The danger amounts to nothing; it can be used within three weeks of gathering fruit; stock feeding under the trees that have recently been sprayed are not in any danger. Arsenites will prove effectual to all chewing insects. Beetles are generally succumb to a decoction of tobacco. Kerosene will kill or drive away insects, but it is just as injurious to plants as to the bugs. If it is used it must be diluted. Persian powder is a good insect remedy as it kills by contact and is non-poisonous. It is the best remedy for cabbage worms and if sprinkled in a room will nearly always kill flies.

In answer to questions sent out to farmers in regard to what insects were the most injurious, these replies were received: Potato bugs, codling moth, white grub, squash bug, currant worm, cabbage worm, tent caterpillar, apple tree borer, wire worms, curculio, apple maggot, cut worms, grasshoppers, onion maggot, grass insects. The speaker said, every one knew the remedy for potato bugs. The life history of the white grub has never been worked out. Muriate of potash was the only known remedy. The squash bug is the easiest to take care of; they are not very injurious to the plants. Kerosene emulsion is very good. There are over 150 different kinds of cut worms, but if the farmers mean the cucumber beetle in their answers, the first remedy is, force out; second, spray with Paris green or London purple. Currant worms cause no serious injury and hellebore is a good remedy; could use a spray of Paris green. The solution is make by mixing one pound of Paris green with 200 gallons of water. A year ago last fall it was tried on the station farm for borers and there was hardly one left this fall; after the borer is in the tree it is difficult to treat. A wash in July or August will prevent the borer from laying eggs and will destroy scale insects. The solution for the wash is one quart of soft soap, one pint carbolic acid, ten quarts of water. The easiest way to kill the curculio is to trap the beetle or shake the tree and then destroy them; the speaker never had any success with spraying.

Points from the Wilmington Meeting.

The same paper has these points of practical interest gathered at the recent meeting at Wilmington:

E. A. Fitch, who gave the opening address, said: The tillers of the soil in order to be successful, have got to be men of brains. The ideal farmer is an educated man, not only in his own pursuits, but in general knowledge. He urged that farmers seek to get a practical benefit from the meetings.

J. E. Sanford's subject was, "How to renovate worn-out farms." He said: I do not like the name of worn-out farms; they are not worn out but exhausted. In clearing land and burning log heaps and raising crops on virgin soil, muscle was what was required and not science; but times have changed. We must adapt ourselves to the present conditions. Depression is caused in a greater or less degree in trying to farm just as our fathers did 50 years ago. Only a small proportion of what we feed enters into the make-up of the animal, the rest goes into the fertilizer pile. If this is saved and applied to our farms we shall increase the fertility instead of reducing it.

Henry Adams: Do you consider corn of more value for ensilage when nearly ripe to put into the silo?

Mr. Sanford: Ripe corn is the most valuable for silage. Putting in very green corn that had been sown thickly by those who first fed ensilage kept many farmers from adopting that method of husbanding their crop, would plant as for grain.

Mr. Adams: Will the ensilage make as valuable fodder as if put in for grain?

Mr. Sanford: Corn increases in value from the time it tassels to maturity 100 per cent. There is more feeding value in ripe sweet ensilage than any other way it can be harvested, and I estimate the cost of putting it in silo at only 40 cents per ton. Ensilage is rated as being worth one third as much per ton as good hay.

Mr. Adams: Should silo be filled quickly or otherwise?

Mr. Sanford: It makes no difference.

Mr. Chapin: In raising crops our artificial work is simply assisting nature. The rain, frost, snow and sun all have their important part to act. Put manure on an undrained swamp and you get no return, but drain that swamp so the sun can act and you will get a crop.

Mr. Sanford: The best stock to renovate a worn-out farm is a year-round dairy.

N. Mason: What kind of cows do you prefer?

Mr. Sanford: I keep the Jersey, but there are other good milking breeds. Feeding and breeding are questions to be studied.

Mr. Fitch: Wilmington stock is pretty much all Durham. Perhaps it is not the best.

Mr. Smith of the board: There are good cows in all breeds, but should prefer to breed from some of the recognized milking breeds.

Charles Weir: Would you warm water for cows?

Mr. Sanford: I like warm water, but do not warm my own. My water is under cover and cows in warm stables. If cows are cold should prefer warm water for them. Cows must be kept warm.

Mr. Mann: Can you keep your stables too warm?

Mr. Sanford: Most assuredly: stables need to be well ventilated.

Mr. Fitch: Do you litter your stables?

Mr. Sanford: Yes, always; use sawdust when I can get nothing better; waste from a woolen factory is the best, and waste from a cigar store or manufactory is an excellent absorbent; will clear the stable of vermin and is rich in fertilizing elements.

Hon. Wm. Chapin of Middlesex spoke on "Farming for profit." He said: We cannot know whether we are making a profit or not unless we keep an account and take an inventory every year; every other business does that and it is the only true way. He's taken an inventory every year and know it has been of value to me. Believe our wealth should grow as a tree grows, year by year, and not come all at once. The first crop of importance, and the one that has been profitable to me, is the crop from the forest. Think our trees should be harvested as soon as they mature just the same as any other crop; there always will be a market for lumber. The best and the most profitable crop is the maple sugar. Mr Chapin took up all the farm crops and gave his experience; spoke of barley being sown so as to raise two crops, using the last crop as a forage or feeding green; frost will not injure barley and for feeding late cannot be surpassed. Every farm should raise strawberries, if not for market for home use; can raise as many bushels on a piece of land as potatoes.

Mr. Fitch: What kind of strawberries would you plant?

Mr. Chapin: The best kind I have tried are the "Crescent" seedling. They are large and bear abundantly. Should fertilize with the preceding crop; corn should precede strawberries, or some hoed crop that has been kept free from weeds; ashes can be used profitably on the ground; strawberries should be set in spring and all buds and runners kept back the first year; some of the staminate kinds should be set with the Crescent; say one to ten to fertilize the blossoms; will hold out four or five years; better on moist soil than dry; should be watered artificially if the weather is dry.

Try Small Fruits on the Deserted Farms.

These neglected farms of which so much has been said and written, ought not to be allowed to grow up to timber, or all to be settled by Swedes, industrious and thrifty though they may be. For the soil upon which our grandfathers brought up large families and amassed respectable fortunes is by no means exhausted. If only the same devotion to business and ready tact that Green Mountain boys have shown in other lines of work were employed, bountiful harvests and happy homes would again make glad the hillsides and valleys of old Vermont. Some time ago I noticed an article in The Phœnix which proposed the raising of poultry on a large scale as a means of reclaiming these farms. As a companion industry I would suggest the raising of small fruits. These mountain farms could be bought at reasonable figures. The soil is well adapted to growing small fruits, and when once they were set to strawberries, raspberries, etc., and a line of customers secured, an income, if not a fortune, would be assured, and that, too, with half the privation, self-denial and separation from friends that those who go West must endure.

But, says one, we are so far from market. Not half so far as the Chicago dressed beef is sent, for any of the towns of Windham and Bennington counties are connected by some sort of public conveyance with railroad towns, and this the fruit could be shipped to the great centres of trade, where there is always a demand for good fruit. What is most needed is some one possessed of honesty, intelligence, tact and a good degree of the grace of stick-to-it to lead the way, and success is reasonably certain. And when once the thing pays, enough will be ready to fall into line, and the grandchildren will return to cultivate and enjoy the farms their fathers left for the busy whirl of city life, or a distant home among cyclones, blizzards, and grasshoppers.

A Small Farmer in California.

California has some fine dairying districts though the state as a whole will not average equal to Vermont in dairy products. Perhaps the following story, which a forty acre farmer in Humboldt County, Cal., tells in Hoard's Dairyman, is entirely true, though a Vermont farmer would be satisfied with keeping 25 cows on forty acres, without saying that he also sold 24 tons of hay: "I am a small dairyman in Arcata Valley. Have but 40 acres. Keep 25 cows. Buy pigs to eat the milk at $1.50 when old enough to wean. Keep until six or eight months old and sell at 7 cents. Killed 28 in 1890, averaging 160 lbs. Sold 24 tons of hay at $6.50 in the field; $350 worth of beef; $75 worth of eggs; $20 worth of chickens; $64 for pasturing horses, and many other small bills too numerous to mention. I am ashamed to put my butter account in beside some that I have heard of. But to cut the thing short I will say that my total production for the year 1890 was $2515. If any of my neighbors can beat that I would be pleased to have them come to the front."

The Newest Swindle on Farmers.

A Pittsburgh dispatch says: "Several weeks ago a man named Williams advertised extensively through the papers for a farm. He received some 300 replies, and in each case notified the seller that his particular farm in every way answered the purposes but that it would be necessary to send carfare for the buyer and agent, to defray the expenses of a trip to inspect the property before purchasing. He succeeded in getting several thousand dollars from his victims, and last week departed for pastures new."

By a description of an experiment made by the Massachusetts station, in which records have been kept of the feed consumed and milk produced by twelve cows of different breeds, the experiment extending over five years, it is shown that, if no allowance be made for the value of the manure, the best cow in the test gave a profit of $36, while the feed of the poorest one cost $34 more than her produce was worth.

The experiment station has on hand a number of copies of its last annual report, which will be sent free of charge to any farmer in Vermont who will send his name on a postal, addressed to the Experiment Station, Burlington, Vt.

An animal that is not sheltered in cold weather will probably eat a third more than one that is and not do nearly as well at that.

One of the thousands of women who suffer in silence when they should be happy.

Why do they suffer?

Because the innumerable ills common to their sex afflict them. Thousands of women suffer silently and the world never knows of the agony they endure. It is all wrong. It is all needless. Passing sickness may come, but there is no reason why it should continue. The system can be strengthened, the life quickened and the health toned up by the right means. Ah! but by what means?

Listen!

For fifty-half a century one grand remedy has stood forth unrivaled in the results it has produced. It is Hunt's Remedy. ## THE RED BRANCH Hydrangea.

Just introduced, and is a great novelty. Is very much prized by lovers of showy and beautiful flowering shrubs. Can be grown in partly shaded location, under trees where no other shrubs would live. Its immense trusses of bright pink florets of long duration (months), and its red branches go to make it one of the most desirable flowering shrubs. I have secured lots of the red branch for April delivery. Also a superb stock of

Red Flowered Dogwood And Japan Snow Ball,

Both of these being wholly new introductions. They are VERY RARE, will be in locations where they will be seen and admired very freely through May and June in season for Memorial Day, when flowers are scarce. All acknowledge the "QUEEN OF THE MARKET" to be the Reed, better wintering, is an annual and abundant bearer, is affected by no insect and brings the highest price in market. I can supply from 50 to 100 dozen of this strawberry in any of above at few prices. Also Haven's Surprise, Moore's Aroma Plant, Nonpareil, Cherry, Pear, Apple and Quince. Remember the early orders receive best attention.
