The World's Wheat Deficiency.

San Francisco Chronicle.

In view of all that has been said of late years respecting the enormously increased production of wheat, the fact that the world's wheat deficiency this season is stated on good authority to be the greatest on record, must prove a genuine surprise to most people. The opening up of new and prolific wheat fields in the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India has been especially the great topic in Europe; and just when the consumers there have become fully convinced that these new countries can be depended on in any emergency, then strangely enough comes the real crisis. Even so late as last season the great bugbear of the European producer was American competition, while the great bugbear of the American press was the supposed undisposable surplus in this country on 100,000,000 bushels of wheat for which it was alleged there could be no opening abroad. That the energy and enterprise of the new world came effectively to the rescue of the old, during a series of poor harvests in the latter, was a circumstance beneficial to both; but the lesson generally drawn from it in America and echoed in Europe have caused it to be looked upon in a different light. To flood the populous countries of Europe, when overtaken by famine, with an abundance of cheap food was all very well, but to represent this flood as certain to go on increasing and become an altogether unwelcome visitor was, as may now be seen, entirely unwarranted.

It is remarkable that notwithstanding all the anticipations to the contrary, no American wheat surplus has yet proved too great for European wants. The wheat acreage of the republic has increased from 26,000,000 in 1875 to 36,000,000 in 1880, but the surplus in the latter case was as much needed as the surplus in the former one. Last season, when it was so confidently predicted that European wants would prove much smaller than the years preceeding, they actually proved larger, and if the American surplus was not fully exported, it was clearly not for the want of a sufficient opening. The great misfortune of Europe last season was that, misled by American advices, her prices were pitched at too low a key to attract at the proper time the neccessary supplies. Hence the 20,000,000 bushels which were held in the eastern states for big profits, as well as the 20,000,000 on this coast which had to be carried over waiting for tonnage, although needed by Europe last season to make up her usual reserves, are only reached her now when peremptorily demanded for immediate consumption. Contrary to general expectation, the world as a whole had no wheat surplus arising from the crop of 1880, and hence the unusually small stock of old wheat and high prices in Europe at the opening of the present season.

The world's wheat deficiency this season, which Beerbohm places at a little over 50,000,000 bushels, promises, according to the latest estimates, to exceed 60,000,000 bushels, or a quantity far in excess of the entire surplus of the Pacific coast. This immense deficiency can, however, be made good from the crop of 1882—whatever may be the result of thus drawing so largely upon the future. India, Australia, New Zealand and Chile will reap their new crop in January, or earlier, and with an urgent demand upon them are likely to ship their entire surplus in time for it to reach England within the season. Egypt and Algeria will also be able to ship largely of their surplus of 1882 within the present cereal year, while the ability of the United States to ship to any needed extent from the new crop in July and August has been very satisfactorily tested of late years. But this drawn upon the future, however successfully accomplished, means a high range of prices during the present season, and in the event of a second year of short crops, may lead to famine prices next season. Unfortunately the immense shrinkage in the corn and vegetable crops of the eastern states adds greatly to the danger of short food supplies. This danger is perhaps even greater for the eastern states and Canada, which have to rely upon themselves, than for England, which can draw supplies from all quarters. The only obstacle now to over-export is the relatively higher price in Chicago than in London, which is frequently referred to as evil. As it is, the United States surplus is being shipped at the rate of 184,886,943 bushels for the year, which was the quantity exported last season, instead of at the rate of 110,000,000 bushels, which is about the average estimate of the surplus this season. Hence the great pinch in Europe cannot take place until spring, when American supplies will be almost entirely at an end.

The Coming Sheep.

Prof. S. A. Knapp, in Keokuk Gate City.

The facility of communication and transportation between remote portions of the world have wrought many changes through competition, and as rapid transit increases other changes in production must take place to meet the new relations.

The wise man accepts the situation and governs himself accordingly.

Among the things materially affected by railroads penetrating remote districts is the production of wool and mutton.

Take the Merinos, once so popular in the northern States; their chief value was in the wool produced; since railroads have penetrated and traversed the cheap lands in the mid continents, wool has become so cheap as to be of minor consequence in sheep husbandry, where formerly it was the valuable consideration. Upon the other hand mutton has become more valuable than formerly. In England and the older States of America mutton is the chief consideration in sheep husbandry; hence, the development of a valuable mutton carcass is receiving special consideration.

The Merinos are too small and the meat has too strong a sheep flavor; the Lincolns and Leicesters are too fat and it is stored, as in swine, upon the outside of the muscle; the Cotswold tend to flesh as in the Lincolns, and are tender in large herds; hence, both in England and America the Downs are receiving marked attention.

At the head of the Royal Downs stands the South Down. They make the most delicious muttons that ever smoked upon royal table, but they are light shearers and moderately small quartered.

They shear about six pounds and dress from sixty to eighty pounds. Public favor in England recently has rapidly drifted towards the Shropshire Downs. They are heavy shearers; the wool is good length and thick; they have short legs, compact, square bodies, long and deep, short neck and small ear; the color of face and legs is brown. The quarters have a large amount of lean meat with fat well interlarded and are nearly fifty per cent heavier than the South Down. The Hampshire Downs are also bidding for popularity for similar reasons, but have not as yet been able to compete with the Shropshires.

A Square Dealer

Detroit Free Press: Yesterday morning a tall young man of twenty landed at the Union depot with a bundle under his arm, and after three or four minutes spent in getting his bearings he walked up Jefferson avenue and turned into a clothing store.

"Do you wish to try on some coats and wests for a dollar?" asked the proprietor, as he rushed from behind the counter.

"No, I guess not. Do you deal on the square?"

"My frent, dot is exactly vhat I does. I vas so square dot I lose $3,000 last year. Can I sell you an overcoat for ten dollars?"

"No, I guess not. Here is an overcoat that I bought of you three weeks ago."

"Bought of me?"

"Yes, I think you are the man. When I got it home, we found that it was moth eaten. I can pick it to pieces in a dozen places."

"Is dot possible! Und how much you pay?"

"Eight dollars."

"My shtars! And vhat you vant now?"

"I want my money back."

"Vhel!—vhell. My frent, I am sorry for you. You seem like an honest poy, and it vhas too bad."

"Yes, it was a swindle, and I want my money back."

"Dear me, but I vish you vhas here yesterday. Let me explain to you. You bought dot coat four weeks ago?"

"Yes, four weeks ago to-day."

"Vhell, I had sold oudt to my cousin Phillip shust one day before. Phillip ish not a square man."

"What have I got to do with Phillip."

"Let me explain. In dree days Phillip makes assignment to my brudder Louis. Dot Louis is a leedle oft. He would sheat youp eyeteeth away from you."

"Yes, but I haven't anything to do with Louis."

"Le. me explain. Louis kept der place a week, und he gif a shattel mortgage to my fadder-law, and vhas bounced out."

"I don't know anything about that."

"Let me explain. My fadder-law was took mit a fit and died, and he leaf dis place to my wife. My wife was gone to Europe for two years and she leaf me as agent. Now you see how it was. I gan not tell you who sold dot coat. May be it vhas Philip, may be Louis, may be my fadder-law. It couldn't haf been me, for I vhas in Shicago. If you leaf dot coat I will write to my wife. She is square, shust like me, and may be she writes back dot you can take a linen duster and two white vests and call it all right."

"Say, this is a sneaking swindle," exclaimed the young man.

"May be it vhas. Philip vhas a great liar."

"I'll go to the police!"

"Vhell, dot is all right; maybe der police vhill help me catch Louis. I shust found oudt last night dot he cut all der hind buttons off all der coats in der store before he left."

"If you'll step out doors I'll mash you!"

"Vhel, I like to oblige you but you see I vhas only agent for my wife."

"Well, you'll hear from me again and don't you forget it!" said the victim as he went out.

"I hope so—I hope so. I like to make it right I vhas only agent for my wife, but I feel so square dot I take dot coat back for $3 if you vhant to trade it out in paper collars!"

Trouble Saved.

It is a remarkable fact that THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL is as good for internal as external use. For diseases of the lungs and throat, and for rheumatism, neuralgia, crick in the back, wounds and sores it is the best known remedy, and much trouble is saved by having it always on hand.

Cattle Supply for Beef.

At no time in a period of many years have there been so few cattle feeding throughout the western states for the late winter and spring market than at present, and also at no time of late years, has the outlook of heavy prices to prevail for well fed bullocks been so favorable as now. The actual scarcity of corn, with the opinion prevailing among feeders that the shortage is greater than it probably is, has nearly stopped the feeding of steers for the markets, and must bring about but one result; an absolute dearth of good beeves in the markets.

Barring the failure of all human calculations at times, it appears to the writer that a much better price for corn than fifty cents per bushel would be obtained by putting it into good solid steers and holding them for the market late in the coming winter or the following spring. A little nerve is sometimes required to fill the basket with the golden ears and scatter them out to fill the hungry maws when the price the said ears command in the market is equally "golden," yet we believe a hungry world will await the appearance of the luscious "marbled" beef on the market in the near future with the "golden" coins for exchange that will inure richly to the feeder. In this there is a possibility of one being mistaken, but so it seems to us at present.
