The Railroad.

Workmen on the railroad bed are now grading between St. John's Church and Sandy Bottom. The grade through Sam Jones' field is not yet completed nor is the bed dressed off down as far as the church. The road bed is finished, except cutovers, as far down as Oak Point. Ox-carts were employed for three days and one hour in filling in at Jones' field but were discharged Thursday morning last because, it is said, of the sickness of the chief engineer. We were told Monday afternoon, last, that the workmen were to break camp at Fred Fenwick's and move further down the road. We were also told that Alex Hebb, through whose farm the road passes below St. John's had stopped the men at his place, pending an agreement as to damages, and they passed over beyond his farm and began work on the line below him. All the residents along the line of the railroad speak in high terms of the workmen and say that they are all quiet, hard-working and law abiding men. The men in charge of the work leave no bills behind them but pay as they go and have plenty of money to meet all obligations.

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, July 28, 1902. Senator Cockrell of Missouri has spent some time in Washington during the past week and has been frequently at the democratic headquarters. When asked by newspaper men for his views in regard to the situation in his party, he has invariably replied that the situation was most encouraging but that he did not deem it wise to talk much at the present time. In a word, the Senator says that if the democrats will work quietly and energetically, each in his own district, this fall, and will leave national issues for the future, there is every reason to assume that public opinion will have so shaped itself before 1904 as to leave no question in the minds of the leaders as to what are the issues which will command support. The Senator appears to be quite certain of democratic success in 1904 and he anticipates that gains will be made this fall, unlike some of the younger members of his party, he is a believer in accomplishing perfect harmony by following the old fashioned injunction, "Say nothing and saw wood."

Whatever other issues may arise and whatever prominence present issues may attain, there is no doubt in the minds of the democratic leaders in Washington that tariff revision will constitute an important feature of the platform on which the democrats will appeal for support in 1904. No faith is placed in Mr. Roosevelt's intention to procure legislation which will actually hamper the trusts and even if he could demonstrate his own sincerity the democrats appreciate his inability to accomplish anything in that direction. As the natural course of the trusts will be to become more powerful and more overbearing there is little doubt but that the people will be glad to seek relief from their extortions at the only source from which there is the least hope of obtaining it. Senator Carmack, who apparently believes, at least to some extent, in Mr. Roosevelt's sincerity, predicts that when the President comes to appreciate the true relations existing between the republicans and the trusts he will become a "democratic ally," but that view of the situation is not generally entertained in Washington.

The reports of Major Glenn's defence in his trial by court martial, which have just reached the War Department, make strong evidence in support of democratic contentions in regard to the real situation in the Philippines. Major Glenn said, among other things, "Every man, woman and child in the islands was an enemy and in my best judgment they are to-day and always will be." This describes the situation precisely as the democrats in Congress described it and sustains the claims of such men as Buencamino and other Filipino proteges of the administration who have testified that their countrymen were ready to receive the domination of the United States with open arms.

Major James Parker of the Adjutant General's office has made public a statement of the officers and men killed and wounded in the Philippines between February 4th, 1899 and July 16th, 1902. The total number of men, including officers, sent to the islands during the period named was 127,938 of which number 7,052 lost their lives, 2,582 by disease and 4,470 from wounds or similar causes. The average strength of the forces in the islands was approximately 40,000 men. The number has been reduced to in the neighborhood of 20,000 but the greatest anxiety is expressed as to the ravages of cholera which it is feared may rapidly increase the death rate. The returns from the islands show examples of the greatest heroism on the part of soldiers doing hospital duty. Many have exposed themselves to cholera in order to nurse their fellow soldiers with apparently no thought as to their own safety.

The general fever of expansion which has resulted from the Spanish war seems likely to endanger the diplomatic relations now existing between the United States and Japan. It seems that one Captain Rosehill some time ago discovered, in the Pacific Ocean, 800 miles east of Yokohama, an island which is known as Marcus Island. The island bears great quantities of guano and Captain Rosehill believing himself to be its discoverer, determined to return and exploit the guano but for some reason failed to do so for a considerable time. He has now sailed for the island; but meantime Japanese government has learned of his intention and has sent a war vessel to protect the rights of certain Japanese citizens who set up a claim to the island. The State Department feels certain that it can protect the rights of Captain Rosehill if he does not resort to violence in his efforts to assert his own claim but if he resists the Japanese authorities it is more than probable that the affair will grow into serious complications which have always existed between the United States and that country.

It is generally believed that President Roosevelt is planning an extensive western trip for this fall, and in requesting his Cabinet officers to speak from the platform in support of his administration, is following the inspiration of President Cleveland who secured the nomination of his party in the face of opposition by the democratic leaders. It is believed that Mr. Roosevelt clearly appreciates the efforts which are being, covertly but not the less surely, made to prevent his nomination for a second term and he relies on his ability to capture popular sentiment to force the republican leaders to nominate him in 1904. The President has frankly avowed his desire of securing the nomination to succeed himself and a careful scrutiny of the callers at Oyster Bay during his vacation will reveal the care with which he is laying his plans and the effort he is making to establish himself in an impregnable position.

Friends of the President take great pride in what they call "the list of the injured," viz: the roster of the Congressmen who opposed the President's Cuban policy, and who have failed of renomination for Congress or at least of indorsement by their own party. The list now includes three senators and eight representatives.

Travels for a Splinter. James E. Williams, a prominent citizen of this place, swallowed a small piece of splinter about two years ago, but, not paying any further attention to the matter, he forgot all about it until a few days ago. Since he has swallowed the splinter he has suffered intensely a number of times with what the physicians thought was a case of pleurisy, and after being confined to his bed and being very ill would get better. Suffering another attack in his side a few days ago, he summoned Dr. J. H. Stonestreet, his family physician, who, upon examination, found a piece of splinter working its way out of his side. He performed an operation by cutting it out, and since then Mr. Williams has fast been recovering, and does not feel the sharp pains which at times threatened his life. The splinter was one and a half inches long, one-quarter of an inch wide and tapered down to a point. It is supposed that it worked through his throat or stomach into his side, and this accounts for the excruciating pains he has suffered for the past two years.—Boyd's (Md.) Correspondence of Baltimore American.

FISHERMAN'S PATIENCE.—The patience of fishermen who really love the sport is the theme of many stories. One is told by a man who, traveling on foot through part of England, came upon a solitary fisherman, who looked as if time and the world might pass away without disturbing his content. "Have you fished long in this stream?" asked the traveler. "Eighteen year," was the calm response. "Get many bites?" was the next question. The fisherman scarcely turned his gaze from the rod in his hands. "Five year ago in this very spot I had a fine bite," he answered, hopefully.—Youth's Companion.

The Brown Leghorn.

At a farmers institute in Iowa a short time ago a woman gave a most encouraging report of her experience with Brown Leghorn chickens. She said that she had no children to look after, and devoted all the time which she could spare from her household to the care of 550 Brown Leghorn hens, which she kept on a common farm homestead running at large. She said that these hens brought her in an average income of $1,500 each, mostly from their egg product; that they were free from disease; that they went everywhere, and because of them no attempt was made to raise vegetables, small fruits or flowers on the place. No incubator was used. The hens were fed liberally. This statement conflicts with the generally accepted theory that more than 150 or 200 hens cannot be kept on the farm homestead running at large.

DIED.

On Wednesday, July 23, 1902, at the residence of her husband in the 2nd district, JANE A. beloved wife of John H. Turner, in her 58th year of her age. May she rest in peace!
