Omaha 15, Des Moines 4.

There was an uncommonly fine crowd in attendance at the Ball park yesterday, and consequently the management feel much elated. Heretofore the week day assemblages have been much smaller than they should be, considering the magnificent ball the Omaha team has been putting up. Omaha has been clamoring for a winning team here ever since the first introduction of professional ball, and now that they have a winning team it is no more than just and equitable that they should manifest their appreciation by turning out to see them.

The management, too, who have risked their capital and sacrificed their time to furnish the people with this grand summer amusement are deserving of the unstinted support of all citizens who take an interest in this great sport.

But yesterday's game.

Like the two previous contests of this series it was a good one, the visitors leading by a score of 4 to 3 up to the ninth inning.

There was any abundance of beautiful fielding, but up to the juncture above noted scarcely any hitting whatever on either side.

Ted Kennedy was in the box for the Prohibitionists, and for eight consecutive innings he kept the coming champions guessing, holding them down to five scattering hits. He weakened, however, in the ninth, and the boys jumped onto him with both feet, and fairly lambasted the life out of him.

This put the spectators in a good humor for the first time during the struggle, and the fusilade on the diamond was accompanied by an incessant, though not musical, howl in the grand stand. It's a very joyful thing, you know, to see your team transform defeat in the final inning into glorious victory, and it will set a base ball crowd wild any time.

Kid Nichols, who stands pre-eminently at the head of the Western association twirling talent, never pitched a better, stronger or headier game, allowing Macullar's men but four little hits, giving but two their bases on balls and striking out nine. Despite this masterly work, it looked up to the last inning as if Omaha must surely be beaten, but luckily the tide turned just in the nick of time and Selee's men trotted off the field easy winners.

Here is the score:

PUGILISTIC.

A Savage Fight Between the Two Murphys at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—A fight to a finish for a purse of $1,800 took place at the California Athletic club to-night between Frank Murphy, the featherweight champion of England, and Billy Murphy, the featherweight champion of Australia. The ring was entered at 9:20. They weighed 119½ pounds each, the Australian being two inches the taller of the two

Time was called at 9:27. Frank Murphy landed with a left hander on the Australian's stomach. A sharp interchange followed. In the first, second and third rounds honors were about even, but Frank's blows were apparently much heavier in delivery and he led mainly for the ribs. In the fourth Frank landed a sounding right hander on the Australian's wind, and Billy fell on his left knee. On getting up the Australian received a blow on his left rib, while his opponent cleverly guarded his left hand swing. In the eighth a left hander on the chin drove the Australian back. Frank got in several sounders in the round with his right. In the ninth round the Australian kept his man in his corner and followed him closely, when he changed position he kept his hands going constantly and looking for an opening. In the tenth he again crowded the Englishman, and secured a right upper cut for his pains. The Australian was now perspiring freely and inclined to be desperate. In the twelfth a left hander on the Australian's ribs was followed by a clear, straight blow on the Englishman's nose. A clinch followed and the Australian received another left hand upper cut. He came up savage in the thirteenth and chased his opponent into the corner, but in the rush which followed he caught a couple of right and left handed swings in the ribs.

In the fourteenth the Englishman assumed the aggressive and fierce fighting followed, right and left hand swings alternating with savage upper cuts and punches. Both men fought themselves groggy.

In the fifteenth Frank came up a trifle the freshest, but a light left hand swing pushed him to the floor. Immediately after the Australian dazed Frank with a terrific right hand swing on the nose and sent him to the floor.

In the sixteenth Billy came up apparently intending to butt his man out of the ring with his head, but a warning from the referee and some telling upper cuts caused him to quit. He again led for Frank's left ear with his left, and reached him heavily. The Englishman then, with his right hand swing, nearly knocked the groggy Australian from his feet.

In the seventeenth the Australian drew blood from the Englishman's nose in one of his rushes.

In the nineteenth, as Billy came on with his head down, the Englishman caught him on his hip and Billy pitched clear over his opponent, landing heavily on his back.

In the twenty-second Frank led, falling short and receiving in return a left hander on the cheek that floored him.

In the twenty-third, twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth rounds nothing was done and the crowd became very impatient. At the end of the twenty-fifth round the president of the club said that he would have a physician examine the men, as the Australian kept his left down, claiming that he was injured. Time was called, however, for the Twenty-sixth round and the men resumed their tactics of circling around without fighting. At the end of the twenty-seventh round the referee stepped into the ring and said it was apparent that the fight could not go on. He added that the club never did nor never would declare a draw. He would simply declare the fight postponed, and the directors of the club would take measures to find out what was the matter with the fighters.

A Cold Day for Jackson.

BUFFALO, July 30.—Peter Jackson, the colored Australian pugilist, gave an exhibition here last night. This afternoon, in the corridor of the hall, Tom Lees, a member of Jackson's company, asked for salary due him, saying he was going to leave the combination. Jackson said he had no money, and after a dispute the two engaged in a slugging match, in which Jackson was "downed" by his opponent. Lees was afterward ejected from the hotel.

Jackson was billed to-night to spar four rounds with Tom Lynch, the Irish Giant, a big local athlete. Somebody put it into Lynch's head that he could down the darkey, and he sailed into him with that evident intent. The two men began thumping each other with might and main, and the crowd yelled with delight. Finally, in the second round, with a curse that could be heard for blocks, Lynch grabbed Jackson by the legs, pulled his pins from under him, and jumped on him. The audience sprang into the chairs and yelled till the roof cracked. The police rushed in and put a stop to the pugilism.

THE SPEED RING.

Cleveland Races.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 30.—[Special Telegram to THE BEE.]—Everything went smoothly at the driving park this afternoon, where the grand trotting circuit was commenced. It had threatened rain last night and the track had got quite a drenching for two days, but it cleared up and the course was in fine condition when President William S. Edwards called the trotters for the first race. There was a wonderfully large attendance, an unusual thing here for an opening, and the card had the names of forty-four horses for the three classes. There was no delay in any of them, two of them being ended in two straight heats, and the other was over in four innings. During that time two trotters entered the 2:20 list, and two pacers followed suit, the fastest mile being to the credit of the Tennessee pacer, Hal Pointer—2:15¾.

The Michigan mare, Lady Bullion, trotted three fast miles, and has now a record of 2:18¼. Another trotter from the same state, Reference, owned in Detroit, lowered his mark to 2:19¼ in the first event.

These were the notable features of a fine day's sport, which though over quickly were not lacking in interest. For the 2:30 class Reference was a favorite throughout at odds which increased as he won his heats easily. Star Lily showed fast in the third heat, but the talent had their money on reference, and it is not likely she would have won if she could at that stage.

In the 2:24 pace William M. Singerly was the first favorite at 13 to 25 against a big field, and after getting the first heat and a record 2:17¼, he was more confidently backed at 5 to 4. He looked like a winner till the five-year-old gelding, Hal Pointer, was sent along from the third quarter, and though Crit Davis used the whip, Singerly could not keep up the fast clip, for he had gone three-quarters at a 2:15¾ gait. Thereafter Hal Pointer had it his own way, outfinishing Markland each time from the third quarter.

Almont and Lynn W were the choices in the 2:22 trot, but Lady Bullion captured the first heat and was a favorite thereafter. The Kalamazoo mare, Eminence, looked dangerous in the second and third heats, but broke at critical times. Knapsack McCarthy laid Lynn W up till the third heat, but after leading on the home stretch Lady Bullion beat him by a nose.

There are three events for to-morrow, the 2:27 and 2:20 trots and free-for-all pace. On Thursday Axtell starts to beat 2:13¼, the stallion record made by Maxy Cobb. Guy will also trot to beat Maud S's time during the week.

THE BREWERIES ARE SOLD.

The Eastern Syndicate and the Local Firms Agree on Terms.

The Omaha breweries have been sold.

Mr. Maloney, for the eastern syndicate, and the local brewers agreed upon terms yesterday afternoon. To-night the papers will be made out formally completing the transfer. The prices to be paid for each of the local plants has not been divulged, but calculating from Fred Krug's declaration to a BEE reporter last week, that they wouldn't sell their plant for less than $800,000, it is probable the amount involved in the combined sales is not far short of $1,500,000.

The interested gentlemen also refuse to say who Maloney represents, but even that is hardly needful in view of what they said when interviewed last week. Mr. Krug said it was the Rothchilds of London and Paris who were buying the breweries. Mr. Maloney denied this, but said plainly that it was European money he represented. Then he went on to explain that some years ago, when he was the treasurer of a Colorado county, whose county seat is at Gunison, this fact was made plain to him, i. e., that fear of a continental war would impel wealthy European houses to look to America for safe investments for their surplus capital. From appearances it would seem that he had utilized his idea by entering into the service of the said European capitalists. He is a member of a firm whose main office is in New York city, and which maintains a western department, of which he is the head, at Kansas City.

Mr. Maloney was visited in his room at the Murray last evening. With him were Messrs. Metz and Iler. They confirmed the facts given above, but refused to say anything further until the transfer should be finally and completely made.

Merchants' Week.

Last night one of the most successful meetings of the Merchants' Week association was held in the rooms of the board of trade. There was a large attendance and reports were made showing that all the committees were working energetically and that the prospects for a grand week of entertainments and festivity were most encouraging.

The City Council.

The architects of the new city hall reported to the council meeting last night that plans for the building are now complete, and the council decided to hold a special meeting on Friday night to consider the plans. The other business of the council was of a routine nature.

FICHTING BY THE BOOK.

Dempsey's Experience With a Swell Pupil in San Francisco.

Jack Dempsey told me this story the other evening, says a writer in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch: "I never made a business of teaching for several reasons. It is not satisfactory from a financial standpoint, and it has many annoyances. If you teach you are tied to your pupils and must not break your engagements with them. You cannot dispose of your time with as good results as if you are free. Now and then, though, I have given lessons to my friends for nothing, and once I had a pupil who paid me. That was in San Francisco; he was a physician of that city and gave me $20 a lesson. I would not go through the same trouble again for $200 a lesson. He was one of those theatrical athletes who have their heads stuffed full of rules, and he nearly had me crazy. A bout with him was like a policy game—'one' meant a straight left hander; 'two' a straight right hander; 'one-two' a right hand cross counter; 'two-four' a left hand swing; then there was 'two-four-two' and 'four-two-four' and 'five-seven-eight' and all other combinations you can make out of the numbers below ten. He insisted that I should go by the book and was kind enough to show me everything. Dash the thing, I got those figures on the brain trying to learn, and could not sleep for the nightmare they gave me. I got the book to see if he really understood it himself. Yes, he had it all straight. It did not seem to occur to him that instead of me teaching he was teaching me. Finally when in the middle of one of his lectures I did this. (Here Dempsey drew back his left fist and threw forward his left foot with a violent motion, clenching his teeth as he did so.) 'What is the matter of this?' I asked as I sent a good hot left-hander at him. As I expected, both his hands flew up in front of his face and that one motion scattered all his theory. It was not a particularly hard punch, but it landed fair in his stomach and doubled him up in a corner. When he got on his feet again he remembered an engagement he had been neglecting and went right off to attend to it. That was the last I saw of him and I must say I was glad. I would have gone insane if he had kept on trying to stuff me with his book. What he was doing was good enough if he only intended to show his friends how clever he was in a parlor, but for fighting purposes it was absolutely useless. The power of hitting hard, getting away quickly and standing prolonged and severe hammering only comes from practice. Rules which can do a pugilist any good are very few and very simple and he soon learns them by experience. Reading books will never teach any man how to fight, and I doubt if it will help him."

The English Parliament.

Mr. Augustine Birrell, who recently entered the British parliament as a member for Fife shire, does not seem to have a high opinion of parliamentary life. In a chapter of an additional volume of Obiter Dicta, just published, he says: "The avaricious man 'commences politician' in the hope of getting a place; the loquacious man in the hope of getting hearers; the handsome man in the hope of getting admirers; the inconveniently rich man in the hope of getting rid of some money; the man who likes good feeding in the hope of getting good dinners; the man who is bored by the domestic hearth in the hope of getting his evenings out; the high born man in the hope of getting favorably compared with the other sort of men; the lawyer who cannot obtain briefs in the hope of getting compensation for failure." To which class does Mr. Birrell belong?

INDIGNANT AT THE INDIANS

Public Sentiment Against the Prisoners at Pender.

A Change of Public Opinion.

PENDER, Neb., July 30.—[Special to THE BEE.]—Public sentiment is rapidly turning against the Indian prisoners in jail at this place on suspicion of being the murderers of the little Benjamin boy last Saturday afternoon. The chief cause assigned for the sudden change in public opinion is the fact that yesterday afternoon, when the prisoners were being brought into town, a white man, who is married to a sister of Henry M. Rice, the halfbreed implicated, met the party and in an excited manner cried aloud to Rice: "Now, Henry, don't you answer a d——d question until I see you!" Many, who a few hours ago, pretended to believe the shooting accidental, are now united in the opinion that "there's a nigger in the fence," and unless the Indians can produce stronger testimony in their favor than it is now believed possible for them to do saltpeter will not save them.

A Case of Unintentional Bigamy.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., July 30.—A peculiar and interesting case of unintentional bigamy has just been brought to light in this city. Henry Jones, a truck farmer, now living near this city, about five years ago married Alice Morrow, a girl about fifteen years his junior, the daughter of a small market gardener living near Peoria, Ill. For one year their married life was a happy one, and the girl, who was thought by Jones' friends to be somewhat wild, tamed down and made a most exemplary wife. At the end of fifteen months Mrs. Jones became discontented and went to Ottawa for a visit. While there, it is said, she eloped with a member of a minstrel company which was playing there at the time. Jones, when he heard of the matter, made but little fuss and no attempt to catch his runaway wife. A few months later he received a copy of a paper containing a notice of the death of his wife at Lafayette, Ind. His season of mourning was short and he soon began to make love to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Morrow, who had taken up her residence with Jones upon the death of her husband, which occurred shortly after her daughter's marriage. Seven months after Jones heard of the death of his wife he led the blushing widow to the altar at Peoria. The couple came to Nebraska City about three years ago and have since lived near here.

Two weeks ago Jones was startled by the appearance of his girl-wife. She said she had led a bitter life and weary and heartsick had determined to seek her husband, hoping for shelter if not forgiveness. She had been to the old home, and there learned that her husband and mother had come to Nebraska City, but her friends had told her nothing of the marriage, which had been kept as secret as possible. She explained the death notice as part of the game she had played in order to escape pursuit and recovery. Mr. Jones was in the city yesterday consulting an attorney as to what ste
