The world's fair is meaning a lot of traveling this year to many people who haven't always had the summer traveling bee in their bonnet, and who don't, as a rule, mind resting and enjoying the comforts of home in the warm weather.

With women, very much of the comfort of traveling depends upon clothes. Selecting the right clothes, making them comfortably and appropriately, having the little conveniences in dress that are not always absolutely necessary at home. There must not be easily wrinkled wash goods, things that are hard to do up. Yet some wash things are necessary for hot days and for long train trips.

Besides clothes, toilet conveniences must be taken. You will find only such comfort in soaps and creams and lotions as you take with you. And you cannot keep fresh and from travel stain without some watchfulness and good grooming.

For your much-to-be-worn, all-around, useful dress get Mohair, a fine quality plain or figured. Make it with a short skirt, gored or tucked, not plaited, and with a loose, half-length North, or circular sash belt at the back. Line the coat with exactly the same shade of silk and leave the skirt unlined.

Have two petticoats of pongee or grass linen, the latter is four times cheaper; and wear tan shoes and stockings and dogskin gloves.

With this suit, have one pongee waist, two of butcher's linen, one of white wash silk and one of dark cotton chevot. Do not get a stock of percale or mull or lawn waists, that are never, under most favorable circumstances, fresh more than one day. Have one dark crush leather belt, and two linen that will wash. Linen collars, plain and starched, are the neatest neckwear, and can be made fresh in a few hours at any port, but if they are a bit uncomfortable, wear simply riding stocks or a dark ribbon the color of the frock, with numerous fresh turn-over bands, plain.

A stitched linen hat, with a pom-pom, a dark veil, or a plain soft felt, the latter for long trip. No linen duster, they are fashionable again, but crush in one warm hour, and no light colored linen suit and white shoes, never. If you wish to visit a little as well as travel, or if you are to be with friends at the end of the journey, there are more clothes of course, a plaited short tulle skirt, with fancy wash waists and a pretty lingerie hat and patent leather ties. Or a pongee shirt-waist suit with some pretty hand embroidery. But these are extras.

If you want to travel with as few clothes as possible, you can do much towards keeping a small supply of waists and stocks fresh and clean yourself. Wash waists and pongee and cotton chevot, and all sorts of turn-over collars, handkerchiefs and stockings wash easily and perfectly.

In a bowl of cold water put a teaspoonful of borax and leave articles to soak half an hour, then get a bowl of hot water, add the same amount of borax, rub lightly, rinse in clear cold water, and your washing is over. The stockings and wash-silk waists do not need ironing at all, the collar bands and handkerchiefs will dry if patted on a widow pane and the pongee and chevot waists you can smooth with an iron, heated over gas or alcohol, or you can get the chambermaid to press them for a few cents a piece.

A grass linen petticoat can be worn without pressing, and none of these garments require starch. So your laundry bill, with a little pure borax comes to about ten cents a week, exclusive of "white things."

If you limit yourself to gauze knitted suits, these too can be neat by done up by home talent. Smartly comfortably dressed, with a knowledge of how to keep so without much trouble for expense, the next important step to insure pleasant traveling is the right packing of your dress-suit case. You must have a bath gown of some pretty goods, flannel or cotton crepe. The most comfortable are made kimono fashion, but fuller, and very long. This to wear to the train dressing-room. Have this garment becoming fresh and dainty, if you have one other dress for your whole trip. And a short thin dressing sacque of cotton crepe, or croponne, on lawn if you have an iron with you. This to be worn at night in the sleeper and for convenience in your hotel room. And you must have slippers. You can get pretty Turkish affairs to match your bath gown for 50c. A whisk broom and a felt rubber for your shoes, and a manicure set and small brush and comb, then of course, but just as important, a bottle of alcohol to freshen water when bathing the face, cold cream, plenty of it, a good olive oil soap to use at night with warm water, a bottle of listerine for mouth and tooth wash and some clean old muslin.

At night, when you are traveling or sight-seeing, bathe the face in warm water and olive oil soap, wipe the skin dry and massage with pure cold cream. In the morning put a teaspoonful of borax in a tub of cold water and take a good plunge, or in the cars, a pinch of the powder in a basin for a sponge bath. During the day do not put water on the face. If the skin is dry or dusty or you want to freshen up before reaching your destination, take your tube of cold cream to the dressing-room, loosen your collar, then rub cold cream thoroughly all about the face, ears and neck, massage a minute or two and rub off with a clean bit of old muslin. Powder the face with some pure rice powder and you will not only feel fresh and clean, but rested. Next brush the hair thoroughly and do it up neatly. Put on a fresh collar, and you are smart enough for the most exacting hostess. If you cannot get warm water at night, use cold cream instead of cold water and soap. But always cold water in the morning. Spend as little time in the toilet room as possible to dress neatly, if you want to be popular, and go from your berth to the dressing-room looking so tidy and pretty that you will not mind the passengers remembering about it when you come back dressed for the day.

Quit Your Whining.
There isn't anything in the world more disagreeable than a whining person. He whines if it is hot; he whines when it is cold; he whines at this, and he whines at that—he whines at everything.

Whine, whine, whine. It is just a habit he has fallen into. There is nothing the matter with him—it is just a bad habit. The whiner is generally an idle person or a lazy one. What he needs is to be set to work at real hard work, mental or physical—some work that will interest him, and engage his whole attention, and he will have no time left in which to whine.

We know two women. One of them does her own housework, and takes care of her horse besides. She is happy and singing all the day long. The keyboard of her life sounds no whining note. It is a pleasure to be with her, a good, wholesome tonic to watch her. The other woman is so situated that she does not have to work—nothing to do but to amuse herself. She has no zest in life, no interest in anything. She is a bunch of selfishness, and she whines at everything. Whining has become such a habit with her that her most casual remark is tinged with whine. She is miserably herself, and makes everybody else in her presence miserable. She is a weakling, a parasite—a drag, a heavy weight on somebody all the time.

Get the whine out of your voice, or it will stop the development and growth of your body; it will narrow and shrink your mind; it will drive away your friends, and make you unpopular. Quit your whining. Brace up. Go to work. Be something. Stand for something. Fill your place in the universe. Instead of whining around, exciting only pity and contempt, face about, and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of an ennobling manhood; to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work.—Medical Talk for the Home.

A Ban 'Abit.
Dr. Albert Hoffa of the University of Berlin was the guest of honor at the annual banquet in Philadelphia of the Alumni Association of the Jefferson Medical College. The subject of miracles and miraculous cures came up, and, in his excellent English Dr. Hoffa said:
"I remember a discussion about miracles that I once heard in a law court. An attorney was examining a witness, trying to get him to show that he understood the nature and the meaning of miracles, and finally he said:
"Now, my good man, you know what a miracle is, I am sure."
"Well, I ain't so positive," the witness answered uneasily.
"Let us, then, illustrate the matter. For instance," said the lawyer, "suppose that you should fall from the top of a church steeple without hurting yourself. What would you call that?"
"I guess I'd call it an accident," said the witness.
"The lawyer frowned. Then he took courage and tried again.
"Very good. Very true. It would be an accident," he said. "But suppose you should fall from the top of the church steeple without hurting yourself a second time. What would it be then?"
"The witness rubbed his forehead and meditated.
"I judge it would be a coincidence," he said slowly.
"Oh, dear me!" exclaimed the lawyer. "Can't I make you understand at all?" He hesitated, frowning, and then again he took courage. "Now, my man," he resumed, "see here. I'll continue on the same line. Suppose you should fall from the top of that steeple a third time—mind you, a third time. What, then, would you call it?"
"A third time?" said the witness.
"A third time," repeated the lawyer.
"Well," said the man, "I guess I'd call it a habit."

The Care of the Hands and Feet.
Perhaps nothing causes more anxiety to the woman who is obliged to do household work than the condition of the hands. In a thorough article by Dr. Grace Peckham Murray in the August Deliverator are these instructions, which anyone can follow:
"Beside protecting the hands with gloves, one can do much to keep them in condition by the use of proper soap—one that has not too much alkali, which most scented soaps have—and by applying plenty of grease before drying them. White vaseline answers the purpose for the majority. It is well to have some always on the washstand, to be able to rub it in just before drying the hands. Vasoline does not always agree with the skin any more than glycerine, which by itself can be used by few. A good preparation is glycerine which has been diluted with water and rosewater in equal parts, or glycerine, rosewater and tincture of benzine, one-third of each. The hands should be most carefully dried after washing. The use of almond meal is good in this process."
In addition, the art of manicuring is explained in detail, with pictures that render it easy to keep the nails of the hands and feet in good condition.

Loker & de Wall
ask the readers of this paper who are suffering with indigestion or dyspepsia to call on them at once and get a bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. If you know the value of this remedy as we know it, you would not suffer another day. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is a thorough digestant and tissue-building tonic as well. It is endorsed personally by hundreds of people whom it has cured of indigestion, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart and stomach troubles generally. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. It is pleasant, palatable and strengthening.

When a man's hair stands on end, an ordinary person says his hair stands; but you can't get a doctor to talk in that way. The doctors call it horripilation. This makes the patient's hair stick up worse than ever, but it gives the family confidence in the doctor.
