CHATTANOOGA DAILY REBEL.

[illegible] with national pride and feeling we hail the overthrow of Slavery and rule which all in value and every element [illegible] of a weather and so entirely unfavorable to a land so [illegible] and free, with heart-rending and [illegible] unmeasured, where the [illegible] are upturned and desolate.

[illegible] over the victories which have made the name of the Confederate States immortal [illegible] boasted of our freedom and hatred of tyrannies [illegible] have even [illegible] their right to [illegible] and hatred and [illegible] is at [illegible] and is [illegible] The maintenance of their independence [illegible] years, has confirmed their [illegible] an' [illegible] and they have [illegible] that our final triumph was certain and assured. But the disasters which have befallen us in the last few months have startled many of them like a clap of thunder from a clear sky. They were not [illegible] for, and the surprise and [illegible] feeling have been proportionally great. Many of them are now as despondent as they were [illegible] before; as despondent as they were elated. They have sunk as far below the level at which they were [illegible] high above it. This is not a [illegible] of the [illegible] of their character. [illegible] of determined and heroic [illegible] which are merely [illegible] complaints of the [illegible] the late terrible [illegible] and [illegible] with the [illegible] time after time, [illegible] enemy [illegible] people [illegible] people [illegible] of Virginia [illegible] defeated again and again, but the spirit of the people has not given way. Georgia [illegible] overrun by a victorious [illegible] still [illegible] and indomitable. [illegible] those of the territory. Invading armies [illegible] way through the country, but the [illegible] behind them and the people proceed [illegible] with energy to repair their disasters and [illegible] the prosperity and plenty before enjoyed.

We should struggle on [illegible] the slightest hope [illegible] to supplement or despair, [illegible] trust in the righteousness of our cause [illegible] our hopes upon the [illegible] and [illegible] steadily forward to the [illegible] liberty shall shine forth in splendor [illegible] dispel the gloom which now surrounds [illegible]

The following are the Divisions [illegible] Gordon Granger's corps, now operating [illegible]

First Division—Brig. Gen. [illegible] C. Vaughn, [illegible] Volunteers.

Second Division—Brig. Gen. C. G. [illegible] Illinois.

Third Division—[illegible] Brigadier-Gen. Vaughn [illegible] 16th army corps.

[illegible] Yulee [illegible]

[illegible] Wade [illegible] of War [illegible]

[illegible] were encamped with national pride and feeling [illegible] the overthrow of Slavery and rule which all in value and every element [illegible] weather and so entirely unfavorable to a land so [illegible] and free, with heart-rending and [illegible] unmeasured, where the [illegible] are upturned and desolate.

[illegible] over the victories which have made the name of the Confederate States immortal [illegible] boasted of our freedom and hatred of tyrannies [illegible] have even [illegible] their right to [illegible] and hatred and [illegible] is at [illegible] and is [illegible] The maintenance of their independence [illegible] years, has confirmed their [illegible] an' [illegible] and they have [illegible] that our final triumph was certain and assured. But the disasters which have befallen us in the last few months have startled many of them like a clap of thunder from a clear sky. They were not [illegible] for, and the surprise and [illegible] feeling have been proportionally great. Many of them are now as despondent as they were [illegible] before; as despondent as they were elated. They have sunk as far below the level at which they were [illegible] high above it. This is not a [illegible] of the [illegible] of their character. [illegible] of determined and heroic [illegible] which are merely [illegible] complaints of the [illegible] the late terrible [illegible] and [illegible] with the [illegible] time after time, [illegible] enemy [illegible] people [illegible] people [illegible] of Virginia [illegible] defeated again and again, but the spirit of the people has not given way. Georgia [illegible] overrun by a victorious [illegible] still [illegible] and indomitable. [illegible] those of the territory. Invading armies [illegible] way through the country, but the [illegible] behind them and the people proceed [illegible] with energy to repair their disasters and [illegible] the prosperity and plenty before enjoyed.

We should struggle on [illegible] the slightest hope [illegible] to supplement or despair, [illegible] trust in the righteousness of our cause [illegible] our hopes upon the [illegible] and [illegible] steadily forward to the [illegible] liberty shall shine forth in splendor [illegible] dispel the gloom which now surrounds [illegible]

The following are the Divisions [illegible] Gordon Granger's corps, now operating [illegible]

First Division—Brig. Gen. [illegible] C. Vaughn, [illegible] Volunteers.

Second Division—Brig. Gen. C. G. [illegible] Illinois.

Third Division—[illegible] Brigadier-Gen. Vaughn [illegible] 16th army corps.

[illegible] Yulee [illegible]

[illegible] Wade [illegible] of War [illegible]

[illegible] Grant [illegible] Richmond [illegible] Lee [illegible] Richmond, and seriously [illegible]

Lincoln had issued a proclamation [illegible] of all Foreign Diplomatic [illegible] and authority for vessels in [illegible] which are extended to those of other [illegible]

The movements of Sherman's army [illegible]

Seward has notified foreign powers that no more passports will be granted entrance to their ports.

Gold in New York 1[illegible]

[illegible] prisoners [illegible] report that the flags were at half-mast at Montgomery on Sunday morning, for the death of Lincoln and Seward, who were assassinated at Washington on Friday night.

Lincoln was shot at the Theatre while the man and [illegible] accomplice shot and was assassinated [illegible]

[illegible] Booth is reported to be the assassin. Every effort is exerted to capture the murderers but thus far proved unsuccessful.

[illegible] were arrested in Memphis on Sunday for expressing joy at the above news.

[illegible] said to have [illegible] the death of President Johnson. A hat and spur found in Lincoln's box at the Theatre, were recognized as belonging to J. W. Booth.

Fred. Seward's condition is said to be very critical.

We had read a correspondence published in the Yankee Vicksburg papers which purports to have passed between Gens. Lee and Grant in regard to the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, and which, according to the correspondence, resulted in the surrender of that army. The terms of capitulation were that the men should stack their arms and that the colonels of the respective regiments should sign paroles for their men, binding them not to take up arms against the United States until regularly exchanged, the officers to retain their side arms, horses and private property.

There is no doubt that the letters were published in the Yankee papers, and they have an appearance of authenticity about them. We, however, believe the whole proceeding to be a hoax. The story is so improbable and so utterly unreasonable that we cannot give it credit. The correspondence was no doubt written by some absent Yankee editor who desired to produce a sensation.

Such tricks are not new. Lord [illegible] celebrated [illegible] many years ago, [illegible] a spurious correspondence between Lord John Russell and President Davis published in the Mobile papers a year ago are parallel frauds to humbug the world and produce an excitement. Both looked authentic at the time and were almost universally credited, and both turned out to be the work of practical jokers operating upon popular credulity. We have no doubt that the Grant and Lee correspondence will take its place among the other humbugs which have gone before it, and in a few days be damned as it deserves.

P. S.—Since writing the above we have received the very important telegraphic dispatches which we publish. It will be seen that only a fragment of Lee's army was surrendered.

There is still nothing definite from the movements of Wilson's column towards Georgia. There are rumors that fighting has been going on since the Federal column left Montgomery without any decisive result. If there is any force combating the advance of the Yankees, we presume that it is only a portion of our cavalry attempting merely to retard their progress until arrangements can be completed at Columbus to make effective resistance.

Funeral Notice.

The friends and acquaintances of James and Mary Brown, are invited to attend the funeral of their youngest son James, from the residence of his father, Tuesday 25th instant, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Selma, April 19, 1865.

DIED SUDDENLY.—Mary [illegible], second daughter of James and Mary Brown, died Sunday, April 9th, [illegible] years and 5 months.

[illegible] youngest son, aged five years and [illegible] months, died April 15th.

STRAYED.—For my Exemption papers [illegible] from the Rebel Office, [illegible] reading. J. J. THOMPSON.

Selma, April 19, 1865.

NOTICE.

Those wishing to consult Dr. WILLIAMS will find him at his residence until further notice.

April 19.—6t