HONOLULU, OCTOBER 14, 1874.

We have no later foreign advices to report this week, our latest papers from San Francisco having been brought by the Manoa, with dates to September 22. A guano clipper is looked for hourly, but her arrival has doubtless been delayed by the calm weather prevailing.

The only movements in foreign shipping the past week are the departures of the brig Timandra on the 10th for San Francisco, and of the barkentine Zizo 3 Falkinburg for Portland, Oregon, on the 12th inst., and the whaling and trading schooner Giovanni Aptani on a cruise to the westward. The Falkinburg took a full and valuable cargo.

The barks Mattie Mallory and Rifle are loading for Portland, and the bark Helen W Almy for San Francisco. These are the only vessels now loading for foreign ports.

Local trade has been extremely dull for this season of the year, when it occasioned to be more active. It is thought that most of the Arctic whaling fleet will recruit at this port, but they will not begin to arrive until the close of this month, or the early part of November.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

☞ An American schooner is off the port as we go to press, not yet reported.

☞ Steamer Kinau does not go to windward next week, but will make the circuit of Kauai, leaving on Wednesday the 21st.

☞ By official notice it will be seen that the November term of the Hawaii Circuit Court will open on the 18th, at Waimea.

☞ An eclipse of the moon will take place during the evening of Saturday October 24. It will be total here.

☞ If Madame Bishop's plans, as stated in her communication to us, received by last steamer, are realized, she ought to arrive here in the City of Melbourne and give her long-announced concert on Monday evening next.

For the Mail.—The mails for the United States and Europe will leave by the Cyphrenes, due this week. Files of the Gazette, containing the current news for the month past, can be had at our counter ready for mailing.

☞ The weather for the week between the 5th and 12th has been very calm, and coasting vessels out during the period have had long passages. The Nettie Merrill was three days getting up to Lahaina, the Hattie Kimo from Nawiliwili to this port, and others have been equally unfortunate. On Monday a north wind set in, with a stormy look, which brought with it rain, commencing here about midnight of Monday and continuing through Tuesday. About one inch of rain fell during the night, making three and a half inches for the month so far.

Steamers.—The steamer Cyphrenes, Capt. Wood, was to have left Sydney September 26. As the mail boats are, by the agreement between New Zealand and New South Wales, required to leave Sydney and Auckland alternately, she probably went to Auckland, leaving the latter port October 1. If she took this route, she ought to arrive here on Saturday the 17th, to leave on Sunday for San Francisco.

— The steamer City of Melbourne ought to arrive on Monday next, with the American mails and dates from San Francisco to October 10 or 11.

Kaipakiwa Estate.—This well-known sugar plantation, formerly the property of the late Thos. Metcalf, was sold on Saturday last at auction, by order of the Supreme Court. Before putting it up, the auctioneer, Mr. E. P. Adams, read two protests against the sale, one from Mrs. Beckley and one from the two remaining children of Mr. Metcalf, all heirs of the estate. The first and only bid was from the present owners, Messrs. Along & Achuck, and was handed in in writing—"$1 and $45,000, and the encumbrances on the estate, the whole amounting to $110,000." The plantation is said to have cost the present proprietors $150,000, but they are ready to relinquish their claims for $110,000.

☞ Lately a trade has been developed among some Rochester shippers about which but little is known abroad. It is the trade of dried potatoes. Potatoes are sliced up and dried in much the same manner as dried apples. One firm in that city has an order on hand now for 50,000 pounds of these dried potatoes, as well as for 1500 bushels of onions, which are dried in the same manner. They are intended for the navy. A bushel of potatoes dries away to about ten pounds, and a bushel of onions to about six pounds. When ready, they are put into large tin cans, holding about forty pounds each, and sealed up the same as apples. Would not our sweet potatoes be improved by going through this drying process?

☞ The trial of William Morrow, a seaman belonging to the U.S.S. Benicia, charged with assault, took place on Friday last before Justice Harris in the Supreme Court. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoner was assaulted in a beer shop and bawdy house, and that after two stout canes had been broken over him, he went out and procured a knife with which he inflicted several severe wounds on his assailants. The jury acquitted on the charge for assault with intent to kill, and failed to agree, having stood eight for acquittal and four for guilty of assault with a deadly weapon. A new trial was had on Saturday, which resulted in his conviction, under a charge from the judge, so decisive in its tenor as to leave them no discretion, whereupon he was sentenced to imprisonment for ten days and to pay a fine of $100. Yesterday his case was brought up again before Judges Allen and Harris, on a bill of exceptions and motion to quash the indictment, made by his attorney, A. S. Hartwell, Esq., the decision of which has not yet been given.

Our Gallant Tars.—On Thursday of last week, the sailors of the U.S.S. Benicia and H.B.M.S. Scout joined in a picnic held at Waikiki, near the city. After engaging all the horses, express wagons and vehicles of various descriptions to be found, they assembled on the grounds and spent the afternoon in feasting and sports, without any occurrence to mar their pleasure. If there is anything amusing it is to see Jack astraddle of a horse trying to steer his craft through our streets. The return from the picnic afforded many ludicrous scenes. Here was one carrying a good sized stone tied to a rope. "What are you carrying that stone for, Jack?" shouted a landsman. "To anchor my craft, sir, when she reaches soundings." Another sailor, who appeared not to have learned the use of reins, had run his animal into a board fence. Instead of using the reins to guide his horse into the road, he undertook to push him away from the fence, exclaiming,—"Shove her off—shove her off!" as if he was in a boat among the breakers. The last we saw of our nautical friend, he was under full sail with a fair wind, heading for port, the reins flying loose, with both hands grasping the pommel of his saddle, while his stirrupots bobbed up and down, like a pilothouse crossing San Francisco bar in a sou'west gale. However, all's well that ends well, and the day passed off so far as we heard, without accident or trouble, and much to the pleasure of the crews of the Scout and Benicia, who will long remember the 8th of October in Honolulu.

Letter from Japan.

Osaka, July 26, 1874.

Editor of the Gazette: Dear Sir:—As you expressed a wish to hear from us, after we arrived at Japan, and as my children are too busy, studying Japanese, &c., to write, I will jot down for you some of my first impressions.

We reached this, our home, for the present, just two months from Honolulu, without serious accident, having had a most cordial welcome to Japan, at Yokohama and Kobe; and the same was given us here. These are splendid cities, and must have had many features to admire before foreigners were domiciled in them, but they have improved rapidly since, as those parts of the cities in which foreigners reside, testify.

The country is a grand one; of mountains, hills, and valleys, brooks, rivers and canals; and yielding abundantly, almost everything essential to the comfort of its inhabitants.

Rice, the great staple, covers nearly all the land, on each side of the railroad from Kobe to Osaka, about twenty miles; and is well irrigated and cultivated. Sweet and Irish potatoes, squashes, beets, cabbage, egg-plants and cucumbers; sweet corn, beans, peas, peaches, (of good size and flavor), plums, straw-berries, and other small fruit are in the market, and at moderate prices. Also poultry and eggs. Fish are very plenty. Beef, pork, and mutton, rather scarce and dear. Wheat, barley, and buckwheat, are grown. But fine flour, and butter, can only be had from abroad.

Osaka, though a city of half a million inhabitants, is not picturesque in appearance, its site being very level; and yet its many water courses, with their 130 bridges, in addition to its swarming population, make it an object of great interest. It is so thoroughly intersected by streams that a short walk in almost any direction, brings you to one. I stood this morning, on one bridge, and counted three or four others, over the same stream. In one stream, or canal, I'm not sure which. I counted ten small steamers, and a great many junks, coasters, and fishing boats. These, except the steamers, abound in all the considerable streams.

The streets are generally narrow and crooked. The houses are contiguous, and covered with tiles, perhaps three quarters of an inch thick, of a dark slate color, occasionally the conspicuous edges are plastered white. Many of the streets are paved, with broken tiles set on the edge, and so close together as to be very firm, and the middle of the street is a little elevated. The gutters are often made of stone hollowed out for the purpose, and flanked on each side with long strips of the same. Hence they are easily kept clean. There are a few open spaces, with here and there a noble tree. I saw one about three feet in diameter, and fifty or sixty feet high, a species of pine, I think. They have pine, cedar, camphor, and various other kinds of timber. Plorickshas are very numerous. An Englishman here thought there might be 10,000 in this city. Many of them are very handsome, being neatly painted, and varnished, and bound and ornamented with brass; and kept bright and clear. The body is like a very small sulkey, and on low wheels. They are often used to carry burdens, as well as passengers, and at a very cheap rate. The best of them are very comfortable vehicles; but most of them are too small. It is quite ludicrous, to see, as we often do, men without hat or pants, riding in them. Yours very truly. P. J. Gulick.

The Proposed Steamer.

Mr. Editor:—I have been somewhat surprised to witness the unanimity with which the Press endorse the job of building a steamer for the Government. It is evident that but one side of the matter has been looked at, and that from a point of view thoroughly selfish—purely personal. This is one of the first fruits of the Loan Bill which you so persistently opposed. Some few persons believe that the Million of dollars to be borrowed can be had, nay, must be had, upon any terms; and with an instinct and genius as true and intuitive as ever actuated a Tweed, Sweeny or a Connolly, they prepare to "go for it." The leading business firms have in stock some article or articles that are slow of sale, but which, if the steamer is built, will be lively. When approached as they doubtless will be, upon their sordid side, the result is they "see it." The whole thing is on a par with the Hotel job, which at first was to cost, at the outside, not over $80,000, but which at the end footed up $138,000. If I am correctly advised, the estimated cost of the steamer is $150,000. If this job is as well "watered" as the Hotel job was, it will reach the handsome sum of $175,000,—in which be safe to say $150,000; or if the bonds are hawed at less than par, perhaps $200,000. Aye, but, say the promoters of the scheme, the money is to be spent here,—don't you see? I must say I cannot, and I am not troubled with strabismus;—I confess I have no material to put into the "pot."

The "Advertiser" is pleased to say that your trenchant articles on the Loan Bill have given the natives a false impression,—that is, they have received the idea that the country, by the agency of the Bill, is to be plunged irretrievably into debt. This steamer job will prove your judgment to have been most sound and prophetic.

I cannot believe that His Majesty's advisers,—the responsible men, I mean,—will seriously entertain the scheme. Taxpayer.

[Communicated.]

Honolulu, Oct 12th, 1874.

Editor of the Gazette—Sir:—I ask your permission to say a few words to the Advertiser's pharisaical correspondent "Justitia," and shall commence by stating that I dissent entirely from the issue of the proposition with which he begins his letter. I am sure there is no sane man in this community but will say that the ways of the Editor of the Gazette have been perfectly straight and clear. No "mystery" is attached by any one but obfuscated "Justitia" to the meaning of the utterances of the Gazette. Even the oblivious Advertiser understands them. No, "Justitia," they are as plain as the nose on your face, or the bloom of your "cheek."

He "who spake as man never spake," never consorted with dishonest, corrupt or hypocritical men. He called them by their right names, and this is the first time I have known His teaching quoted as a proof that man's "frailty," (as Justitia" mildly puts it,) should in any way be condoned, or crime and deceit hid under a bushel. In pleading for such infirmities and frailties, "Justitia," you "overleap the bounds set upon rational justice and fixed by the interests of a sound social code."

"Justitia" calls for justice. Know you not, my friend, that, if your "confreres" had their "pound of flesh," the Minister you seek to defend would be—Ahem!—certainly not Minister of Law here, and that the sworn spirits who control the Advertiser would be working on some other account than their own.

Poor "Justitia," what on earth has made you join the forlorn hope? Why put your carcass into the hopeless breach? The cause is bad enough without your making it worse. Its adherents are at their last gasp, and must soon surrender unconditionally, or what is more likely will cut and run.

Why a dealer in liquors should not hold office under the Government, as well as a dealer in anything else, is as obtuse, as it is characteristic of "Justitia's" charitableness and the christian spirit he evokes. It is even possible for a publican to be as honest as any individual in the community. It is not an illicit traffic. It is sanctioned and encouraged by the laws of the land. The fact that Messrs. Bass and Allsopp brew more beer than all the brewers of Europe combined would not render them ineligible to become Premiers of England, if their abilities and "personal record" fitted them for the office. Impartial "Justitia," don't "gormandize" over this dish too much; it may be "incexpedient." You will find it hard to digest. Then by and bye you will tell us men should not eat; and so there would be no sauce required for all the flock of geese you have under your charge.

The "dark hints and insinuations," dear friend, can be made light, and your "supposed myths" plain and palpable creations, by application to either "Ubiq," "Brigham Young," "Fredericksburg," or the undersigned; but first see that your peruke is secure, for I promise you it will be likely to "raise it."

About the "cowardly" part of the transaction, you and your friends know best. Now speak the truth, and tell me if you do not sometimes, in the Advertiser, "sanctum," fight your battles o'er again, and join in the triumphal pean,

"He who fights and runs away
May live to fight another day."

Come, Justitia! Toss'e my glove! Divest yourself of your sheep's clothing! Cease your whining and hypocritical-sympathy-mongering. Stand forth! Show your opponents' charges false, and your own men good and true; or else forever hold your peace. Resurgam.
