Chairman M. C. Pacheco of the Democratic Territorial Central Committee issued the following statement today on the election results:

"In behalf of the Democratic party of Hawaii I desire to thank the voters of the island of Oahu for the splendid repudiation of Kuhio's ruinous policy of attacking the interests of this territory and the decent people of this community. I desire to assure the people that the Democratic party stands for a square deal for all and that under our administration all interests will be respected.

"On my own behalf I desire to thank the voters for their support of my candidacy for supervisor, and I desire to say that I shall endeavor to aid in a progressive, economic and efficient city and county government."

It was not joy uncontined, for a room 18x15 was rather confining for the occasion, and it was not joy unrestrained for Rivenburgh was yelling all the time to stop the noise so he could get more joy over the phone. Neither was the joy quite unadulterated, for there were two or three little offices not captured.

Joy it was, big and deep, that reigned at Democratic headquarters last night from the time the figures began to trickle in shortly after six o'clock until they stopped coming after midnight. It was not much space the Democrats had for the focus of their rejoicing—only two office rooms, separated by a stretch of corridor, in the Waity building, but as the throng kept changing between the interior and outdoors there was not much trouble, considering the circumstances in arranging to have elbow room for those handling the figures and passing out the bulletins that were hauled across the street on an endless cord in midair and reproduced by lanterns for the benefit of the cheering thousands on the streets. Now and then the one window of the campaign committee room, where the news was gathered, would have to be cleared of a jam of men so as to let in some air. Good cheer was easily maintained, even to stopping of applause and cheering when necessary for receiving and announcing intelligence from mainland, island and precinct. In only one solitary instance was it necessary to eject an excessively noisy person, the incident beginning and ending quicker than it takes to tell.

Varying the intermittent rejoicing over successive messages of victory were frequent demonstrations of welcome to the inner room of candidates wreathed in the leis and smiles of triumph, who were received with glad hands all round and hearty spoken congratulations. Ever and anon cheering would break out in the corridor as a worker coming in with a precinct tally sheet dropped glad news in passing along. Always the roar of conversation from the street, broken over and again with tumultuous cheering over the bulletin freshly thrown on the screen, swelled the audible volume of rejoicing, even if occasionally the sounds came from the vanquished element over little scraps of consolation, as when it was flashed that The Prince has swept Maui," which, being announced after the figures from practically all the rest of the Territory showed McCandless leading for Congress by something like thirty-nine, caused the only tangible gloom of the night in Democratic headquarters.

In the room next the head of the stairs a female glee club was stationed all the evening, putting forth melodies of ancient mele and modern "rag." This apartment served also as a resting place for old folks waiting on the returns of victory.

Charles J. McCarthy, manager of headquarters and successful candidate for county treasurer, presided at the receiving and issuing desk, while B. G. Rivenburgh, chairman of the county committee, handled the telephone throughout the evening—a most exacting task—and Messrs. Pacheco, successful candidate for supervisor, Henry Asch, William Miles and others did the tabulating and handed out the bulletins for lantern display. It was all in high degree systematic, and there was not a moment when any information in hand could not be given out immediately in response to inquiries.

FIRST ELECTION NEWS GIVEN PUBLIC BY STAR-BULLETIN

Honolulu got its election news from The Star-Bulletin yesterday and last night, and as The Star-Bulletin had promised, it gave the news first.

After this paper had issued, a 5:30 o'clock extra with the story of Wilson's election and the full election news up to that hour, it began its bulletin news service to all parts of the city.

Election returns were coming in from the mainland by Associated Press cable and by Federal Telegraph Wireless. During the latter part of the evening the wireless "flashes" were often only a few seconds apart and the Associated Press messages a few seconds after they came from the wires.

At 9:30 o'clock another extra was issued from The Star-Bulletin with all the news up to that time.

The extras sold as rapidly as they could be printed and the editions were completely exhausted within a few minutes of their appearance on the street.

The excellent service rendered by the Federal Wireless Telegraph, the cable company, the local wireless company, and the courtesies extended this paper at Republican headquarters completed a well-rounded service.

The Star-Bulletin's headquarters in the Republican headquarters enabled this paper to get the local news to the public several minutes ahead of all competitors. In addition to flashing election returns on its screen at Merchant and Fort streets, this paper furnished a complete service to the Clarion, Fort and Hotel streets; to the theaters, University Club, Rathskeller, Schofield Barracks and various other places.

Wireless messages from the other islands supplemented the local and mainland service, and the street crowds were given the returns within made possible the scheduling of returns quicker than they were shown by others.

RAPID GROWTH IN EXPORTS TO CANADA

Exports from the United States to Canada are now averaging $1,000,000 a day. Three years ago they averaged a half million dollars a day, and a dozen years ago they averaged a quarter of a million dollars a day.

Klosseman (out calling)—Why do you look at me so intently, little man? Bobby—I was looking to see if you was black. K—Black! Why should you think I was black? B—Cause I heard pa say you was awful niggardly.
