KINGS AND POTENTATES THE WORLD OVER ON ONE ST. LOUIS MAN'S MAILING LIST

John H. McGibbons, Practical and Democratic, Is More Than Busy With Gigantic Job of Forwarding World's Fair Prizes to 72,000 Winners, Selected With Discriminating Care by the Superior Jury—Commemorative Diplomas and Medals Going to Every Part of the Earth.

EXPOSITION AWARD DIPLOMA
The first and second class of prizes is the same except for the wording.

JOHN H. McGIBBONS
Secretary of the International Jury of Awards.

Emperors, Kings, Presidents, Princes and potentates, not to mention the most renowned names in art, science, letters and commerce, are on the mailing list of one John H. McGibbons of St. Louis.

And so Mr. McGibbons is a very democratic practical and hard-working American gentleman for all his distinguished and aristocratic mailing list. For Mr. McGibbons is the secretary of the International Jury of Awards of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, the distributor of awards and consequently he is bound to score many persons who have been honored at the hands of the Superior Jury. Hence the names of high degree that are printed in capitals upon the pages of Mr. McGibbons's mailing list.

Mr. McGibbons, like the Lord High Executioner, has them all on his list—in the latter distribution of diplomas and medals which a very superior Superior Jury awarded for the world to see. He worked with a fine touch, comb and the worthy man exalted.

For many a weary week the work of sorting out those who deserved honors at the hands of the International Jury of the Exposition has gone on. Now it is finished and all that remains to be done is the consummation of the decision of the jury.

That is all that remains to be done, but that is a very large undertaking, and Secretary McGibbons is directing it.

To those who guess genius must be forwarded the visible tangible evidence of the Superior Jury's esteem and regard of their services to their respective nations.

ACTUAL WORK NOW ON

And for every one of those honored names goes forth from St. Louis a bit of stamped metal and a beautifully engraved parchment diploma. After months of consideration of planning and preparation the actual work of forwarding them is now on. It means a world of careful painstaking and tedious work, and this is what wonder the Secretary McGibbons hardly appreciates the fact that for Worlds Fair is a thing of the past, for he is busier than ever.

Small wonder, for now that the Exposition is over the work of awarding the prizes falls upon the shoulders of Mr. McGibbons. It means a great deal of work, and it means that the Superior Jury, which was composed of men who were busy men, and women who were busy women, must wait for
