Summer Schedule.

In Effect July 12th, 1907.

BALTIMORE and WASHINGTON.

My precious babe from me is gone, A voice I loved is still,
A place is vacant in my home Which never can be filled.
Heaven contains my lovely babe, Earth her lonely cradle keeps,
And the sunshine leaves to linger, Where my darling babe sleeps.
Thou art not forgotten dear one Nor will this ever be For long as life and memory lasts, I will remember thee.
By thy loving Mother.

MARIE GOLDSBOROUGH.
In loving remembrance of my dear little sister, Emily Marie Golds-borough, who died July 27, 1907.

When we see a precious blossom,
That is tended with such care, Rudely taken from our bosom, How our aching hearts despair.
Round its little grave we linger, Till the setting sun is low, Feeling all our hopes have perished With the flower we cherished so.
By her loving sister, LORENA.

Honesty in Norway and Sweden.

Had Abraham Lincoln lived in Norway or Sweden, probably he would never have been known to the world as "Honest Abe," because there honesty is so common as to attract no attention. Travelers tell us that at the railway restaurants and passenger help themselves to whatever they wish, and then report what they have eaten and pay for the same without any questions being asked. A person's word is always taken, and he is never watched.
On the steamboats, after each meal, a traveler writes down in a large book what he has eaten. When ready to go ashore, he calls a witness, who affixes a price to each item, adds up the amount, receives the money, and puts it in his pocket. When filled, she gives the money, without counting, to the stewardess. Instead of making them careless, they are more scrupulously honest than any other nation in the world.

Chronic Diarrhoea Relieved

Mr. Edward E. Henry, with the United States Express Co., Chicago, writes, Our General Superintendent, Mr. Quick, handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some time ago to check an attack of the old chronic diarrhoea. I have used it since that time and cured many on our trains who have been sick. I am an old soldier who served with Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley four years in the 23rd Ohio Regiment, and have no ailment except chronic diarrhoea, which this remedy stops at once." For sale by Foxwell & Johnson.

Agreed With Him.

A professor of botany was recently lecturing in an Iowa city. In his discourse he attempted to show the great value of flowers and their near relationship to human beings.
He concluded his remarks by saying, "The Lord that made me made a daisy." Whereupon some one in the audience called out, "You bet he did!"
It was several minutes before the professor discovered why every one laughed.

In Memoriam.

BENJAMIN SWANN,
On the evening of July 18, 1907, at the residence of his parents, Benjamin Warren Swann, aged 19 years, 2 months and 18 days, third son of Richard M. and Susan Maria Swann, entered into the eternal sleep after a long and painful illness.
It seemed hard to part with one who was about to enter into manhood, but we are glad to know that his departure means relief and peace.
He was a loyal Christian, a faithful and obedient son, and his place at home cannot be filled. He died in the beauty of his youth, but his life was not in vain. Mourned by a large concourse of relatives and friends he was laid to rest in the family plot at Christ Church, Chaptico. May he rest in peace.
—by his brother, GARNER.

CATHERINE JARBOE
At the residence of her parents, infant daughter of James and Minnie Jarboe, age 1 year and 2 months.

Called Too Late.

An incident That is Full of Human Interest.

"Shall we call?" That is a question so frequently asked and so constantly discussed that the following extract from a letter recently written from a small town may be of interest. It tells its own story and teaches its own lesson, says the New York Tribune:

It was a short romance, a passing summer episode, but my eyes fill with tears whenever I remember it.
They looked like children, he said she, when they moved into the tennorn little house on the roadside in our village. "Just married, of course," said the grumpy. "Well, we know who they are and what his business is," etc. So no one disturbed them. The young husband went to town early every morning, and the little wife sat alone on the porch and awaited his return. They planted morning glories and nasturtiums and hung a bird cage among the vines, so the place blossomed into new life and looked as if it had never done before. The young people seldom left home. Only on Sundays they walked to the Presbyterian church and sat in a few back pew hand in hand through the service.

One day I saw the doctor's carriage in front of the little porch.
"Dear me!" I thought, "I wonder what is the matter here. I must surely look in tomorrow." And I did. But, alas, a grim visitor, who will not be denied, had been before me.

As no one responded to my knock, I opened the front door and found my way to the sitting room.
In an instant I knew what had happened. There sat the poor boy alone, his face buried in his hands, while his whole frame shook with dry, tearless sobs. I put my hand upon his shoulder—he was younger than my own son—and I whispered:
"Oh, let me help you if I can."
"Oh," he groaned, "if you had only come before! She was so lonely. She longed so for a woman's hand and a woman's voice. Yes," he added, "you can help me. Tear down the flowers when I am gone." They were here. And give away her bird. I shall never see this place again after today.

The sorrowful departure took place that very afternoon, and I did as he requested. I never pass the bare porch of that house without remembering that I had practically denied the kindness and the sympathy so sorely needed and craved by one of my sisters.

Those Haunting Notes.

There was a peculiar sound from the direction of the woods as the member of the Bird Lovers' society sat in the window of her friend's country home one summer afternoon.

She quickly took her small "Bird Guide" from her ever present bag and rapidly turned the leaves. At last she paused with a smile of satisfaction and listened, with her finger between two leaves of the little book, till the sound came again.

When it was repeated an expression of doubt fitted across her features, but still she was hopeful.

"You probably know many of the bird notes, living so near the woods and in such a quiet spot," she said to her friend. "Can you tell me what bird that is?"

"That," said her friend briefly, "is our goat. We shall have to move him farther off."—Youth's Companion.

A Well Dressed Man.

Lord Russell when practicing at the bar one day examined a witness whose evidence promised to be damaging unless he could be previously confused. The only vulnerable part of the man was said to be his self esteem. The witness, a portly, overdressed individual, went into the box, and the great lawyer took him in hand.

"Mr. John Tomkins, I believe?"
"Yes."
"You are a stockbroker?"
"I am."
Lord Russell regarded him attentively for a few moments and then said, "And a very well dressed man you are, sir."

The about of laughter which followed completely disconcerted Mr.
Tomkins, and the lawyer's point was gained.—Scottish Nights.

An American, Most Likely.

The "seeing London" automobile rolled out Piccadilly in the direction of Hyde park.

"That, ladies and gents," shouted the guide as they passed an ancient edifice surrounded by a high brick wall—"that is the town house of the Duke of Dea, one of our largest landed proprietors."

The eyes of the beautiful American on the back seat were flummoxed with sudden interest.

"Who landed him?" she asked.—
London Mail.

Cured by a Herring.

"We old-fashioned Hollanders believe in temperance," said Myrheer Closch. "When a man gets drunk in my country he must never show himself in public, but get to bed and sleep it off before he is discovered. To be caught intoxicated would injure his commercial or financial standing." Myrheer Closch added: "By the way, you Americans seem to have all kinds of temperance advocates and whisky cures, but the country is full of drunkards.
Why not try the Dutch remedy?
Nothing could be simpler. The good wife in Holland whose husband becomes a sot and non-support buys a quart of whiskey and soaks in it for a week or ten days a smoked herring, then strains the liquor and presents it to her lord and master. Of course, he is delighted.
He thinks himself forgiven and believes himself once more a man.
After three or four drinks out of that bottle the very sight of a glass of liquor so nauseates him that he would rather die than tackle it.
The results are really worth the expenditure. Many a drunkard has been cured, by a herring."—New York Press.

Diarrhoea Cured.

"My father has for years been troubled with diarrhoea, and tried every means possible to effect a cure, without avail," writes John H. Zirkle of Philippi, W. Va. "Hessau Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy advertised in the Philippi Republican and decided to try it.
The result is one bottle cured him and he has not suffered with the disease for eighteen months. Before taking this remedy he was a constant sufferer. He is now sound and well, and although sixty years old, can do as much work as a young man." Sold by—Foxwell & Johnson.

Good in Everything.

The late Sir Wilfred Lawson, well known as an English temperance reformer as well as a wit, invariably took a cheerful view of life and conduct. In conversation with him one day an ardent person railed forcibly against the practice of christening vessels with champagne before being launched. Sir Wilfred did not altogether agree and said a good temperance lesson might be learned from the practice.

"How can that be?" demanded the other.

"Well," replied the baronet, "after the first taste of wine the ship takes to water and sticks to it ever after."

What a New Jersey Editor Says.

M. T. Lynch, Editor of the Phil-lippsburg, N. J., Daily Post, writes:
"I have used many kinds of medicines for coughs and colds in my family but never anything so good as Foley's Honey and Tar. I cannot say to much in praise of it."

Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup is sold under a positive guarantee to cure constipation, sick headache, stomach trouble, or any form of indigestion. If it fails, the manufacturer refund your money. What more can any one do. Loker & deWaal.

To Die a Natural Death.

An English tourist traveling in the north of Scotland, far away from any where, exclaimed to one of the natives: "Why, what do you do when any of you are ill? You can never get a doctor."

"Nes, sir," replied Sandy. We've just to die a natural death!"—Exchange.

A Faithful Friend.

"I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since it was first introduced to the public in 1872, and have never found one instance where a cure was not speedily effected by its use. I have been a commercial traveler for eighteen years, and never start out on a trip without this, my faithful friend," says H. S. Nichols of Oakland, Ind.
Ter. When a man has used a remedy for thirty-five years he knows its value and is competent to speak of it. For sale by Foxwell & Johnson.

Wood Ashes on the Farm.

If there is no receptacle for wood ashes it is of advantage to broadcast them around the trees. Ashes contain both lime and potash, with a small proportion of phosphoric acid, and they benefit all kinds of trees, showing excellent effects for several years.

Ten Years in Bed.

"For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys," writes R. A. Gray, J. P. of Oakville, Ind. "It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me. Loker & deWaal."
