TALE OF HIS CRIME.

Dr. McGonigal Hears Again the Story of Pretty Annie Goodwin's Death.

Large Attendance in the Court Room To-Day.

Testimony of Young Albert Harris, Who Lived with Fannie Shaw.

Burly Deputy Sheriff Burke walked down from the Tombs Prison to the brown-stone Court-House this morning, with the mouse-gray little Dr. Henry G. McGonigal trotting along at his side.

The simian-faced little practitioner, who is charged with having performed a criminal operation upon pretty Annie Goodwin, causing her death, was loquacious.

He ventured the remark that he preferred the exercise of running to court rather than to be brought down from the Tombs in the Black Maria, huddled in with other prisoners like sheep in a railway car.

"Will they convict me? No, sir; not much. I shall be triumphantly acquitted," replied the doctor to a query from his striding guide and guard.

"We shall prove my innocence affirmatively. Just you wait till you hear my side."

The slick-coated Doctor took his accustomed place in a corner of the Court-room, adjusted his spectacles with the usual professional deliberation, took out the usual roll of legal cap paper, and resumed his work of reading and writing just where he left off when Court adjourned last night.

Occasionally he would stop in this work, take off his glasses, and, holding them between his finger and thumb, would seem to commune with his inner consciousness, his little colorless eyes blinking at nothing in a style truly reminiscent of the professional.

JAMES OLIVER, M'GONIGAL'S COUNSEL.

"What does he write?" a reporter asked Jimmy Oliver, chief of his counsel.

"I don't know. I think it is a part of some medical work. He has never consulted me about it," replied the ex-Assemblyman.

It was 11.35 when Judge Fitzgerald ascended to the bench, having been in attendance at County Clerk Reilly's funeral.

The court room was crowded with curious spectators, though, long before that time, but the mourning sister of Annie Goodwin, Annie's chum, Sadie Traphagen, and their Harlem girl friends were not present.

People were anxious to know just how Gus Harrison, the young man who figured as Annie Goodwin's whilom lover and as the one who caused her ruin, was to be used in this case.

They wanted to see the hard-faced Fannie Shaw, in whose house Annie Goodwin, alone and among strangers, died.

They wanted to hear the story of how that feeble little old man, at 2 o'clock in the morning, carried the body of the poor girl down four flights of stairs, placed it in his carriage, and drove away to hide it, and to obliterate the evidence of his crime.

AN UNEXPECTED WITNESS.

But they heard the story from other lips—from the lips of a little boy, unlefiled and clean. He was Albert Harris, a lad sixteen years of age, who lived at Mrs. Shaw's—a bright-faced, bright-eyed youngster, who answered every question in a straightforward way.

Col. Fellows examined young Harris.

"I live at 137 East One Hundred and Fifth street," said the lad.

"Did you ever see Annie Goodwin?" asked Col. Fellows.

"Yes, sir. I saw her at Mrs. Shaw's."

Q. When did she die? A. July 12.

Q. Did you ever see Dr. McGonigal? A. Yes, sir. Once when he brought Annie Goodwin to Mrs. Shaw's in his gig.

Q. Where was she out? A. I don't know.

Q. How often did you see Dr. McGonigal? A. Five or six times.

Q. You went to when McGonigal was there? A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many times? A. McGonigal was sometimes there twice a one day.

Q. When Annie Goodwin was sick did you have anything to do? A. Yes, sir; I was to sit by her door.

Q. What for? A. Mrs. Shaw told me not to let anybody in there.

Q. Did you see Annie Goodwin at night on July 12? A. Yes, sir; o'clock in the morning. I was in bed. Mrs. Shaw waked me up and told me to put on my shoes. I did, and went down stairs.

Q. Did you see anything in the street A. Yes; I saw Dr. McGonigal's two-wheeled gig and horse in the street.

Q. Did you see Dr. McGonigal come downstairs? A. Yes, sir. He came downstairs. He had Annie Goodwin's body, carrying it on his shoulder.

Q. Was there any wrapping on it? A. Yes, sir; a quilt.

Q. Did you see Annie Goodwin's face? A. No, but I saw her head.

Q. What did McGonigal do with the body? A. I don't know. I didn't see him put it in the gig. I went away.

Q. Had you ever seen the gig before? A. Yes, sir; four or five times.

Q. Who came in it? A. Dr. McGonigal, and he went away in it.

"That is all," said Col. Fellows.

THE OLD DOCTOR UNDISTURBED.

The court-room had sunk into a silence that was deathlike.

The little old doctor had taken off those glasses. He held them between finger and thumb and blinked at the boy witness with the critical air of the physician studying his patient's symptoms.

There was no feeling of any sort expressed in the wrinkled old face.

When the voices ceased the oppressive silence seemed to startle the little doctor from his preoccupation, and he coughed a little professional cough, replaced the glasses on his nose, and resumed his reading.

This little boy had told the tale that formed the connecting link between the sickness of Annie Goodwin and her hasty midnight burial.

The simple relation of the story by the lad pictured vividly in the mind of every listener the ghastly scene—that little, blinking-eyed simian-faced Doctor, with the fragile form of the sweet and winsome cigarette girl, his victim, on his shoulder, carefully stepping down the four long flights of stairs from the fifth floor room where she had hidden her shame to the sidewalk.

Lawyer Oliver, before the beginning of the day's proceedings had said with a bravado air to she reporters:

"Why, they must prove that Dr. McGonigal, on a certain day, performed a certain operation on Annie Goodwin, and then that she died from its effects. They can't do it!"

MORRIS PARK ENTRIES.

With to-day the racing scene shifts from the neighborhood of Coney Island to the lordly slopes of Westchester—from circular tracks to straight and wide stretches. The fields for the opening day are not large. The opening dash for sprinters is confined to five, and the Jerome Stakes looks like a battle royal between Tournament and Banquet, although Masterlode is also entered. The two-year-old races are well patronized, and the field to contest the Manhattan Handicap is all that could be desired, as far as quality is concerned. The full programme is:

First Race—Sweepstakes, $15 each, with $750 added; five furlongs.

Congressman Cooper's Canvass.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

COLUMBUS, Ind., Sept. 30.—Congressman Geo. W. Cooper opened his canvass for re-election here in a rinsing two-hours' speech to-night. A large crowd listened to him. He grew very eloquent on the Bunn investigation and explained his position in regard to it amid loud applause. He will be returned to his seat in Congress by an increased majority.

Gen. Batchelder Promoted.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the nomination of George S. Batchelder of New York, to be Minister Resident and Consul-General to Portugal.

HAWKSHAWS ARE ALL AT SEA.

Little Ground to Hold Lingo for Mrs. Miller's Murder.

Detectives Work in the Dark—No Promising Clue in Sight.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 1.—A feeling of intense dissatisfaction is spreading in this community, caused by the bungling manner in which the police officials are trying to ferret out the murderer of Mrs. Annie Miller. From present indications he never will be found. Frank Lingo is caged in the county jail, but Prosecutor Jenkins frankly admits that all the evidence so far procured against him "would not get him ten days," let alone a hangman's noose.

When the woman was found murdered last Thursday several citizens, remembering the Annie Leconey case, asked the authorities that the aid of Inspector Byrnes and Robert Pinkerton be invoked. They offered to defray all expenses, but their request was not granted.

The Camden County sleuths are Pat Gallagher and Billy Warner. These men have had little or no experience in expert criminal detective work, but they are somewhat influential politicians. Their only other case of any importance was the Leconey murder, and there they did not find the murderer.

What the people now demand is that the services of at least one of Byrnes's men, or a Pinkerton detective, be requested, even at this late day, to endeavor to clear up the mystery. If Lingo is guilty their work should be very easy; but if, as many people now believe, he is innocent, let him be freed and the guilty party captured.

Lingo's house was searched again yesterday and an old coat found, in the pocket of which was his pipe and a loaded 22-calibre revolver. This find was gleefully carried to headquarters, but no one believes that Mrs. Miller's throat was cut with the revolver. Two spots were found on the coat which may be blood. There will be subjected to a microscopical examination to-day to determine for certain whether they are or not.

There is practically nothing new to be told in the case to-day.

County Physician Izard, when questioned to-day as to when the inquest would be held, said he could only say positively—"some time this week, or maybe next."

Henry Miller, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the murder of his sister-in-law, was taken before Prosecutor Jenkins yesterday, and gave an account of his movements on the day she was murdered, which exonerated him from any suspicion apparently, because he was not held.

Lawyers Jess and Taylor, whom Lingo wants to see, are still refused permission to the jail, a denial of rights which THE EVENING WORLD was the first paper to call attention to. The leading lawyers of Camden County are outspoken in denouncing this arbitrary measure, and say it is establishing a precedent which, if permitted, may work irreparable injury.

Whether guilty or innocent they hold that he should be permitted to see his counsel.

No one except some person interested in fixing the guilt of the crime on him is allowed to see Lingo.

AN EVENING WORLD reporter learned this morning that Prosecutor Jenkins has the names of two other negroes who were seen in and about Michenor's Woods on the day of the murder; but whether they will be arrested or not is another question.

CHICAGO, COLUMBIA & CO.

Have the National Commissioners Exceeded Their Authority?

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Have the National World's Fair Commissioners exceeded their authority? A despatch from Washington says they have. The Special Committee appointed by the Government to come on and look up the affairs of the Commission claims that the act of Congress appropriating $1,500,000 to the expenses of the exposition did not intend the whole amount for payment of the expenses of the Commission. At the rate the Commissioners are finding ways for spending money there will be nothing left for the buildings. It is further claimed that the Commission was not expected to have anything to do with the exhibits or to take an active management of the affairs of the exposition.

Mr. Bryan, of the Local Board, said he thought the Commission's duty ceased with the part it was to play as host to the exhibitors and representative of foreign nations. Secretary Butterworth was of a similar opinion.

"If Mr. Candler comes here with his committee to tell us what our rights and duties are," said Commissioner Williams, of Tennessee, "we'll tell him to go home and mind his own business." This view is also that of Commissioner Ryan, of North Dakota.

Director-General Davis has promptly purged himself of politics in connection with the management of the great Fair by resigning his position as a member of the Republican National Committee.

AURORA, Ill., Sept. 30.—The Rock River M. E. Conference passed strong resolutions asking that the sale of intoxicants at the World's Fair be prohibited and that the fair be closed on Sundays.

KANSAS GERMANS ORGANIZE.

They Will Demand Personal Liberty and No Prohibition.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Sept. 30.—A death blow has been struck the 80,000 Republican majority in Kansas. It was done so cautiously that the result will be astounding. The movement is an organization of the 70,000 German voters in this State. "Personal liberty and no prohibition" is the rallying cry of the movement. Every member promises to vote for this principle. The scheme has been developing for some time, the work being done by correspondence. In every town and hamlet of the State the German priests and pastors, with all the German singing and turner societies, are organized. The new party will nominate no ticket and its members are bound to avoid office-seeking.

A plan of campaign will be mapped out on Oct. 9 in Kansas City, the anniversary of the landing of the first Germans in America. The first general meeting was held in this city last night and will be followed by a second one Friday night.

NUREMBERG, Sept. 30.—President Reichs, of the Icherahbach Orphan Asylum, has been arrested on the charge of selling orphan girls intrusted to his care to houses of ill-fame. Two of the asylum gardeners, Dalner and Schoiding, have been tried for participation in the offense and sentenced to four and five years in the penitentiary respectively. The Government has decided to close the institution.

TO SUCCEED CHIEF BYRNES.

Police Board Asked to Transfer Capt. McLaughlin to Headquarters.

Important Police Changes Hinging on Supt. Murray's Illness.

Current gossip foreshadows some important changes in the Police Department in the near future.

Rumors which have been in circulation for several weeks, that Supt. Murray will never again be able to resume his official duties, received partial confirmation when the Superintendent recently started on his European trip, with an extended leave of absence for five months.

Now that Acting Superintendent Byrnes, who has been performing the duties of his chief for the past four months, has called upon the Police Board for the transfer of Capt. William McLaughlin, of the Old-slip station, to duty at the Central Office, it is very apparent to those in inner circles that things are shaping themselves for a change.

The talk in the Mulberry street palace is now that the Police Commissioners will within a very short time place Supt. Murray on the retired list, with a pension of $2,500, and that Chief Inspector Byrnes will be his successor.

In such an event, it is not at all improbable that Capt. McLaughlin, who is eligible for the office, will be made Chief Inspector and be placed in charge of the detective force at Police Headquarters. Otherwise he would hardly be content to give up his present position, as captain of one of the most important precincts in town, to become a mere assistant of the Chief Inspector.

It is said that with this end in view Inspector Byrnes has asked for the transfer, and it is generally believed that it will not be long before he will secure the promotion of his subordinate to the Chief Inspectorship, which will soon be vacant, for it is a foregone conclusion that he will be the successor of Supt. Murray.

Capt. McLaughlin's past experience eminently fits him for the position for which his chief intends him, for he was, previous to his promotion to a captaincy, Inspector Byrnes's right-hand man in the management of the Detective Bureau.

Although the Board decided to lay the matter over over until the census work in Capt. McLaughlin's precinct is finished, there is no doubt that they will grant Inspector Byrnes's request and that the Captain will be immediately placed in charge of the Detective Bureau.

Inspector Byrnes finds the duties of the Superintendent's chair, in addition to those of supervising the detective work, to be too much for him, and he has become to feel the strain of the double work which has been placed upon his shoulders.

THE SNUB WAS INTENDED.

Mr. Reed Reaps the Whirlwind of Boutelle's Madness.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 30.—No move upon the political checkerboard since Blaine's refusal to accept the nomination for the Presidency in 1888 has caused so much stir in Maine as the forcible and cutting slight placed upon Speaker Reed by the President in the appointment of Col. Frederick N. Dow to the Collectorship of the Port of Portland, Reed's own home. Republicans were astounded when they heard the news last night and this morning, but the shrewd politicians were expecting it. Up to the time of the recent State election it was generally believed that the Maine Senators would slowly withdraw their opposition to Reed upon an office at his own home, and that his candidate, Weston F. Milliken, would receive the coveted plume. That this was the plan of procedure is now unquestioned, but a new pause was placed upon affairs by Congressman Boutelle when, in his now noted election editorial on "The Lessons of the Victory," he defied the Senators and dared the President to appoint any man unfriendly to Reed to the Collectorship of Portland. Senator Hale at that time came home for a few days' consultation with the Republican machine in office when the opposition knew portended some aggressive movement. On his return Col. Dow joined him in Portland and accompanied him some distance on his journey for a consultation, returning home very jubilant, so it is said. Ex-Secretary Blaine came home and his family left Bar Harbor for Washington on a private Pullman car. In Bangor the Secretary was met by the leading Dow Lieutenant, Col. Henry S. Osgood, of Portland, who accompanied him for hours on his journey. This, together with the fact that some very intimate friends of Col. Dow were entertained at Stanwood by Secretary Blaine the Saturday before he left for Washington, and that closely following his return the appointment was announced, convinces the Republicans here that the Premier figured prominently in the proceedings and still reigns supreme as the man from Maine.

A Long Deadlock Broken.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 30.—Josiah Patterson was to-day nominated for Congress by the Democratic Convention of the Tenth Congressional District. The Convention has been in session for weeks, and thousands of ballots have been taken, with Judge J. S. Galloway and T. E. Bedwick leading. A Committee was appointed to break the deadlock, and after ten days' grace it up, and the Convention entered again yesterday, when Judge Galloway withdrew. A caucus was held, which decided on Mr. Patterson. Mr. Bedwick then withdrew and the Convention nominated Patterson. He has been a State senator three terms, and a close race for Congress at the last election. His Congressional nomination was unsought.

MOURNED BY THE PEOPLE.

Ten Thousand Friends at the Funeral of Edward F. Reilly This Morning.

Judges, Legislators and City Officials Honor the Dead County Clerk.

It is not often that the death of a man of thirty-four years of age causes such widespread mourning as that of County Clerk Edward F. Reilly.

He was essentially a man of the people. He was a self-made man, having risen from the humblest beginnings to places of honor and trust.

This morning, the occasion of his funeral, the streets about the residence of the dead man were thronged with people, but on doing honor to him. Not the perfunctory honor always done in the case of the death of an official, but the sincere, regretful honor of those who had known "Eddie" Reilly and watched his successful career with feelings akin to personal pride.

There were mechanics and laboring men, their wives, sons and daughters, and Attorney street, where Mr. Reilly lived, was filled by 10,000 people aside from the municipal officials and companions of the dead man.

There were a host of the latter, and among them were Joseph J. O'Donohue, Tim Campbell, Judges Mitchell, Goodfogle, Fitzgerald, Gorman, McMahon and Gieger; ex-Senators Daly and Plunkett; Assemblymen and ex-Assemblymen McKenna, Conners, Phillips, Dunham and John F. McIntyre; Aldermen Clancy, Benjamin and others of the Board; ex-Alderman Divver, John Simpson, District-Attorney Fellows, ex-Judge Bedford, Commissioners Fitzpatrick and Holahan, E. L. Carey, Deputy-Commissioner Whalen, J. H. Shelman, Secretary Sheehan, Dan Collyer, the actor; Martin E. Brown and Thomas J. Carleton.

The body of Mr. Reilly lay in the parlor of his residence, 6 Attorney street, in a black cloth covered casket, and there two thousand people looked upon the face so well known in the Sixth District. It was calm and as in life.

There were many floral designs, despite the request to omit flowers. Among them were a bunch of lilies from Mrs. Hill, a cross from Joseph Fitzpatrick, a cross of white roses from Clarence L. Conger; a pillow, surmounted by an anchor, above which was a star, on which perched a white-winged dove, from the Thomas S. Dairy Association, and a cross from Court Conran, Foresters.

The pall bearers met at the residence of ex-Alderman Owen McGuinness, 10 Attorney street. They were Mayor Grant, Comptroller Myers, Register Frank T. Fitzgerald, Richard Croker, Under-Sheriff John B. Sexton, Commissioner of Public Works Thomas F. Gilroy, Excise Commissioner Edward F. Fitzpatrick, Thomas J. Calder, Deputy County Clerk, P. J. Scully, Police Commissioner James J. Martin, Coroner Levy, Charity Commissioner Edward C. Sheehy, Daniel J. Sullivan and ex-Alderman Owen McGuinness.

Behind these was a guard of honor, composed of the Columbian Club of the Sixth Assembly District, of which Mr. Reilly was a member. Assemblyman Sol. S. Rosenthal, S. J. Foley, Peter Duffy, John S. Hill, James Carpenter, ex-Assemblyman W. J. McKenna, Maurice Abishowitz, Michael H. Sweeney, Lawrence Connor, Joseph W. Siebert, George Brown, John Fleming, Dr. O'Neill, Philip Herpelshausen and Judge Gieger.

The father of Mrs. Reilly, Judge Mitchell, of Saratoga, together with Thomas Craven, City Clerk of Albany; ex-Senator John Foley, of Saratoga; Senator Collins, of Albany; Senator Chase, of Troy, and Sheriff Kernan, of Rensselaer County, were present to pay the last rites to an old comrade of the Legislature, and from Brooklyn came Hugh McLaughlin, District-Attorney Rolevaty and ex-Senator James Pierce.

The pall-bearers and guard of honor followed the hearse, and after the carriages of mourners came delegations of letter-carriers, Columbian Club, Court Conran, St. Mary's Library Association, Gramercy Council, A. O. U. W., Oriental Club, John Simpson Association and Leon Sanders Association.

Thirty pupils of St. Mary's School, which Mr. Reilly attended when a boy, were in charge of Brother Conran.

The stricken young wife took leave of the remains at 9 o'clock this morning. At 10 the bell in St. Mary's was tolled and the remains were followed to the church at Grand and Ridge streets, where a solemn requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Nicholas Hughes, with Father Francis M. Fagan as deacon, Rev. William Quinn, subdeacon, and Rev. Hugh J. Kelly, master of ceremonies.

Gloriani's mass was rendered, with Prof. Bonnemann as director. The singers were Misses Hopkins and Ulda and Messrs. J. Hughes and Arthur.

The place of interment was Calvary Cemetery.

SUICIDE OF COUNT KLEIST.

The Young Prussian Nobleman Ends His Disgrace.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—Count von Kleist, who recently committed an innkeeper, hanged himself yesterday with his suspenders in prison (today).

Count von Kleist is one of the group of young Prussian noblemen who have made Berlin famous for its suicides during the past few weeks. He was an intimate friend of Count von Schlippenbach, who took his own life two weeks ago after gambling away his fortune and being left penniless. Count von Kleist got into trouble by assaulting a porter at the Passage Hotel. He attempted to assault him reaching his room with a strange female companion. The unfortunate porter afterwards died and the Count was arrested.

Count von Kleist is presumably the same who a year ago was announced as engaged to Miss Elizabeth Thomson, the daughter of W. G. Thomson, who was twice elected Mayor of Detroit. Mr. Thomson's family was travelling in Europe, and were in Berlin at the time. As a condition of the engagement Mr. Thomson insisted that the Count kleist should enter government service in a diplomatic capacity. It was thought that a brilliant career awaited him. The engagement was, however, broken off. Count Kleist's grandfather was the famous so-called foot of Prussia.

DOESN'T FEEL THE SHADOW.

Birchall Under Sentence Still a Marvel of Cheerful Nerve.

His Wife in a Pitiful State of Grief and Suffering.

(SPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.)

WOODSTOCK, Ont., Oct. 1.—Birchall under sentence of death remains the same Birchall who sat calm, unmoved, often smiling, through the week of his trial on the charge of murder.

He sketches, he writes rhymes and letters, he talks lightly with his keepers, and still refers to his conviction and sentence, when he talks of them at all, as "hard luck."

It has been said that he would attempt to end his life before the day set for his hanging, and his guards have been doubled as a precaution; but the clergymen and others who have intimately associated with him during his confinement in jail do not believe he will attempt suicide.

He will die, they think, the same marvel of nerve and self-possession that he has been during all the proceedings.

Poor Mrs. Birchall is in a pitiful state of weakness and grief. She broke down completely when the clergyman broke to her yesterday the news of her husband's impending fate, though from watching the faces of those about her, while she was too fearful to inquire, she had half read the truth.

Reports differ as to her intentions, some saying she will remain here until after the execution, while others announce that she will sail for England as soon as she is able to stand the journey.

It is probable at this time that she intends remaining here.

Pelly, the young man who narrowly escaped sharing Benwell's fate at Birchall's hands, has gone, and so has the murdered man's brother, Charles, who appeared as a witness at the trial.

It has been decided not to remove Benwell's remains to England, and they are being inclosed in a vault where they now lie in Princeton Cemetery.

CASHIER RITTER CAUGHT.

Wall Street's Defaulter in Texas with Blonde Mamie Zann.

Inspector Byrnes received a despatch this morning from Chief of Police Jordan, of Galveston, Texas, announcing the arrest of Washington Ritter, the handsome young cashier, who took $4,000 from his employers, Lansier & Gallup, the Wall street brokers, and was supposed to have fled to Europe.

Ritter was walking with the pretty young blonde, Mamie Zann, who left her home in West Sixteenth street to elope with him.

Chief of Police Jordan had been on the look-out for the young man, and when the Mallory steamer Alamo arrived all of her passengers were quietly surveyed.

Ritter and Mamie Zann were spotted at once and followed to the residence of Mr. Charles Pexan, the young man's uncle. Chief Jordan and Detective Williamson arrested the pair while they were walking on Church street.

Ritter made full confession of his guilt and expressed his willingness to come back to New York without requisition papers. Mamie says she "will stick to Wash."

Ritter will be held until Detective Sergeants Sheridan and Sheldon of Inspector Byrnes's staff bring them back to New York.

Ritter was in Lansley & Gallup's employ for some years, and no suspicions ever rested upon him. Of late he had led an extravagant life. He had a magnificent yacht and luxuriously furnished apartments on Seventh avenue.

When matters became too hot he fled leaving a wife and three children behind him.

Bridegroom Tarred and Feathered.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 30.—An employee of one of the railroads leading into this city was tarred and feathered on the Hoosick road, about o'clock last night, by a party of masked men, led on by an indignant and outraged woman. The man is charged by those who know him to hand with having treated his wife cruelly, compelling her to produce a divorce from him. In defiance of the mandate of the Court, he was married again a few days ago. On his way home last night with his bride his carriage was stopped by a dozen masked men, who dragged him into an adjoining field and gave him a coat of tar and feathers.

Brilliant Reception of Kaiser William at Vienna.

German Socialists in High Carnival Over Expiring Laws.

(BY CABLE TO PRESS NEWS ASSOCIATION.)

VIENNA, Oct. 1.—The city to-day presents a scene of extraordinary splendor in honor of the visit of Emperor William of Germany and the King of Saxony.

Never before has such a profusion of rich and elaborate decorations been displayed here.

They include four triumphal arches of artistic designs and a series of Venetian masts carrying long festoons of evergreens and flowers, which convert the way over which the royal guests moved into a superb bower of brilliant colors.

Every house has its decoration of flags, flowers or brightly hued hangings. The Prater, the broad thoroughfare leading to the park, which was embraced in the route of the procession, was also magnificently adorned with flags and flowers.

The citizens have everywhere more than met the wishes of the Emperor of Austria, who has announced his desire to spare nothing in the entertainment of his Imperial ally.

The Emperor's guests arrived by special train this morning and received a cordial welcome from Francis Joseph at the railway station, which had been converted into a magnificent pavilion by the aid of bunting and festooned evergreens.

The Imperial party were at once led to court carriages in waiting, and the line of march was taken up towards the palace.

The route as laid out was about four miles in length, and the entire way was a continuous scene of enthusiasm. Cheer after cheer burst forth from the multitudes which thickly lined the streets.

A conservative estimate of the number of spectators places it at fully half a million.

Flags waved in every direction and flowers were thrown from windows on the pathway.

It is generally conceded that the reception of the Imperial visitor exceeded in brilliancy that given him two years ago on his accession to the throne of Germany.

This afternoon the Emperors William and Francis Joseph, the Duke of Tuscany and Prince Leopold leave for Styria, where they will enjoy a week's hunting.
