THE OUTLOOK FOR 1874.

The election being over, the people of Memphis can now look to the future once more with calmness and philosophy. Mr. Logue was elected as a Republican. We need not and will not tantalize the supporters of his opponent with their bad management and want of co-operation, for we pointed out their blunders, however innocently made, at the inception of the campaign, and warned them of disaster, but all in vain. They sowed their mistakes with a lavish hand, and reaped an early harvest of defeat. There is not really a Republican majority in the city, and there was no good reason why Memphis should pass under Republican rule. Whether it will remain so any great length of time of course depends chiefly upon Mr. Logue's discretion and fair, non-partisan administration. What he will do, or not do, we have no means of ascertaining at present, but we shall judge him solely by his official acts. He will be supported by a General Council of perhaps more than average ability—men who are fully identified with the vital interests of Memphis, and able to grapple with practical questions. They will share with the Mayor an uncommon degree of responsibility, for Memphis is just now entering a new era. For twelve months one disaster has succeeded another, but each time the highest qualities of fortitude, often amounting to sublime courage, have been developed in our people, and after passing through so many common trials and tribulations, and coming out almost unscathed, all are imbued with sympathy for each other, and ready to stand shoulder to shoulder in the great common purposes of the community. As one of the fruits of this feeling, the Cotton Exchange has been organized upon a basis that bids fair to give it permanency, and to insure lasting benefits to the community, and to lift our cotton market up to a position and rank never before attained. Thus far the cotton receipts have been unusually large. Nearly a quarter of a million bales have been received already, and good prices are given. The planters understand the animus of those who have assailed the Memphis market, and continue to send forward their cotton and to make large orders for goods. Trade is lively in almost every department, and is conducted on a better basis than usual—that is it approaches nearer the cash system than ever before. There is reason to hope that our merchants will sell only for cash, or on very short time to good, reliable customers. If they will adopt this plan, which seems to be almost a necessity, the planters will put in more corn, and thus become almost independent of distant markets for breadstuff and feed for stock. If less cotton is raised it will be in greater demand and will bring higher prices; besides all that, a bushel of corn raised at home is worth more than three brought a distance. The labor system is undoubtedly improving, and from year to year as the landed planters and the colored people come to a better mutual understanding, more clear money is made by all and a richer trade flows to Memphis for several hundred miles around. Memphis is growing even now, and holds up better in proportion to population and capital than Chicago, St. Louis or Cincinnati. People will complain of hard times, and so they do all over the country, but from what we can see Memphis seems to be better off than many other places. Very few failures have taken place this winter. Collections are reasonably good, and while some of the laboring classes are out of employment, no wide-spread suffering or want exists. Some funds are on hands to supply the extremely needy, and it is likely that the poor of this city will be as well provided for through the winter as elsewhere. With an economical administration of the city government, strict collection of taxes and judicious expenditures, such as may safely be expected, and proper economy in the expenses of living, and charity toward the needy on the part of those who have a competency or more, we see no reason why Memphis may not pass through the winter without experiencing further stringency in her affairs, and for the remainder of the year enjoy unexampled prosperity. There is great cause for encouragement and the hopeful feeling which pervades every class of our citizens. Let us further hope that some steps will be taken toward the erection of a custom house, a court house, and other public improvements, which would give employment to many working people, put money in circulation, and give more life and vim to the entire population. Memphis is not dead, as a few of her enemies hoped, but in a fair way to build up a magnificent structure upon her solid foundations. To this end let us all work shoulder to shoulder.

The new marble postoffice building in Knoxville, when finished, it is said, will be one of the handsomest public buildings in the country. When will we have one in Memphis?

THE LATE CITY ELECTION.

We agree with the Avalanche in expressing the opinion that Major Busby made a very strong race for Mayor. He happened to be the victim of circumstances, which he failed to control, but that is not his fault. Besides commanding the respect of all classes, he has a genial manner about him, and a warm heart, which will always make hosts of friends for him in any position. In the canvass he worked with a zeal and energy that seemed almost irresistible, and we believe that any other man brought out exactly the same way would have fallen short of his vote by nearly a thousand. He carried, it is supposed, about three hundred colored votes out of perhaps twenty-four hundred polled. These votes he took from the most compact body of voters the world ever saw by dint of his personal efforts, and had not Republican leaders made a powerful effort in the last days of the canvass, he would have carried at least one-third of the colored vote and thus been elected by a considerable majority. As it was, he carried fully half the German and a small percentage of Irish votes. A majority of the "Little Tammany" party voted for Mr. Logue, and it must be conceded that no small number of business men likewise voted for him. Major Busby had the active support of three newspapers, one of which at least has heretofore exercised a powerful influence in local and State politics, but usually when working in concert with a party organization. Of course the papers were of great service to Major Busby, and kept up the courage and enlisted the efforts of his friends to the last. Some things published may not have been to his advantage, yet in the aggregate the three presses, which each in its own peculiar way worked for him, contributed largely to secure his handsome vote. Yet if Major Busby had been entirely untrammelled we believe he could have been elected. Over 3000 of the registered voters remained away from the polls. A good deal had been said about fraudulent voting and irregular papers. What influence this may have had in the three thousand who declined to deposit their votes can only be a matter of conjecture. A few hundred papers may have been improperly obtained, but certainly could not have been used under such a strict system of challenging as obtained at most voting places. But taking it for granted that three thousand more of our citizens could have properly voted, we see no hypothesis for the conclusion that a majority of them were for Major Busby, and it seems just barely possible that, had they all voted, Mr. Logue's majority would have been a few hundreds larger. The majority decided the other way, and as usual the minority acquiesces with as good grace as possible. This is generally in good faith; in a few instances assumed with great reluctance.

Memphis has received to date 237,282 bales of cotton this season, against 197,564 one year ago, 208,450 two years ago, 256,220 three years ago, notwithstanding St. Louis is making such extraordinary efforts to carry off the cotton trade of this vicinity.

Numerous Granges have been organized recently in East Tennessee. The candidates for State offices to be filled next summer would do well to practice farming with a hoe in the back yard about five minutes every morning before breakfast.

It is only ten months until the general State election for Governor, Congressmen and the Legislature. Isn't it time to bring out the geography?

The custom of making New Year's calls was observed in New York this year with more than usual spirit and energy.

The papers are certainly making out a bad case against Williams, but for that reason he will probably be confirmed.

Andrew Johnson has returned from Nashville to Greenville. He is not in as good health as usual.

NEW YORK.

New York, January 6.—A special from Havana says the news of the overthrow of the Castellar ministry was favorably received. The Casino Espanal was jubilant. The volunteers favor a monarchy. The royal Spanish coat of arms was again placed on the palace of the Captain General.

Michael Brophy, 371 Forrest avenue, quarreled and fought with Michael Fitzgibbons, last night, in Cornelius O'Neil's liquor saloon, 339 avenue A. Fitzgibbons drew a knife and stabbed Brophy, inflicting two wounds which will likely prove fatal. Fitzgibbons was arrested.

Michael Jierney, aged twenty-one years, an ex-fireman, of Morrisiana, was arrested there yesterday, charged with killing Edward Donohue, another fireman, yesterday morning.

By the breaking up of a Canal street den of burglars yesterday eight well-known criminals were arrested, including Dan Kelley, of Nathan murder notoriety, an escaped convict from Auburn prison; Patsy Conway, a river pirate who shot and killed the mate of a schooner in East river some time ago; Larry Griffin, another pirate connected with the same murder, and Big John Garvey, a most notorious burglar. Altogether, the haul is as rich a one as the police have made in a long time.

The Times' special from Key West says the Alaska arrived there yesterday from Gibraltar. Admiral Case has ordered all vessels to be ready to sail at any moment. Monarchial emblems have been restored all over Havana since the receipt of the news of Castellar's overthrow. There are rumors of collisions between the factions in that city.

The story of the flight of Elbert A. Woodward, one of the criminals connected with the New York ring, and the details of his wanderings abroad to elude arrest, are published to day. On first learning that he was in danger of arrest, he left Norwalk for Canada, stopped a month in Quebec, then went to Montreal. All this time he adopted no disguise whatever. Next he turned up at New Liverpool, on the St. Lawrence river. Detectives were, however, on his track. All letters to his friends or intimates were opened, and the telegraph was carefully watched. After a long stay at New Liverpool, Woodward secretly returned to Boston, where he shipped for Havana as a sailor, under the name of Spencer, on the brig Houston. A storm rising, they were inclined to stay in port till it blew over, but on Woodward's urgent demand, they put to sea. The gale increased, and the brig was nearly wrecked, but was finally brought back safe to Boston by a tug. On reaching Havana he obtained a passport under the name of Spencer. He began to live luxuriously, and enjoy himself. He next visited Vera Cruz, and crossed the isthmus for San Francisco. There he was recognized, and telegrams sent to New York. While there he saw Tweed, whose overland journey was no doubt planned with the view of meeting Woodward and discussing ring affairs. He then went to New Orleans, Fernandina, Baltimore, and finally left for Europe and made a tour of Britain, meeting Connolley in Dublin. He then went to Paris, Germany, Switzerland and Spain, and settled for some time in Barcelona. While at the latter place an agent of the New York authorities had several interviews with him, and terms were proposed granting him immunity if he would turn State's evidence. There is every reason to believe that the terms have been accepted. He is said to have returned to the United States, and to be within one hour's journey of New York.

The strike of the engineers on the Pennsylvania roads seems to be abandoned. The men accused G. C. E. Wilson, of Cleveland, Chief of the Brotherhood, of selling them to the enemy. Yesterday offers of aid were received by the Pennsylvania employes from the engineers on the various lines centering in Jersey City.

It was rumored in Wall street yesterday that a powerful clique had been formed in the Pacific Mail to bear the stock one or two per cent., so as to pick it up at low prices, advance it and strengthen the entire market. This was the only stock which held back yesterday from general advancement. Besides the advance in the stock market yesterday there were several other matters of a gratifying character, the most prominent being the resumption of Henry Clews & Co.

A special to the Tribune from Mansfield, Ohio, says that R. H. Rowland, the treasurer of Richland county, is a defaulter to the extent of $110,000.

Peter Habel, aged twenty-two years, the letter-box thief who was captured early yesterday for opening letter boxes and stealing the contents, on Third avenue, has confessed to stealing over one hundred letters from the Chicago boxes, a large number from St. Louis and fifty from Buffalo. He has been operating in Chicago and St. Louis two years past. He was formerly a letter carrier in Chicago.

The Virginus sufferers at the headquarters of the Cuban junta yesterday were, it is reported, informed that the Junta would cease to provide for them at the close of this week. The American portion have been cared for and sent to their homes. Nine Jamaicans and three Englishmen have been cared for by the British consul here, and will be sent home at the earliest opportunity. The remainder of the survivors, however, have been mainly dependent on the Junta. They are miserably off for underclothing and boots, and ill prepared for winter. They have been boarded by the Junta at the French restaurant on Green street at four dollars a week. The Times this morning says the statement that they have been entertained at Trajiloes is incorrect. They received little or no assistance from Cuban residents here, and regret they did not remain on the Juniata, instead of coming to New York. The Junta yesterday informed them the funds for their support were exhausted.

The New York Reader is the title of a new illustrated weekly, which begins its career with the year 1874. The price of the paper is four cents a copy, or two dollars a year, and, judging from the excellent appearance of the first number, both in illustrations and typography, it is one of the cheapest, if not the cheapest story and sketch paper that has yet sought public favor. It is folded small, containing sixteen pages of interesting reading, and no advertisements. The first number begins a serial story entitled "Fate," which opens well, and promises to be full of interest. A very fine engraving is also presented with this number, which is certainly handsome enough to justify the claim of the publishers, "That it is the handsomest engraving ever given away with any similar publication." The New York Reader is published at 65 Liberty street, New York.

MUNICIPAL.

Called Meeting of the General Council.

COMMON COUNCIL.

[OFFICIAL REPORT.]

City Hall, Memphis, January 3, 1874.

At a called meeting of the Common Council of the city of Memphis, held Saturday, January 3, 1874, present—Hon. John Johnson, Mayor; Messrs. Chairman Zent, Hewitt, Chase, Norton, Beehn, Roush, Keck, Shaw, Clouston, Clarke, Hunt, Hughes, Jobe, Simons, Smith and Mason, Councilmen.

A quorum being announced, the Chairman took his seat, called the members present to order, and had the roll of Councilmen called.

The Board of Aldermen were then invited to take seats in joint session. Whereupon the Mayor addressed the General Council, and suggested that the meeting for the installation of the members elect be postponed until Wednesday, January 14, 1874, in order that the Register and City Comptroller might have time to post up their books for the past months, saying it would require that time, as the regular meeting for the allowance of claims would not take place until January 7, 1874, that being the first Wednesday in the month.

Whereupon the official returns of the election held January 1, 1874, by Sheriff W. J. P. Doyle were read and received:

Shelby County, State of Tennessee:

I, W. J. P. Doyle, Sheriff of Shelby county, do hereby certify that the foregoing report and returns of an election held by me on the 1st day of January, 1874, at the voting precincts in the city of Memphis for Mayor, Tax Collector, Wharfmaster, one Alderman in First, Fourth, Fifth, Eighth and Ninth wards, two Councilmen and one School Visitor in each ward, is full, true and correct in every particular, so far as the same has come to my knowledge, and is, as I am informed and believe, a full report of all the votes polled in said city on the day and year above mentioned, for the purposes as set forth in the caption hereof. Witness my hand at office in the city of Memphis, this 3d day of January, 1874.

W. J. P. DOYLE,
Sheriff of Shelby County.

Whereupon Alderman Robbins moved that a special committee of two be appointed to examine the poll books, and report the names of the members elect.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

The special committee was then appointed by the chair, consisting of Aldermen Robbins and Councilman Norton.

SEWING MACHINE.

THE BECKWITH $20

PORTABLE

Family Sewing Machine,

On 30 Days Trial.

With strength and capacity equal to any, regardless of cost. The Machine does away with all complications, and with the movement of Only Two Parts (the Needle Arm and Looper), both simple and strong, it makes the Stitch, feeds the Goods, half guides the Cloth, fastens the Seams, sews on Braid, Gathers and Tucks, Hems and Embroiders. Remember, the movement of only two parts does all this, which entirely does away with all the complications so liable to get out of order, and so often the source of annoyance to the operator, besides the ruinous expenditure of force in propelling them. Our Semi-Guiding Feed requires the assistance of only one hand or even one finger, thus leaving the right hand entirely at liberty to ply the wheel, which runs easy and even as a well balanced wheel, with

NO TOILSOME TREAD OF THE TREADLE.

Orders promptly filled on receipt of $20.
