SANTAL-MIDY

Medical Sense, Business Sense.

...ulting of a physician to treat you ...ease is of vastly more importance than the selecting of a man to invest your money in. A man may attend the best medical colleges and graduate with honor or he may have time to spend and money to spend and have the walls of his office full of diplomas and yet not be a very degree medical sense or even ordinary common sense that would lead him to place the care of your health in the hands of a man who has not proven himself competent to do the work properly. Medical sense is a gift of a man, not a thing of others. It must be natural. The best proof of a business man. Because he has attended a fine business college is no evidence that he has any business sense. Business sense means common sense means success. Dr. Fish has to a high degree this peculiar qualification that enables him to treat your disease with success and precision. If you are suffering from some old disease that the doctor does not understand you can consult him with perfect confidence that he will know what your disease is. More than that, if he don't know he has the honor and HONOR to tell you he don't know. Hundreds are suffering from diseases that he could cure if they would only do so. Do it now. If you cannot do it at once or write to him. His remedies are the very latest and best discoveries. He does not use the knife in cases of stone in the bladder. His remedies are absolutely painless and sure.

DR. FISH CURES CATARRH, DISEASES OF WOMEN, BRONCHITIS, KIDNEYS, DROPSY, BLADDER, BLOOD and NERVOUS diseases, PILES, FISTULA and all Private and Blood Diseases. Medicines furnished at the office.

TREATMENT BY MAIL.

The method and treatment adopted by DR. FISH guarantees the same good results to those consulting their cases by correspondence as to those who call in person.

THE HIGHER COURTS.

Synopsis of Decisions Rendered by the Supreme Court of the State, Sitting at Austin.

Austin, Tex., Feb. 24.—The following is a synopsis of supreme court decisions rendered at its last sitting:

Robert Spencer vs. E. M. Brown et al. Writ of error to the third district. Both parties claiming from a common source, it was held by the court of civil appeals that defendants in error were entitled to judgment if the judgment through which plaintiff in error claims was not so recorded as to give him upon the land. The sole ground on which it was held that the abstract of that judgment was not properly recorded was that the certificate authenticating it was not recorded with the abstract. Under articles 3134-5-7 and 3133 it is clear that a clerk of a county court would have no lawful power to file and record an abstract of a judgment unless it was certified as the statute requires; but there is nothing in the statutes referred to which seems to require that the certificate of authentication shall also be recorded. The certificate under the hand and seal of the clerk making the abstract is the evidence of authenticity of the abstract, without which the clerk called upon to record it has no authority to record; but in the absence of a statute requiring such certificate of authentication to be recorded with the abstract courts have no power or right to hold that the record of such a certificate as well as the abstract is essential to lien. It is contended, however, that all of title 61, ch. 3, R. S., applicable to judgment liens is subject to the requirement of article 4256. That article was the 13th section of the act of May 12, 1846, and it applies to "every instrument of writing authorized to be recorded by this which is deposited with him for record with the acknowledgements, proofs, affidavits and certificates written on or attached to the same." Whether the abstract of a judgment is within the meaning of the statute relied upon, an instrument of writing may be doubted, for it has been held that a judgment is not such an instrument. At the time the act of 1846 was enacted it evidently had no application to the record of judgments or abstracts of judgments for the purpose of acquiring lien for neither at that time nor at any time prior to the enactment of the present law was there a lien in force through which lien could be acquired by recording and delivering an abstract of a judgment. Prior to the law of 1893 we are not advised of any law which required abstracts of judgments to be recorded for any purpose. If, however, the language of the law of 1846 was broad enough to embrace the record of an abstract of a judgment to acquire lien, the court is of opinion that it ought not to be so applied because of the chapter in the revised statutes prescribing the mode of acquiring liens under judgments evidently was intended to be complete within itself, and to have no necessary relation to other law regulating registration of instruments permitted or required to be registered. It prescribes the book in which such record shall be made and determines what officer shall make it, and does not leave those things to be determined by the general law of registration. It prescribes what the abstract shall show and does not require the registration of the entire judgment. Such abstracts do not give lien or have any effect whatever from the time they are filed and because they are filed, but the lien is created and made given only when the abstract is recorded and indexed as the statute requires. The purpose of one statute is to furnish means whereby right not before existing may be created and notice given; while the purpose of the other is to give notice of right already existing. The index was in circumstantial compliance with the statute, and the court erred in rejecting the evidence offered to show that plaintiff had judgment lien. The property having been conveyed to the wife of defendant in the execution during their marriage, by a deed which did not show it to be her separate estate, would be presumed to be community in the absence of evidence to the contrary; and subject to any debt contracted by the husband during the marriage even after the death of the wife. Under such facts the sale made under execution, even if there had been no judgment lien, would pass title to the land superior to any which could pass by sale under which defendants claim, unless it were shown that persons claiming through that sale were entitled to protection as innocent purchasers. Reversed and remanded. Opinion by Stayton, C. J.

Texas Trunk Railway Company vs. J. R. Johnson—Writ of Error to Fifth district. Personal injury to a passenger. It was charged that defendant permitted its roadbed to become unsafe for travel, which was known to defendant and both actual and exemplary damages were claimed and recovered. The court of civil appeals held that the evidence of the general bad condition of the road was improperly admitted, and required the exemplary damages to be remitted. They were remitted, and the judgment for the actual damages were affirmed against the company and the sureties on appeal bond. It is urged that as the evidence was inadmissible the entire judgment should have been reversed, because it cannot be determined that the evidence that had influence the finding as to actual damages. In deciding that evidence of the general bad condition of the road was not admissible the court of civil appeals cites Railway Company vs. Mitchell, 75 Tex., 81; Railway Company vs. Johnson, 72 Tex., 59, and Railway Company vs. Shuford, 72 Tex., 165, as supporting the doctrines announced. In the Mitchell case such evidence was held inadmissible under the circumstances of that case. In the Johnson case such evidence was admitted and the judgment was reversed because of error in the charge upon exemplary damage—the admission of such evidence was not considered in determining actual damages, "but will apply, if at all, to the question of exemplary damages." By the affirmance of the judgment the admission of the evidence was impliedly approved. See, also, Railway Co. vs. DeBlieux, 60 Tex., 194; Railway Company vs. Kirk, 62 Tex., 272; Railway Company vs. Taylor, 79 Tex., 111. The evidence was not only admissible, but was ample to justify the verdict, and the court of civil appeals erred in requiring another to remit the exemplary damages. It is urged that the court of civil appeals having rendered a judgment for a less amount than the judgment of the trial court, no judgment should have been entered on the appeal bond. Under the statute, when, on account of error, the court of civil appeals does not affirm the judgment below but renders judgment against appellant for a less sum, then judgment should not go against the sureties on the appeal bond. The question here presented is difficult, and its determination must rest upon corrections of the orders of the court of civil appeals in reducing the judgment. If defendant in error had voluntarily entered the remittitur, it might be taken as a confession of error, but it was made under the requirement of the court, and cannot be regarded as a voluntary act. The statute does not require of this court to set aside the judgment entered which was correct because of its error committed in favor of plaintiff in error. Affirmed. Opinion by Brown, J.

L. H. Carhart vs. G. A. Brown—Writ of error to the second district. The case involves the construction of articles ... of partnership for the purpose of operating a cattle ranch. Under the construction place it thereon below, the plaintiff has recovered in part for the expense incident to the care and management of his own cattle while on the ranch. That construction is doubtless based upon a provision which reads: "In stocking said range the member shall, except by consent, put thereon exceeding one-third the capacity thereof, as may be determined by the firm." It is evident that the judgment cannot stand, except upon the theory that in the event that the pasture was not stocked by the firm to its full capacity, each partner had the right, not only to put into it his individual cattle to a limited number, but also to have them cared for and maintained at the expense of the firm. All other provisions of the agreement show an intention to form a partnership in fact and not in law. The three indicated above is inconsistent with the idea of a legal partnership, and it is also repugnant to the express provision in the articles that the members should share equally "in all the costs and expenses of said firm business, and in all profits and losses accruing therefrom." It cannot be held that the rearing and maintaining of individual cattle upon the ranch was a part of the business of the firm. Reversed and remanded. Opinion by Gaines, J.

SOME OLD FRIENDS

In a New Store With a Fresh Stock of New Goods.

We all like the old friends of old times.

We know them and appreciate them because they have been true to us, and we know that we can depend upon them. What they say and what they do.

We would all rather counsel with old friends than with new ones. And who is there that would not prefer to do business with an old friend. You are sure that he will deal fairly by you, and have the satisfaction of knowing that you are helping on to prosperity.

If there is one way in which "auld acquaintance should not be forgot," it is in a business way.

When a desire to do business with old friends is coupled with the certainty that you are dealing with people of integrity, whose words are as good as their bond.

Such a firm is that of Dahlman Bros., old citizens, old merchants, and therefore old friends who retired from business some time ago, but the old love was the strongest, and firmly believing that Fort Worth was the best town in the state, decided to remain here and go into business again.

They will occupy the Main street part of Cole & Terry's store with a fresh, new and complete stock of goods for furnishing goods, hats and clothing.

Connected with the establishment will be a tailoring department, where the gilt-edge jeans and the sober business men may be becomingly apparelled at a reasonable price.

Everything about the store will be first class in every respect.

If you wish to buy anything in the way of shirts, plain and fancy bosoms, fine underwear, hosiery, workwear a dressing or smoking gown, gentlemen's collar article or any other of the numerous accessories necessary to the comfort or wellbeing of modern civilized man, you should consult the stock of Dahlman Bros., who will open their attractive store, which is near the Pickwick hotel, in about ten days.

Wait and see their stock.

COAST GUARD CREW LOST.

GRAHAM NEWS.

Special Dispatch.

Graham, Tex., Feb. 24.—The house in which Mat Brogden lived in this place was burned this morning. Contents a total loss. The house was owned by John C. Woodruff of Hillsboro, Tex.

In the examining trial of A. L. Hook today on a charge of assault with intent to murder V. T. Crawford, the defendant was discharged.

DOWN WITH THE LORDS.

Press Report.

London, Feb. 24.—A letter written by Mr. Henry Labouchere has been made public in which the well known Radical says that if the queen's speech opening the next session of parliament does not contain a declaration that a reform of the house of lords is necessary, he will move an amendment to the address in reply to the speech declaring that the power of the hereditary and Episcopal branch of the legislature to reject or alter bills approved by the house of commons should cease. Mr. Labouchere in his letter adds that the adoption of the address in reply to the queen's speech ought to be immediately followed by the passage of a bill to abolish the house of lords. He added that if the ministers want a second chamber it should be formed of members elected by popular vote.

The Westminster Gazette (Liberal), commenting on Mr. Labouchere's letter, says that the introduction of a bill to abolish the house of lords would be tantamount to a dissolution of the house of commons within three months. The paper adds that it would be best to wait until it is seen how the house of lords will treat the Welsh disestablishment, the redistribution, and the evicted tenants' measure, and then to go to the country with an overwhelming case against the lords.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

By Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 24.—Three-quarters of the day's business on the stock exchange was done in sugar and distillers, which are about equally prominent in the transactions, the one being strong as the other was heavy. News from Washington was to the effect that the senate finance subcommittee had agreed upon a duty of 1 cent on refined and 1 1-8 cent on raw sugars. This favorable report led to a heavy buying movement, which was supplemented by purchases by shorts to cover outstanding lines, and as a consequence prices moved up sharply, enough making a gain of 2 5-8 per cent, of which 1-2 had been lost at the close. Preferred rose 1 3-4 per cent, closed at the highest figures reached.

The deposits in the shares of the distilling company was due to the announcement of the sugar duty being placed as proposed, and that no increase would be made in the spirits tax, as if it were increased the revenues of the government would be raised to an amount greater than its necessities. The first break in the stock market was caused by heavy selling for the Western account, mainly for Chicago, and this was followed by a heavy raid, which sent quotations down steadily almost to the close, when a decline of 3-4 had been effected, of which only 1-4 was recovered in the final sales.

McELROY'S REPORT.

Special Dispatch.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 24.—McElroy & Co. say:

Futures—Today has been marked by heavy liquidation of long cotton, not only a considerable part of the remaining interest of the element known as professional longs, but also the late purchase of parties not recently identified with the bear side, and who were of the opinion that prices had reached bottom when they touched a point about 1-4c above the present level. These last, seeing no disposition on the part of the market to recover, were liberal sellers today and have apparently gone back to their old love, the short side.

There is no doubt that during the past two weeks liquidation of long cotton has been very general and this, combined with the establishment or re-establishment of a new short interest, places the market, in our opinion, in a much healthier position than it has occupied for some time past.

Liverpool closed quiet and steady at a loss of 2-64d and spots declined 1-16d, with sales of 6000. Prices here, during the pressure of long offerings, steadily declined and closed at a net loss of 7 points on the day. March cotton sold as low as 6.90 and April at 7c. Spots were marked down 1-16c and are quoted easy at the decline, but sales were good for the half day, being 425c.

Port receipts foot up 9300, against 8300 last year, and New Orleans expects on Monday 3000, against 4800 a year ago.

Silver remained stationary at yesterday's price of 27 1-2d.

If the liquidation has been as thoroughly as seems possible, a recovery in prices may be looked for. Following this solution we have advised our friends to take in their profits on the short side on this decline.
