The First West Va. Legislature.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Sketches Personal, Political and Biographical.

JAMES BARRICK, from Hampshire.

James Barrick, delegate from Hampshire, is next to the youngest member in the House. He was born in New Creek valley, in the county he now represents, on February 1st, 1839, and is therefore now a little rising of thirty years of age. His ancestry was German; his father a native of Virginia, and a blacksmith; and the son wrought at the forge for seven years—as long as Jacob served for Rachel.

Mr. Barrick was married at the age of twenty-two, and has since been engaged in the business of merchant. When the disturbances began in '61 and people began to take sides, he took a decided stand as the friend and advocate of the Union. He belonged to a volunteer company, which was under rebel management, and was largely instrumental in breaking it up. The company was ordered on a report, at Romney, preparatory to marching to Harper's Ferry, but three days of drumming only brought out seventeen men. The greater part of the company afterwards entered the Union army. He voted against the ordinance of secession, and was active in his opposition to this and other acts of rebel usurpation. When the Western Virginia movement began in the spring of '61 he united his fortunes with it, and was a member of the Convention which reorganized the State Government. Subsequently he was commissioned by Gov. Pierpoint to recruit a company, but owing to a difference between the views of the people of Hampshire and the military authorities as to the kind of service to be engaged in—the former wanting a cavalry service—he did not succeed in raising a company.

In politics Mr. Barrick has always been an old line Whig. He voted for Bell for President in 1860. He is not and never has been anti-slavery as his views, in fact, entertains no very decided or strenuous opinions or feelings on the subject. He never owned a slave himself and does not want to, and has no liking for the institution, but was always willing for those who wanted to own slaves to exercise what he regarded their undoubted right to do so, and is opposed to freeing the negroes unless they are removed from the country.

In religion Mr. Barrick is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Ever since before the rebellion broke out, since then the churches have been broken up in his county.

In person he is six feet and rather sleenderly built, has dark hair and dark brown eyes, whiskers and moustache, features regular and rather handsome, face pale and somewhat thoughtful in cast. Dresses well and is upon the whole good looking and would probably be a favorite with the ladies, if unmarried. In manner he is inclined to be reserved except among intimate acquaintances, and demeanor modest and quiet, he has been a silent member thus far, and is not likely to become very noisy among the session has gone so long.

JOHN BOGGS, from Pendleton.

John Boggs, the delegate from Pendleton, was born in that county October 15, 1815, and is near 48 years of age. His fatherwas a native of Ireland.

Mr. Boggs was trained a farmer and when he was old enough did not depart from it. He was married at the age of 25. Has held a quiet, unpretending life. Has been a magistrate several years, since the adoption of the amended constitution, or so, but always refused to hold any kind of political position, believing the office regime aristocratic and anti-republican. Has always been at war with the eastern aristocracy and its oppressions. Opposed secession with all his efforts and influence and voted against the ordinance along with nearly all the voters in his section of the county. When hostilities broke out, he raised a company for home protection, called the "Swamp Dragons" or "Swampers," and this band maintained a sort of Swiss independence up there in the mountains of Pendleton and defied John Letcher and the Southern Confederacy. No rebel can set his foot inside of the domain of the "Swampers" with any assurance of getting out alive. Mr. Boggs commanded the "Swampers" and filled the post with honor to himself and his command, from his own means, for about six months. The rebels have since had a special enmity against him. He has been frequently waylaid, and shot at, and they offer a standing reward of $2,000 and exemption from military duty during the war, to the man who will take him, dead or alive. He has been in a number of skirmishes with them, and has laid out long nights at a time, without even changing his clothes.

Mr. Boggs represented Pendleton in the second session of the Constitutional Convention, held last February. The county would have been represented here in the reorganized government, but being cut off from the rest of mankind, with seventy miles of hostile country between it and the federal outposts, the people there did not even know what was being done here or elsewhere. For this reason no election was held in Pendleton on the ordinance for a division of the State, submitted in October, 1861, but they voted on the adoption of the Constitution in April, '62, and the amended Constitution last May.

In politics Mr. Boggs has always been a Whig, and never voted for a democrat in his life. Voted for Bell in '60, but would do it again. Up to the time of the rebellion he was not specially hostile to slavery, but always favored its abolishment by peaceful means. Now he is willing it should be extinguished by any means that may be found necessary to effect the object, and may be set down as a pretty thorough anti-slavery man.

Religiously Mr. Boggs is not a member of any church. He was reared under Presbyter an influences, but individually, is partial to the Dunkards.

In person he is six feet, rather sparely built, and stooping very slightly. His hair, which has been black, is quite gray; face smoothly shaven; eyes grayish blue; nose Roman; general appearance of face shrewd and wide awake. In manner he is unobtrusive, but possesses the openness and frankness peculiar to frontiersmen. Makes few speeches, brief and to the point. He is always in his seat and attentive to business, and is a respected and useful member.

Co. As and C, 3d Virginia Cavalry, in the Shenandoah Raid.

[Private letter published by request.]

POTOMAC STATION, near Falmouth, Va., May 10th, 1863.

I wrote to you from Boston Station on the O. & A. R. R., April 17th, but have not heard from you. I suppose it is owing to the irregularity of the mails. As I have a few moments to spare, this morning, I have concluded to write again from the date of my previous letter, 18th April.

20th—We left Boston Station and marched to Waterloo Bridge on the Rappahannock, 7 miles above Warrenton, and camped for the night.

21st—Our detachment, C. and G. of the 3d Va. cavalry and 20 of the 3d Indiana, under command of Capt. S. B. Conger, went to the river about 3 miles and crossed. We then struck for little Washington, (which is near Sperryville, where we used to camp last summer,) while under General Pope, arriving there a little after dark. We found a rebel picket in the town, but he ran out the road towards Sperryville. We then started back to camp. As we were coming out of the town our advance was halted and fired upon by some persons, but darkness so dark we could not tell by whom. We charged on them and after pursuing them half a mile we shot one man in the side and captured another; they proved to be a Commissary and Quartermaster Sergt. of the 6th Virginia (rebel) cavalry. Each one had a navy revolver and the Commissary Sergt. had $3,000 in Confederate money. The man we shot was hurt so badly we had to leave him. We got into camp about midnight, with the other man and two horses.

22d—We moved our camp to one mile east of Warrenton.

23d—We remained in camp repairing equipments, &c.

24th—We remained in camp.

25th—Our detachment went on picket about 4 o'clock.

26th—We remained in camp.

27th—Stayed in camp.

28th—We received marching orders at 8 P. M., and left camp at 10 P. M. and marched nearly all night.

29th—We arrived at Beaton Station and got breakfast, and arrived at Kelly's ford at noon, where we ate dinner and then crossed the ford and camped for the evening. We saw some rebel pickets near the camp. The brigade was ordered to mount and we marched out towards them but they skedaddled. We then sent out skirmishers, and followed them about 3 miles and the rebels opened on us with 3 battery. Some of their shot came pretty close. Our battery came on and opened on them, when they quit firing, by which time it was dark. None of the brigade had a chance to do anything but skirmish. They fired some and took a few prisoners, and got lost, nothing. We then camped for the night. The force we attacked was Fitzhugh Lee's brigade of cavalry.

30th—We marched to Culpeper C. H. and found Lee had passed through in the night. He was skedaddling like everything. We halted in town a few minutes and then moved on through the Cedar Mountain battle ground, and camped near the Rapidan Station on the O. & A. R. R.

May 1st—The enemy appeared on the other side of the River (Rapidan) and commenced firing at us. About 3 o'clock our detachment of a company of the 3d Indiana under Capt. Gresham, of 24 Indiana, were ordered to go up the river six miles to ford and scout. There was in sight about 30 rebel cavalry on the other side of the river but they balls flew thick for a while. Capt. Gresham was wounded in the thigh very severely. Several of the detachment had to swim to pass through their clothes and wet. We staid there on picket all night. Gen. Averill had crossed at this ford and joined Gen. Stoneman, who had crossed at Ely's ford on his way to Gordonsville. I think we could have entered Richmond.

2d—We marched down the river and joined the left wing of Hooker's army. We marched along the line of the left wing which rested on the Rappahannock past the United States ford. We camped there for the night and were only a few hundred yards from the front, and they were fighting nearly all night. Although Hooker fell back across the river 56 was not wounded, for we killed, wounded and took more prisoners than they did.

3d—Stayed in camp and not much fighting along the line.

4th—We crossed (the cavalry force) at the U. S. ford to the north side of the river, and marched down to Banks' ford. Our detachment and a company of the Third Indiana was left on picket and the balance of the cavalry went to Falmouth. The rebels had a piece of artillery on the opposite side of the river and shelled it like everything, but they did no damage. This was the next day after Sedgwick's division crossed. They came back from Falmouth to the evening and we joined them and went to Deep creek, which is three miles west of Hartwood Church, and camped for the night, and it rained in torrents all night and day.

5th—We left Deep creek and marched 10 miles to Grove Church, where we arrived about noon. In the afternoon Lieut. J. E. Hoffman of company C was sent with three men, to White Sulphur Springs, eight miles north of the Camp to reconnoitre and he took him longer than Captain Conger expected. He (the Captain) became uneasy and sent Lt. Smith and company A and three men to hunt him. Lt. Smith went out the same road Lt. Hoffman had gone, and as he was crossing Deep Creek three miles from Camp, he was fired upon by some bushwhackers, and one of his men received four buckshot in his back, but it did not kill him. I suppose the trap was laid for Lieut. Hoffman, but he came back by another road, and did not fall into the trap. We got back to Camp a few minutes before Lt. Smith did, and we went out in a squad and brought in the wounded man, but we did not find any bushwhackers.

7th—We went out and brought in some bacon and corn, and caught three deserters.

8th—We left Grove Church at 9 o'clock and arrived here Saturday morning, the 9th.

I have given you an account of our trip since we left Stafford Court House, which I thought you would like to see. On this trip we had no wagons for tents, and you may know that we saw some pretty hard service.
