They call it "Operation Gymnasium".

It's something pretty wonderful, and there's no sense having it isolated in a little New England town of 9,000 population . . . Bridgewater, Mass.

Let's think about bringing it here, huh? We'll tell you about it, and you see what you think.

"Operation Gymnasium" is the latest venture of a Veterans group, a non-affiliated organization exclusively for vets for World War II. Of course, this exclusive angle doesn't have to apply.

It's brought a new kind of cooperative community spirit to Bridgewater and the result has been the location of an $80,000 Navy recreation building inside the town's borders for a cost of $30,000. The building is several miles away and the vets are transplanting it slowly but surely by working a couple of hours each day.

When the gym is finally finished, Bridgewater will have a new high school gym for basketball, a large auditorium complete with portable stage and dressing rooms, a large dance floor, well equipped bowling alleys, and facilities for other sporting events. A small section of the building is to be reserved for a vets' clubroom.

Here's how the vets did it. With 250 members (and remember this town is one fifth the size of Wilmington) buying $100 worth of shares or 100 shares, $25,000 was raised quickly. The balance wasn't too hard to get put up through sponsorship of a football game here, a dance there, and a play some other place.

But getting the dough was only half the job. The members of Vets, Inc., worked. Volunteer crews donned fatigue clothing (the type of garb you put on when the first sergeant got a little bit disapproving of something you did, remember?) and cut away trees for the site of the new rec hall. They took trucks and traveled some 40 miles to dismantle the Navy gym, and bring it piece by piece to their home town. Not only the vets made up these work crews, townsfolk joined in.

The thing is going up and when it's finally finished, it'll be a monument to the town's spirit and cooperation and desire for something better. Probably the hardest job was to find the surplus gym to buy . . . and there admittedly Vets, Inc. was fortunate. But for the rest of the deal, they made their own breaks. There were no group resolutions drawn, supporting the deal because the support was active . . . with hard work and little speech.

Now, here in Wilmington, the need for such a gym and auditorium is well recognized. The biggest obstacle, we are told, is the high cost of building materials, which the Bridgewater lads didn't have to worry about. But, perhaps there's a rec hall at Camp Davis, or maybe a spare one at some other base within a couple of hundred miles radius that can be dickered for.

Certainly this is something new to give plenty of thought to. Here, with a bright era in sports looming over the horizon, we are forced to take some form of constructive step toward making room for participants in that era. A great athletic team representing Wilmington is no good if it has no place to be great in. Independent basketball teams are springing up . . . they must have some place to drill and play. On the non-sport side of the picture, several times during the last few months, dramatic groups could well have found use for some more space. Golden Glove boxers could have used a new gym.

But, more important than that is the fact that we must not be merely trying to find facilities for what already is in Wilmington. We must anticipate what may be forthcoming and be ready for it. No city waits for deadly accidents at a busy intersection before putting up a traffic signal. The city wisely gets its warning sign up first.

Let's do the same with sports. We suggest that possibly the Wilmington Athletic Association, Inc., put some thought into this proposal of locating a new and large recreation hall in the city. We suggest that, with the veterans' idea still in mind, the commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars or the commander of the American Legion toss this idea around a bit more . . . and find out if such a military building might not be available for purchase.

Let's see how many persons and groups really want what they claim they want. And, let's once and for all, find out how many will do some work . . . and less talk . . . in getting it.

This idea may not be the best. But it's a start. And if we don't start soon, we'll bet a stale doughnut, there won't be an indoor arena in the city in the next decade. You must start, before you can finish.

Shrine Bowl Teams Battle To 7-7 Deadlock

Kuhn Recovers Fumble, Halting Drive; Venters Stars In Tar Heel Push

BY RAY HOWE
Charlotte News Sports Editor

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6 — Bill Kuhn and Doc Venters were both on the bench when the ball game started, and they were both there when the Eleventh Annual Shrine Bowl game wound up in a 7-7 deadlock, but in between those time they both played a large part.

"I used Kuhn on defense and Venters on offense." Coach Bill Ludwig said after the game. "And between them they did a great job on their assignments. Venters was in on that one touchdown drive we put on, and he opened that hole at right guard for the ball carrier.

Venters was used at strong side guard on offense as an alternate for Bill Barringer, Ludwigs own guard from Salisbury, and he shared time with the Allstater. Kuhn contributing to the North Carolina cause in each quarter, alternated with Reed Dorsett of Salisbury.

Kuhn had his share of honors early in the ball game when he jumped on a loose ball on the North Carolina 34 yard line after Dick Brewer fumbled a lateral from Gene Barmer of Camden. That stopped South Carolina first threat in the game after the Palmettoes had marched from their own 42.

It was Coach Bill Ludwig's second appearance in the Shrine game as a head coach, and the second time that he had been deadlocked. His Tar Heel squad fought to a scoreless deadlock in 1941 against South Carolina.

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6. —(AP)— The High School All-Stars of North Carolina and those of South Carolina battled to a 7-7 deadlock here today in the 11th Annual Shrine Bowl football game before 19,000.

A 48-yard touchdown march late in the third period with Gastonia's Charles Runyan going over from the 11, gave the Tar Heels the touchdown to match the second period South Carolina score, engineered when sub back O.O. Crowe of Greenville sped 80 yards with an intercepted pass.

There was not much to choose between the rivals as they fought to the third tie of the series which shows North Carolina with a 5-3 edge in victories.

One of the South Carolina heroes, Olympia center Roy Davis, whose point after touchdown gave the Palmetto staters their deadlock, suffered a broken leg late in the first half.

Crowe's run was the individual high spot of the contest, coming when North Carolina appeared headed for a score.

The Tar Heels, on the defensive through most of the first period, had moved into South Carolina territory for the first time in the second period, starting from their own 33.

Aided by two 15-yard roughness penalties, (five 15-yarders were inflicted on South Carolina) ..the home staters had driven to the visitors' 26 where they had a third down and six coming up.

Lanky Ernie Kluttz of Concord let fly a pass which was almost intercepted by Anderson's John Trotter and then was hauled down by Crowe on his 20. Heading to his right he was off to the races, the whole 80 yards. It appeared that he would be overtaken by a fast closing in defender, but Gaffney's A. L. Curtis threw a crisp block at the 10 and Crowe was home free.

Davis then booted the extra point on his second attemp after a penalty on the missed first attempt gave him a life.

Late in the half South Carolina had another chance to score when Canton's Clyde Miller, playing safety, fumbled a punt when tackled by Charleston's Burr Gooding and Olympia's Fred Carter recovered on the North Carolina 39.

But here North Carolina dug in and took over. Taking to the air for the first time, the North Staters, with Marion's Kirby Rader pitching, moving forward for two first downs to their own 40 when the half ended.

Albemarle's Bob Gantt sparked an early third period push that brought North Carolina to the opponents' 38, but a stout defense then shoved them back to the 46 and they had to punt.

After another exchange of kicks the Tar Heels got going on their lone excursion into scoring territory.

Mt. Airy's John Coble touched off the drive with a first down pass to end Dick Crowder of High Point, a 15-yarder to the Palmetto 30. Then Joe Self, a 160-pounder from Greensboro, smacking the line like a 200-pounder, bulled through 11 yards to the 19 where three men fought him to the turf.

Self was good again through the middle for five to the 14. Then Runyan hit Greensboro's Bob Clemmons on the six with a pass, Clemmons being knocked out of bounds.

A five-yard delaying-the-game penalty moved the ball back to the 11 from where Runyan swept around to his right and across the final stripe.

The extra point was booted handsomely by Wilson center Jimmy Zrakas, one of the hardest workers of the day defensively, particularly in the first half when he was in on every other tackle.

Stars Play Tabor City Thursday PM

The Wilmington All-star basketball team, led by Lloyd Kaylor, opened the 1947 season with a smashing victory over Clarkton's All-stars 56-40, Friday and were today pointing toward a clash with Tabor City next Thursday night in Tabor City.

Kaylor slammed 26 points through the threads in a sensational scoring spree that put him 14 tallies ahead of his nearest rival for scoring honors, Johnny McKoy, who rammed 12 markers through the basket.

The Clarkton Stars will clash with Wilmington again Dec. 22 in the Chestnut street gymnasium, Henry Shepherd, manager of the local independent team said last night.

A contest with the New Hanover High school Wildcats, defending state champions this year, will definitely be played here probably before Christmas, it was reported.

Lyn Rowan and Leonard McKoy were absent from the Clarkton game but are expected back in action by Thursday.

Church Seniors Open Cage Season At YMCA

The Sunday School Senior basketball league opened play last night in the YMCA with a trio of tilts and Fourth Street Advent Christian, Temple Baptist, and First Presbyterian wound up with victories.

The Presbyterian team, led by Jack Parker scored the most lopsided win smashing Trinity Methodist 52-16 to take over one of the favored roles in the fast circuit.

Temple Baptist, early season favorite, lost some of its power as a choice to ride through the season undefeated when Johnny McKoy and Leonard McKoy were reported to have left the team in favor of semi-pro squad, amateur rules preventing them from playing on both.

Johnny McKoy, however played last night, leading the Temple Baptists to a 36 to 22 win over Winter Park Baptist.

In the other game Fourth Street Advent Christian defeats St. Paul's Presbyterian 48-20.

Dixon Cagers Split Twin Bill With Marines

JACKSONVILLE, Dec. 6.—Dixon school's backetball teams Friday night split a double header with Camp Lejeune. The Dixon girls winning 21-12, outstanding were Mary Ann Parker and Joyce Lewis of Dixon.

The Lejeune boys overcame a half time 19-19 tie to win 38-28. Dixon plays host to Maysville-Pollocksville teams Tuesday night 7:30. Neither Dixon team had a coach.

FOURTH STRAIGHT WIN

GOLDSBORO, Dec. 6—(AP)— The Wayne County club defeated Greenville, 28 to 0, today to win the Eastern North Carolina midget league football title for the fourth straight year. Billy Tyndall scored all four touchdowns.

McKoy Plans Bowing Out Of SS Loop

Johnny McKoy, high scoring center of the Wilmington All-Star cagers, last night said he would continue to play with the semi-pro team despite the threat of losing his berth on the Temple Baptist church quint due to an amateur ruling.

McKoy, former star of the New Hanover High cage champions of 1946-47, said if he could not continue to play on both squads, he would quit the church league and remain a player for the All-Stars who are under the sponsorship of Black's Texaco service station and who collect a split of gate receipts for all games played.

Thursday Adam Smith, athletic director at the YMCA here and manager of the Sunday school leagues, cited an amateur ruling which would prevent the McKoy brothers, Leonard and Johnny from being paid any money for playing basketball if they were to remain on the high-powered Temple Baptist team. Earl Black, president of the Independent All-Stars said the McKoys would receive a share of the gate in all games played this season.

McKoy said he hoped to be able to play for the Temple team, but said if the amateur rule was to force him off one of the teams, he'd leave the Baptists. He predicted his brother, also a former Wildcat star, would follow suit. Leonard McKoy is out of town at this time.

Sixth Keg Circuit Formed By Ladies

The sixth sanctioned duck-pin league was competing in Wilmington bowling circles today with four ladies teams entered as members and officers elected formally, it was reported by Claude Ingram.

Lillie Lennon was named president, Dot Walker, vice-president; and Tiny Batton, secretary-treasurer at a meeting under the supervision of Bob Justice, president of the Duck-pin Association.

The four teams entered in the feminine keg loop are: Louis Hardware, Southern Bell, Whites Ice Cream, and Williams Grocery.
