HERMAN R. SINGER, 6038 Allman st.

With three wound stripes, various souvenirs, a Croix de Guerre for rescuing an officer under fire and a smiling countenance, Corporal James G. Philips, a Philadelphia hero, has returned from the battlefields.

Corporal Philips, whose home is at 6959 Upland street, is a member of Company A, 109th Infantry. He arrived in New York January 26 and is convalescent at a hospital at Camp Merritt.

Though severely wounded in both legs and the right arm, Corporal Philips is in good spirits, and while on a visit this week to his sister, Mrs. Samuel McNabb, in Upland street, he said he expected to be fully recovered soon.

Among his souvenirs there were helmets, iron crosses and trinkets of all kinds taken from German officers.

Wounded on August 11

Corporal Philips was wounded in the drive in which the 109th Infantry participated August 11.

During this engagement Philips rushed to the rescue of an officer, Captain Garritty, who had fallen with severe wounds, and under a rain of machine-gun bullets brought him back to safety. For this act he was decorated with the Croix de Guerre.

Corporal Philips enlisted in 1916, when eighteen years old. After almost a year's training at Camp Hancock he sailed for overseas last May. He is a printer, and previous to enlistment had made his home with his father and sister at the Upland street address.

Three men in the overseas forces from this city are reported dead on the official casualty list today. Two of these were killed in action and one succumbed to disease.

Altogether there are thirty-nine from Philadelphia and its vicinity on the report.

The total number of army casualties for the United States today is 1614. The names of 165 men from this State appear on the list.

Correction Brings Sorrow

Among the Philadelphians in the report there are seven corrections.

One of these brings sorrow. Private Wheatly D. Lewis, 6108 Grays avenue, who was reported missing some time ago, is now said by the War Department to have been killed in action.

Five of the previously reported missing are reclassified today as wounded slightly.

Ten wounded severely, fifteen wounded with degree undetermined and ten wounded slightly constitute the remainder of the men from this section on the report today.

SKETCHES OF THE HEROES

Private William Mahon, reported wounded, was gassed October 5. He has recovered and is now in Company A, 324th Infantry, awaiting to be returned to this country, according to a recent letter from him to his parents, William F. and Elizabeth Mahon, 260 Du Pont street. In telling of his experiences with the Germans as fighters, Private Mahon said:

"The hoche fights all right as long as he is behind a machine gun with nothing coming his way, but take him in the open and one punch with the naked fist does him. He is no good at fair fighting and I think our guns were not as effective as our fists or clubs, at times."

Private Mahon is thirty-two years old. He was one of the first fifteen men from Manayunk to enter the service after Congress declared war. He went to Camp Meade, but was transferred after a few weeks to Company Four of the National Army and sailed for France the same month war was declared. A brother, Sylvester P. Mahon, eighteen years old, is overseas with Company F, 109th Infantry. He enlisted the same day war was declared.

PRIVATE JOHN SHERMAN, Company F, 114th Infantry, was slightly gassed after several hours of fighting at the Battle of Sedan, the last engagement of the war. Sherman, who lived at 3804 Locust street, has written a letter home in which he describes the attack of the enemy by the American and French troops at Sedan. He said:

"On October 12, the Twenty-ninth Division sent a regiment of 3500 against a stubbornly contended sector that our men had failed three times to indent. Of this whole regiment only 680 men came back fit for duty. Out of two companies that went over the top at seven o'clock in the morning that day there were only sixty men left after an hour's fighting."

Private Sherman is twenty-two years old. He enlisted on his twenty-first birthday in the National Guard of New Jersey and was sent to Camp McClellan for training, where he remained until his regiment sailed for overseas June last.

In the letter home to his parents, written since the armistice, he says that he is recovering rapidly from the gas attack and expects to be returned to this country soon.

Corporal John Walsh, this city, a member of the 313th Infantry, originally reported wounded, is now known to have died of his wounds.

This information came to relatives here a few days ago in a letter written by Sergeant Lofler, of the 313th Infantry, whose duty it is to return dead soldiers' mail. He told in the letter of how Private Walsh was wounded one week September 29 by a fragment of flying shrapnel, and of how his death resulted because no means could be had to get him to the hospital on account of heavy shellfire.

"Corporal Walsh was a good soldier; he fought in some of the severest engagements of the war, and his life, given up on the field of honor, was not in vain," adds Sergeant Lofler in the letter to the dead hero's relatives.

Private Thomas Glascone, 1517 Melon street, a member of Company A, 109th infantry, was severely wounded in the Battle of the Argonne, September 29.

Private Glascone was formerly of the First Regiment, National Guards of Pennsylvania, having enlisted in May, 1916. He served at El Paso, Texas, during the border troubles in 1916 and 1917, and when Congress declared war on Germany he was again called out. He trained intensively at Camp Hancock until his regiment sailed May last.

Private Glascone was with his unit at Chateau Thiegry, the battle of the Marne and finally the attack in the Argonne, where he was wounded. He is nineteen years old. In recent letters to his parents, written from a hospital, he says that he is recovering.

Corporal Joseph P. Lambert, classified in today's official casualty list as wounded, and stated to have been previously reported missing, was never reported missing and was only slightly wounded once, according to his parents, who live at 5409 Haverford avenue. He has written home regularly and is perfectly well and safe, said his parents today.

Private Joseph O'Toole, 128 South Forty-eighth street, wounded October 26 in his right knee, is twenty-five years old and a member of Company H, Sixteenth Infantry. He trained at Camp Green, and has been overseas since July of last year. Previous to entering the service he was in the ice business, and had lived with his parents at the Forty-eighth street address.

Private Mellor Sunderly, Company G, 315th Infantry, reported originally to have been missing in action since September 26, has been located by the War Department in a base hospital.

According to a letter received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sunderly, 2051 Medary avenue, he was wounded by shrapnel in the ankle, but has recovered.

Sunderly was drafted in September, 1917, and went to Meade for training. At Camp Meade he was rejected, but later was operated on in this city for a slight physical disability and was returned to duty. He sailed for overseas in July. Previous to going away to camp he was a hardware salesman.

A brother, J. C. Sunderly, twenty-three, went overseas and served during the war with the Jefferson Hospital unit.

Private William O. Jones, colored, 1413 Naudain street, wounded, is a member of Company C, 369th Infantry. He was drafted in November, 1917, trained at Meade and sailed for France last April. Letters from him to his wife some time ago said that he was wounded in the hand.

Private Herbert A. Dixon, twenty-seven, a member of the medical unit of the 111th Infantry, reported wounded, has written to an aunt, Mrs. Mary Doyle, 1535 Seibert street, that he was gassed at Sedan on the day hostilities ceased. He is recovering, he said. He entered the service in September, 1917, trained at Hancock and sailed for overseas in May. Private Dixon is married, and before entering the service lived with his wife and two children at the Seibert street address. He is a patternmaker.

Private John Ischi, twenty-seven, 4035 North Reese street, Company A, 315th Infantry, reported wounded in today's official report, was hit in the arm by a bursting shell November 2, according to a letter written to his sister, Miss Kathrin Ischi, a month ago. A telegram received by her this morning said he landed in New York yesterday and expects to be home soon.

He was drafted in June, 1917, trained at Camp Meade and sailed in July. He was born in this city, attended the public schools and previous to entering the service was a receiving clerk in a wholesale grocery store.

Private John J. Davenport, thirty-four years old, 741 West Ontario street, a member of Company C, 110th Infantry, was formerly of the old First Regiment, N. G. P., and trained at Camp Hancock.

He is reported missing in action since October 1, but has been located in a hospital.

In the letters home Private Davenport does not mention anything about being wounded. In one letter he inclosed a picture of himself, but one hand was placed behind his back, and his parents believe that the hand has been amputated and that he is trying to deceive them. He was born in this city and attended St. Charles Parochial School. Previous to enlistment in the army he was employed in New York as an ironworker.

DOUGHBOYS TO SEE PARIS

U. S. Arranges Three-Day Visits at Small Cost to Men

Paris, Feb. 1.—The first American officers and soldiers who are to get a chance to see Paris on three days' leave of absence before sailing homeward are arriving in the city.

Paris will entertain 7500 soldiers and 2000 officers at a time, the enlisted men arriving and departing at the rate of 2500 daily. Within a short time new hotels, canteens and restaurants will be opened by which the handling of 12,000 visitors at one time will be arranged. The Y. M. C. A. and the American Red Cross accomodations will have to be doubled to permit the accommodation of 12,000 men simultaneously.

Breakfast will be supplied at the seven American Red Cross canteens at ten and fifteen cents, and sleeping accommodations in no case will exceed three francs.

INSCRIBED ON ROLL OF HONOR

HELPED FEED 250,000 ITALIAN PRISONERS

Captain James Carstairs Organized Canteen 4000 Feet Up Mountain at Modane

Organizing a canteen 4000 feet up on the mountain at Modane, and supplying food and drink there for 250,000 Italian prisoners Germany released after the war, was one of the labors performed by Captain James Carstairs, just returned from Red Cross work in Italy.

Modane is on the border line between France and Italy, in the Alps. Captain Carstairs, who was a director of American Red Cross supply work for the province of Piedmont, with headquarters at Turin, also furnished the permanent canteens at all the railroad stations with food and drink.

The Italian soldier passing through found it impossible to support himself on his allowance, which was only one penny a day.

"The Italian people love the American Red Cross," said Captain Carstairs today. "And no wonder, for it is hard to see how Italy could have lived to see a victorious peace without that saving hand.

"In Piedmont alone we furnished 500 military hospitals with all their supplies. We had three warehouses in Turin in which we kept the supplies, which all came from America. We also had a workshop. Our workshops, each under the direction of an American Red Cross nurse, worked all the time making clothes for the soldiers, whom we furnished completely excepting their suits. Italy particularly appreciates our work for its orphan children of soldiers killed in the war. We found homes for them and clothed and fed them, making their clothes in our own workshops.

"Our workshop in Turin kept thirty-eight Italian women busy all the time. In Piedmont alone we furnished medicine, food and all other hospital supplies for 250,000 beds. We also supplied the bunk houses in connection with the canteens where the Italian soldier passing through to different towns could have a comfortable bed free of charge. This saved him sleeping in the railroad stations while waiting, often a night long, to make connections."

Captain Carstairs, a member of the banking brokerage firm of Carstairs & Co., this city, enrolled in the early part of September, 1918, in the American Red Cross. He enrolled for Italian service because it was the shortest way of getting across. In Rome he received his commission of captaincy.

Sir Horace Plunkett Hopes to Find Aid for Ireland in U. S.

New York, Feb. 1.—(By A. P.)—Sir Horace Plunkett, who in 1918 presided over the Dublin convention which tried in vain to bring about an agreement among Irish factions for self-government, arrived here on the liner Adriatic. He said he contemplated a "listening expedition" to America.

He said he hoped to discover in this country interest in Ireland's political problems sufficient to help bring about its solution before the adjournment of the Peace Conference.

Sir Horace stated that he had no present program of speechmaking. He will leave next Monday for the West, where, as a youth, he spent several years in ranch life.
