Experience teaches, but it is often an expensive instructor.

Some people think they are dignified, when they simply have the big head.

Lots of women wear pretty gowns that didn't cost them anything but a cry.

One of the worst bullies we ever knew never licked anything but his wife and a postage stamp.

If there is a sadder spectacle in the world than a neglected wife it is a neglected husband.

About the cheapest thing ever found at the bargain counter is a husband waiting for his wife.

After a woman passes 25 years of age she would just as soon get married on Friday as any other day.

Wearing bloomers ought to make a woman self-reliant, but it makes a man look after her more than ever.

Some men are so stingy that they would never be willing to start for heaven unless excursion rates were given.

When a woman marries a man she not only takes his name, but most everything else the poor scoundrel possesses.

There is a tide in the affairs of every boy which leads him to prefer the ban'ls of the "crick" to his g'ography lesson.

It is wrong to speak of a convicted church member as a good man gone wrong. You should say he is a bad man found out.

In the Main Hatchway.

Many years ago when sailors were in the habit of chewing much more than at the present day, two tars were sitting in the gallery of an old country church paying very great attention to the service.

During the sermon one of them heard a distinct sound of snoring coming up from the body of the church, and, looking down, he saw a fat old farmer fast asleep, his head thrown well back and his mouth wide open.

The temptation was too strong for Jack, who, making up a quid of tobacco, shut one eye and, glancing along an imaginary plumb-line, dropped it into the old man's mouth, causing the old fellow to close it with a snap and jump to his feet, spluttering and spitting, with a face almost purple.

Confusion reigned supreme, and Jack's chum innocently asked:

"What's up, Jack? Man overboard?"

"No," said Jack, exploding with suppressed laughter; "I dropped a bit of 'baccy down the main hatchway and into his old grog tub."—London Spare Moments.

Patent Your Mine.

The Mining Reporter of Denver very wisely says: "Push your mine to patent. What is the use of practically paying taxes of $100 per year on it, in the form of the regular annual assessments, when by patenting, the yearly cost will be only a few dollars. As soon as five assessments have been properly performed an affidavit of $500 improvement can be honestly made, and then a patent is obtainable. The order for survey will cost $40; the survey $30 to $50; land office fees, $10; attorney's fees for drawing papers, $25 to $100; advertising, $25 to $75; affidavits, etc., perhaps $10, and final entry expense, if a ten-acre lode claim, $50. Total, $189 to $325. Then you have a positive title, and can give a warranty deed for it, if necessary."

There is a time in the career of every boy when he would rather be ringmaster in a circus than president of the United States.

Senator Jones and His Collar.

Senator Jones of Arkansas is a member of the Humane Society and wears a badge that entitles him to investigate the condition of any animal that appears to be ill-treated. A few days ago as he came down from the capitol he inspected a team that was standing by the curb.

"Here, you!" shouted the driver, "what are you doing here feeling about that horse's neck?"

"I am an officer of the Humane Society," replied Senator Jones, mildly, and I want to see if this collar fits this horse."

"Well," snarled the driver, "if that collar don't fit that horse any better than your collar fits you, you just run along and get a cop and have me arrested."

Senator Jones passed on.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Courtesy is a debt every man owes to every other man.

He Was Jarred.

A good joke is being told in ——on the editor of the—— published there. He went on a recent evening to report a party at a home recently blessed with a new baby. He met the hostess at the door, and, after the usual salutations, asked after the baby's health. The lady, who was quite deaf, and suffering from the grip, thought he was asking about her cold, and answered that, although she usually had one every other winter, this was the worst one she ever had; kept her awake nights a good deal, and at first confined her to her bed. Then, noticing that the newspaper man was getting nervous, she said she could tell by his looks that he was going to have one just like hers, and invited him to come in and sit down.
