Throngs Mourn at Prelate's Bier

Body of Archbishop Montgomery Lies in State in St. Mary's

Body of Archbishop Montgomery Lying in State in the Chapel of St. Mary's Cathedral, Where Throngs of Devoted Friends Viewed the Peaceful Countenance of the Departed Prelate Yesterday.

Reverent throngs of people filed in and out of the chapel of St. Mary's Cathedral all day and evening yesterday to view the body of the late beloved Coadjutor Archbishop Montgomery, which, robed in the purple garb of his office, lay stretched on the bier. A silver crucifix, emblem of the master of whom the dead prelate called in the last moment of his life, stood at his head. On either side three tall tapers, heavily draped in black velvet, shed their dim light over the scene. Close to the bier, brushing against it, passed a constant stream of people. There were rich and poor alike, for the Archbishop was the friend of both equally.

There were old men and women tottering along with the aid of canes, and young, strong men with faces set in stern lines to hide an emotion that would reveal itself in twitching lip and moistened eye. Black-robed sisters of the different Catholic orders came with heads bent, and faces, which, though schooled to subdue emotion, showed a sincere and deep sorrow.

Children from the parish school were marshaled by their teachers and stood on tiptoe to look upon the benign face, calm in the serenity of death. Some were too small to pay attention to anything except the magnificent robes of lace and silk, or to do aught but touch with wondering fingers the thin black crape that covered the bier. Others looked with solemn faces at death, presented to them perhaps for the first time, but none seemed frightened; it was such a kindly face to look upon, even death being unable to take away its serenity.

CHURCH DRAPED IN BLACK

While the chapel was filling with worshipers the great organ burst forth with a peal of solemn music and the choir rendered appropriate songs.

While special services were being held in the chapel in the afternoon, the church above was being draped with black, and black was hung before the windows, veiling in a somber cloud the colored flood of light passing through their panes. The loving hands of the sisters were busily employed in making everything ready for the funeral.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock in the evening the chapel was closed for a short time, while the body was being placed in the casket, and in the meantime the halls and the street outside filled with people, waiting patiently and talking to each other in low tones of the late Coadjutor Archbishop, of his many deeds of kindness and his life passed in untiring service of his fellow-men.

"He was always there when you wanted him," seemed to be the burden of the little incidents related to show how the Archbishop was ever ready to put his personal comfort aside when called upon to render assistance to those who needed it.

"He was loved by all," said an old woman, wiping her eyes, as she sat on the stairs, waiting.

"He was just the same to every one," said the boy in attendance.

When the doors were opened again the church filled instantly and again the sad procession filed past the body of the Archbishop lying now in the casket covered with purple velvet.

MESSAGES OF CONDOLENCE

Telegrams of condolence are coming by hundreds and are piled high on Archbishop Riordan's desk. Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and all the archbishops and bishops of America, as well as a great number of private persons, have sent messages expressing sorrow at the death of the Archbishop, admiration of his character and sympathy with the people of San Francisco, on whom the loss has fallen most heavily. From Rome nothing had been heard up to last night, the many formalities connected with the sending of a message from the Vatican probably having caused the delay.

The arrangements for the funeral will be completed today. The usual vesper service will be omitted Sunday evening, and instead the clergy of the city will chant the office of the dead at about 8 o'clock.

Monday morning at 10 o'clock the solemn requiem mass will be celebrated in the cathedral for the repose of the soul of Archbishop Montgomery. The celebrant will be Bishop Grace of Sacramento, assisted by the clergy of the city. The sermon will be preached by Bishop Conaty of Los Angeles, and the absolution after the mass, which is part of the requiem services, will be given by Archbishop Riordan. It is also expected that Bishop O'Dea of Seattle and other church dignitaries from all parts of the country will be present at the funeral procession to the Holy Cross Cemetery.

The body will remain in the chapel until Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when it will be placed on a catafalque before the high altar.

ARRANGE FUNERAL CORTEGE

League of the Cross Cadets Meet to Perfect Plans for Escort

Officers of the League of the Cross Cadets held a meeting, which was presided over by Father Philip O'Ryan, last night in Native Sons' Hall and arranged for the funeral cortege of Archbishop Montgomery. The cadets, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Benjamine L. McKinley, will form an important part of the funeral cortege, in which will be representatives also of nearly every Catholic organization in San Francisco.

Archbishop Montgomery organized the League of the Cross Cadets about fifteen years ago and the success of the organization has been largely due to his constant effort and attention. For this reason the league is to have especial consideration at the funeral.

At the meeting last night it was stated that many of the uniforms of the cadets had been burned in the April fire and thus it was decided to segregate in the march all those in uniform. Those not in uniform will follow the uniformed ranks.

A special delegation from the cadets will attend the services in the cathedral, as there will not be room there for more. The regiment will form at Sutter and Franklin streets at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning and will be ready to take its place in line as soon as the services are over. The funeral cortege will be under the direction of Police Captain Henry Gleeson, and the line of march will be from St. Mary's Cathedral to the Valencia-street station. A delegation of the cadets will follow the remains from that place to the cemetery.

The funeral cortege will include the Knights of Columbus, the Young Men's Institute, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and other Catholic organizations.

It will not be possible to accommodate all the friends of the late Archbishop in the cathedral, and thus it has been arranged that admission will be by ticket.

All officers and retired officers of the League of the Cross Cadets have been asked to meet at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon in Native Sons' Hall, Gough and Geary streets, when further plans for the funeral will be discussed.

SUCCESSOR NOT DISCUSSED

Appointment by Pope Will Undoubtedly Be Deferred for Some Time

In the grief for the death of the Coadjutor Archbishop there is little room for the thought of the appointment of his successor. While it is presumed the man upon whom shall fall the mantle of the dead prelate will be called from among the mourning clergy of this diocese, no thought of the selection has arisen.

While the appointment of the successor of Archbishop Montgomery will be made by the Pope himself, according to the custom of the church, yet he will be aided in doing this by the suggestion of three names made to him from among the priesthood.

Were it not for the fact that Archbishop Riordan remains in control of the archdiocese a more immediate appointment would be anticipated.

The welfare of a diocese with a single prelate in charge of its spiritual and temporal affairs would necessitate a prompt appointment. But Archbishop Montgomery was the coadjutor of Archbishop Riordan and in that office assisted him in the care of the churches. For this reason there will be no cause for haste in making the selection of the three names to be submitted to Rome and it is anticipated that it will be some time before the successor to Archbishop Montgomery is appointed by the Pope.

FORM POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY

Articles of incorporation were filed yesterday for the City Electric Company, which has been formed for general lighting and power purposes. The capital stock is $5,000,000, of which $9000 has been subscribed. The directors are Adolph Mack, J. J. Mack, Henry Steinbach, Mortimer Fleishhacker, Herbert Fleishhacker, W. S. Goodfellow, Charles P. Eells, Frank W. Smith and Walter Arnstein.

Mortimer Fleishhacker and other directors of the new company denied last night that the concern had anything whatever to do with the San Francisco Coke and Gas Company merger, and they declared that the company was entirely independent of any other organization. The machinery for the new plant has been ordered and the promoters said that work on the plant, the site for which will be at some location not yet chosen on the bay shore, would probably begin next week. It is the intention of the company to manufacture all its electricity in San Francisco by the use of oil fuel.

Turbine engines, the first to be introduced in San Francisco, will be used for the generation of the electrical current. The company will manufacture electricity for general lighting purposes and its directors expect to reduce the present cost of that commodity. The plant will have a capacity of 10,000 horsepower.

DR. HARTLAND LAW INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Right Arm Broken by Blow From Crank as He Tries to Start His Motor Car

SUFFERS GREATLY FROM FRACTURES

Dr. Hartland Law was seriously injured in an automobile accident at 11 o'clock Thursday night in front of the Hahneman Hospital, at Maple and California streets, the bones of his right arm being broken between the elbow and wrist. He was at once carried into the hospital and has remained there since. An X-ray examination of the fractures will be made today in the hope that the bones may be set so as to prevent permanent disability.

Dr. Law was leaving the hospital after calling with some friends, and had stooped to start the engine of his automobile. The engine back-fired and the crank with which he was turning it flew back with great force, jamming his arm against the pavement and breaking the bones below the elbow.

After Dr. Law had been taken into the hospital the fractures were temporarily set. A further examination will be made today by Dr. James H. Ward. Dr. Law was in great pain during the night, but was resting easier yesterday.

FRENCH CAPITAL IN BIG ENTERPRISE

A French syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of several water-power sites in California and an engineer has been sent out from Paris to investigate. It is understood that one of the projects under investigation is in Tuolumne County.

Henry Brunner of the Central Trust Company has just returned from Paris, where he originated the enterprise and organized the French-American Bank, which, in connection with the Knickerbocker Trust Company in New York, will place the California securities. Speaking of his work, Brunner said:

"A prominent French engineer, who is an expert in railroad and electric power matters, came to the United States with me and is now examining several propositions under my instructions. The financing is to be carried out by a group of French bankers, headed by the French-American Bank, in which a great many French bankers are interested as shareholders and several as directors."

GO TO EUROPE TO ARRANGE DETAILS OF BIG OIL DEAL

Henry Crocker and W. H. Avery of Toyo Kisen Kaisha Leave for London to Complete Contract

Henry Crocker and W. H. Avery, assistant general manager of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, have departed for London to complete certain financial details of the large oil contract which the Crocker interests were awarded some time ago by the Japanese steamship company. The oil is to be used by the Japanese liners. It was originally expected that M. Shirashi, the general manager of the company, would make the trip with Crocker and attend to the transaction, but he was taken suddenly ill and his physicians ordered him back to Japan. Crocker has arranged the preliminary details of the contract, with the Toyo Kisen Kaisha, but the financial end is not yet adjusted.

GRAHAM WILL HEAR CASE

Judge Graham announced yesterday that he would hear the damage suit brought by James Mitchell against the California and Oregon Coast Steamship Company without a jury, as requested by the attorneys for both sides. Taking of testimony in this suit, which resulted from the explosion on the steamer Despatch, in which Mitchell's son lost his life, was practically concluded last week, when the jury was dismissed because of alleged jury tampering by certain witnesses. Rather than go over the entire case again, the attorneys agreed to leave the decision to Judge Graham if he would consider the case alone. He ordered that the remaining witnesses be called for next Wednes-

JAPANESE STUDENT REFUSED

Miss Bartlett, principal of the Madison School, reported to the Board of Education yesterday that in accordance with the ruling of the board relating to Japanese pupils she had refused to permit a Japanese student, who had made several applications, to attend her school. United States District Attorney Devlin asked the board for additional data on the Japanese school question and arrangements were made for forwarding the data to him immediately.
