State Politics.

(From the Democratic Telegram.)

The boom of Judge N. Charles Burke, of Baltimore county, is steadily growing, and there is a general impression that the Judge will be selected as the compromise candidate. The friends of United States Senator Smith declared that he will eventually line up behind him. While the city Democrats look with favor upon Senator Gorman, they are also speaking in the highest terms of Judge Burke. Baltimore county is back of him to a man. Harford county prefers his nomination to that of any other man who has been mentioned with the exception of General Murray Vandiver. In every county in the State there are hundreds of Democrats who are urging his nomination. It was suggested several days ago that within the next few weeks a conference of party leaders, among whom will be Senator Smith, Senator Gorman, Mr. John J. Mahon, Mr. Frank A. Furst and Congressman J. F. C. Talbot, will be held, and it is believed that this conference will agree upon Judge Burke. If such should come to pass, then the Judge would be nominated by an overwhelming majority, irrespective of his opponents, and there is no doubt that he would sweep the State at the general election.

Governor Crothers is still keeping silent on the Governorship. There is no doubt that the Governor would like to succeed himself, and if the situation should develop that he believed that he had a chance to be nominated he would jump into the fight with both feet. But the Governor is a shrewd politician. He knows that if the leaders throughout the State would agree to support one man for the nomination, then he would not have a chance in the primary. If the fight should be between Senators Gorman and Lee, then he would think that he had a chance of beating both of them as the third candidate.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., July 6, 1911.

By CLYDE H. TAVERNER.

There is one protectionist argument that will never again occupy the place in American politics that it has in the past.

That is the argument that a high protection wall is necessary to enable American manufacturers to compete in home markets with foreign manufactured goods.

The reason this stock protectionist argument will never again perform the same valuable mission for the Republicans, is because of a speech delivered on the House by Wm. C. Redfield of New York, who is a manufacturer himself, and who for 18 years has been selling American manufactures in foreign countries.

Redfield contended and proved that the difference in daily wage at home and abroad should not be the sole basis of determining the amount of protection to be applied to a given article.

He cited instance after instance in which he sold articles manufactured by $5 a day American employees in countries where labor received less than one dollar a day.

Redfield took the position that American manufacturers did not need as much protection as they were now enjoying "to protect them from foreign competition" because they are successfully competing with foreign manufacturers in all parts of the world.

"How does it happen?" demanded Redfield, "that in a quotation recently made for machinery to a firm in Japan the American price was $215 less than the English price?"

"How does it happen that 720 American locomotives are running upon the Japanese railways, and upon those of Manchuria, and upon those of Formosa, and upon those of Cuba? These are sold in open competition with the makers in Great Britain."

Redfield related an incident between an American salesman who recently took a large contract from the Japanese Imperial State Railways and one of the managers of the Imperial Railways shop.

The Japanese official was under the impression that he could manufacture locomotives cheaper than an American plant because Japanese wages are but one fifth of American wages.

"Both men got out their cost books," said Redfield, "and they found that the fact was the labor cost for locomotives on the same specifications was three and one-half times greater in the Japanese shops than in the American shops. And this is a perfectly normal fact and not an abnormal one."

Redfield said when he was in Calcutta, India, recently, his agent pointed to a pair of American made shoes he was wearing.

"I paid $3.85 for those shoes," said the agent. "It is the regular American $5 shoe."

Redfield said that when he returned to New York he found the same shoe selling on Broadway for $5. "I shall be glad to give names and addresses to any member who inquires in private."

Redfield gave a score of similar instances. It is impossible to do justice to his remarkable revelation in this dispatch.

Every reader of this article may secure, free of charge, a copy of the complete speech, without doubt one of the most remarkable of its kind ever made in Congress, by writing Hon. James T. Lloyd, Chairman, National Democratic Congressional Committee Washington, D. C.
