The bill which was referred to the Committee on Education, provides that all colored children between six and twenty years old shall be considered of school age, and requires such schools to be kept in operation not less than seven months a year.

Senator Chesley, has introduced a bill regulating the speed of automobiles, motorcycles, etc. The bill provides for a speed limit of 25 miles an hour, and in sections where more than two houses are in sight of each other, the speed limit is placed at 12 miles, and in town or incorporated villages 6 miles an hour. The bill further provides that no automobile, motorcycle, vehicle or machine shall erect, hoist or display on its top or side any banner, flag or streamer, this does not apply to small flags carried as signals by policemen of State roads.

Mr. Ucker's Address.

Synopsis of Address Delivered by Clement S. Ucker, in the Court House, at Leonardtown, Va., January 28, At a Meeting of St. Mary's County Farmers and Citizens, With the Officials of the Southern Settlement and Development Organization.

In the fall of the year of 1911, the officials of the Great Northern Rail, who conceived the idea of getting together the governors of the states through which the Railway passes and bringing them to some particular cities of the east to afford an opportunity to discuss with each other the affairs of their common section of the country. The citizens of Baltimore were asked to entertain the governors, accepted the invitation and made suitable preparations. It then occurred to the Citizens' Committee of Baltimore that it would be a graceful act to invite the governors of the southern states to come to Baltimore and act as hosts to the governors of the North West. All this was done in December, 1911; a banquet and general conference was held in Baltimore at which the visiting governors from the North West talked at great length upon the advantages and resources of the North Western country and that country has been settled, and in particular, spoke of the enterprise and spirit which had animated the North West in the settlement of this Virginia land. The thought apparently occurred to the governors of the South that there was, to a great extent, a lack of this same enterprise and constructive support in the Southern states, and as a result, steps were taken looking to a general conference, which was held on February 20, 1912, at which were present the governors of the Southern states or their personal representatives, representative officials of the Great Railway systems of the South, Steamship Lines, Boards of Trades of the various cities and numerous other organizations. After some days of conference, approximately 125 present were selected as a charter list, and a charter was obtained by special act of the Maryland Legislature, dated April 11, 1912, incorporating the Southern Settlement and Development Organization. It is a corporation having as its corporate officers a president, vice-president and general manager, secretary, treasurer, Board of Directors; the home office in Baltimore and provisions are made for branch offices.

The objects and purposes of the Organization may be resolved into the statement that the prime object of the organization is to develop the agriculture and industrial resources of the South. This work is divided into four parts: each presided over by a director, and known as a department. These departments are: Publicity, Colonization, Agriculture, Industrial and Real Estate.

The object of the Department of Publicity is to place before the world in readable form the exact truth, nothing more, nothing less, of the resources and advantages offered by the southern states including within the charter of the corporation.

The Agriculture Department has as its prime purpose the co-ordinating and stimulating of agriculture pursuits within the territory referred to.

The Commerce, Industrial and Real Estate Department has to do with the establishment of such industries as may be deemed necessary in the various localities of the southern states to take care of their products, raw material, etc.

With the above, I am not directly concerned. My work lies entirely with the Colonization Department, of which I am a Director. Now, it may be of interest to know that within the southern territory referred to, as near as it is possible, to approximate it there are about one hundred and sixty thousand acres of vacant, unused agricultural land fitted in some particular or other to some special phase of agriculture pursuits. It is with the settlement of this land that I am particularly concerned. It is a remarkable fact that our common country should have developed as it has, and yet at this advanced date, we should find this condition existing. There are numerous reasons to account for this, but I have not time to go into that question. I might, in a general way, sketch for you the onward march of development, particularly from the agricultural side, in the United States.

When the Revolutionary War was concluded by the treaty of Ghent, there were the thirteen original colonies which contained the original states scattered along the Atlantic Seaboard from Georgia in the South to New Hampshire in the North. All that territory which today comprises Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, and part of Wisconsin, was then known as the North West territory, and its title was by the treaty above referred to, acknowledged to be in the New States, particularly Virginia. It must be borne in mind that the thirteen original colonies themselves offered advantages in the way of unoccupied lands; the states of Kentucky and West Virginia were then a part of the new state of Virginia; Tennessee was then a part of North Carolina; Florida had not then been acquired; Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi subsequently became territories carved out of the public domain and in 1804 Jefferson completed the Louisiana Purchase, so that shortly after the conclusion of the Revolutionary War there was thrown open to settlement all that vast territory stretching from the Atlantic Coast to the foot hills of the Rocky Mountains, and at that time the population of the United States was approximately three million people, so that there had never before been thrown open to the people of the world at one time such a magnificent tract of vacant, unoccupied, virgin domain ready for agriculture.

About this time a war known as the Napoleonic Wars, which had for years been agitating Northern Europe and had been making agriculture regions
