HOLDING LARGE DOORS OPEN

Heavy Affairs Are, When Caught by Sudden Gust of Wind, Dangerous to Life and Limb.

Large and heavy doors are, when caught by sudden gusts of wind, about as dangerous as anything around the establishment. A good many ways are employed to hold them open, but a strong wind readily tears a heavy door free from its anchor.

The illustration shows how a cheap, practical and simple lock-open arrangement can be made from a piece of seven-eighths or one-inch round iron. It is capable of holding a door of considerable size open, no matter how strongly the wind blows, and on account of its shape it will not break loose.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AVOID OLD ASPARAGUS ROOTS Important That Soil for Plant Be Well Drained—Set "Pipes" Six Inches
Below the Surface.

Never plant old asparagus roots or try to divide them. Plant the "pipes" instead. Set plants about six inches below the level of the ground in furrows. Put well-rotted manure in the furrows and mix with the soil. The first year level and cultivate. The second year put on a good coat of manure early in the spring, then harrow and cultivate between the rows. It is important that soil for asparagus be well drained.

Hen in Much Trouble.
A New Jersey hen, spying a barrel of fine, soft tar, alighted thereon and climbed on it. There resulted a firm sandwich—tar, egg and chicken in the order named. A woman and a man who went to the rescue were also held fast by the hands until possibly were called and effected a rescue.

HORSES WELL MATCHED

Skill and Judgment Required to Bring Them Together.

Color and Markings Are Not the Only Desirable Characteristics—Strong, Clean Movements Attract a Purchaser.

Matching horses is an art and it requires some skill and judgment to bring together a pair of horses that resemble each other in all the characteristics sufficiently to work in harmony. In order to do this successfully it is necessary to have more than the color of the animals in mind. While it is desirable to have a team of horses closely alike in color and markings, these are not the only characteristics.

Action comes first when considering matching of horses. Proper action, strong, clean, vigorous movements of the feet and legs attract a buyer more quickly than anything else.
Style is required in the action of any class of horses. Snappy, straight and balanced movement of the motive apparatus, each animal standing up to the bit in about the same way, makes an attractive team, and is pleasing to the eyes of the buyer and of the man who drives it.

In a farm team strength and conformation might possibly be placed before action, at any rate it should come second. A team ill matched in regard to strength and staying powers is a mighty poor asset, as far as a team is concerned. In selecting horses to work against each other in a team it is important to get them in general conformation as nearly alike as possible, good and strong behind, and muscled well in the back and loin, short and thick in the middle, with noses—not fat—beneath the hide.

Size to a certain extent may be sacrificed for strength and conformation, but only within certain limits.
A difference of 100 pounds or so in weight does not matter much when a pair is being matched up, but if much more than that, the difference in size will be too clear and detract from the value of the team. Size is an important matter, but it comes after strength, and conformation follows action in relative importance.

Color comes last of all in the major points to be taken into consideration.
A difference in color, however marked, is among the least objectionable features of a team. Yet, strangely, some horses are matched up so unlike in action and temperament that the whiffles of one is always scouring the wagon wheel, while the other is drawing ahead here and strong to the bit.

The team is so unlike in strength and conformation that one horse is fagged out a long time before the other shows fatigue.

Tom passed for a moment and thought, "Here's my remedy," he responded. "Call off this board meeting this afternoon. Then give the girl a real taste of happiness. If she is well covered, invite her to your own home, treat her as you would a guest, provide her with a few pretty clothes and take her about with you. Let her see the normal side of life. Let her realize that a woman can be pretty and attractive without being a sinner."

It was two weeks later, and Mrs.
Stoddard was again seated before her spindle-legged desk. Tom again sat before her in apparent impatience.

"That plan is a failure, just as I thought it would be," she began. "Why I ever thought you could advise me in the case of young orphan girls is quite beyond me. Oh, yes, she was very sweet and lovely for a while and all my friends declared she was beautiful, and two or three of the bachelors who never look at debutantes suddenly discovered a decided fondness for my yesterday. And at the tea-time she came in smiling and refused to tell me where she had been. She is upstairs in her room now. I am going straight to her room—I needn't tell you that for you are much in the same boat yourself. There was nothing in the least bit forward about her though.

She was as sweet as a girl of our own class—and then suddenly she went off
