His pall-bearers were his six grand-sons, Wm. Johnson, Andrew, Harry, Paul, Earl and Alton Burch. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, Bryantown. TIDEWATER LINES PLAN
EXTENSION OF SERVICE
The citizens of Millstone and surrounding country are manifesting keen interest in the proposed extension of the Tidewater Lines system into that territory. The Tidewater Lines have not petitioned several times in the past to extend their splendid passenger and freight service to Millstone, but their main line south of Leonardtown at Great Mills.
As a point that with this extension followed in other sections where their service has been extended, and carrying out the policy desired by the Public Service Commission of Maryland, an allotment of $7,500 has been assigned to the Tidewater Lines. Capital stock of the Tidewater Lines will be subscribed to this amount by residents before the service will be established.
Excellent progress so far has been made in the subscription and it is anticipated that very shortly the full amount will be raised.
The Tidewater Lines are at present doing an unusually heavy business. They show an increase in volume of business handled of over 50 per cent the past six months.
Plans are now being completed to extend their Bradynville line down toward the Baden and Westwood to Aquasco.
There is a movement on foot, which the Tidewater Lines are fostering, to build a ferry across from Millstone to Solomons Island, which will be a decided benefit to that section of the county.

BELIEVE RED HAT AWAITS DR. CURLEY
The appointment of Rt. Rev. Michael J. Curley, Bishop of St. Augustine, as Archbishop of Baltimore, is regarded as a step toward his elevation to the Sacred College. Plans are being made for his installation as head of the archdiocese, and these will be on an elaborate scale, but all the well-wishers here will be glad to recall the favorable impression made upon his visit here, mostly in making his personal reports to the late Cardinal Gibbons. At St. Paul's Church, he was well known because he has stopped there several times. His personal friendship for Mr. Michael J. Foley, the pastor, dates back for a number of years.
As a point that helped to make Bishop Curley's choice by Pope Benedict XV, a logical one, it is recalled that Cardinal Gibbons took occasion to commend to the sermon delivered by Bishop Curley at St. Paul's last September.
The Bishop has been a conspicuous figure in the church because of his distinction by the youngest member of the hierarchy at the time of his elevation in 1914. He was then but 35 and had been a priest only ten years. The new archbishop is a native of Athlone, Ireland, the same village that gave to the world McCormack, the singer.
Bishop Corrigan this morning had a long talk with the priest in his appointment and declined to make any comment upon it. The report is regarded as official, however, and priests of the diocese are looking forward to the installation which will probably be on October 12, the archbishop's birthday. -Balto. News.

WALDORF SELECTED AS SITE FOR CREAMERY
La Plata, Md., July 25. Farmers and business men of the southern section of Prince George's county and of St. Mary's and Charles counties at a meeting in the courthouse here Saturday afternoon selected Waldorf as the site for the proposed Southern Maryland Co-Operative Creamery.
The meeting was held during the past month to decide upon the location of the creamery. La Plata, Waldorf and Brandywine each claim to be the most desirable site. At a recent meeting it was decided to select Waldorf as the site for the creamery to be established in the latter town. Only those who had subscribed to stock and had paid half of the purchase price voted at the meeting Saturday. The residents of Waldorf and neighborhood were thoroughly organized and presented the most desirable site for the creamery for that town. Their votes in giving them 37 of the 42 votes cast.

Explaining Farmer's Missing Ducks.
Near Mountain View there is a creek that plunges into a hole and disappears. It reappears on the other side of Blue Mountain. Several years ago a farmer who lived near the point where the creek disappears into the earth, missed a large flock of Pekin ducks. He found them on the other side of the mountain. They had ridden through on the subterranean stream.—Arkansas Gazette.

Balance of Power.
"Balance of power" is an expression used to denote a principle in European politics that forbids any one nation to have such a preponderance of power as may endanger the independence of the rest. There was such a principle in the days of Athens, Sparta and Thebes and the rival states of Greece. It does not now play the part it did during the Eighteenth century and the first half of the Nineteenth.

WIFE'S GUARD KILLS HUSBAND AND HIMSELF

Harry E. Hemming Shot Dead as He Seeks to Enter House With Estranged Wife.
Northport, Long Island.—One of the strangest murders in Long Island history was recorded when Henry G. Hemming, investment broker, with offices at 15 Broad street, New York, was shot to death at the doorstep of View Point, one of the show places of the north shore, located on Duck Island.
The murderer, Frank Eberhardt, caretaker of the estate, and from one account self appointed guardian of Mrs. Hemming and Mrs. Hemming's little daughter, rushed to his room as the broker fell across the door all killed. The murderer, who had just committed the deed, was the son of the coroner, the deputy sheriff, and the foreman of Northport, the nearest town, drove him to suicide.
Eberhardt, a hard working, slow thinking, Austrian of forty-eight years, had been appointed a special deputy sheriff for Duck Island so that he might be available in the morning for the Hemming family—particularly Mrs. Hemming and her daughter—should they ever need protection.
Mrs. Hemming, it was learned, although married only two months, had been separated from Hemming. She had been living with her daughter at View Point. He had been staying at his home in West Eighty-sixth street, New York.

Lord Alwyn's Bride

By MURIEL BLAIR.

(Copyright, Western Newspaper Union.)
Everybody on board the ship thought that Lord Alwyn and Signora Pasquale would be engaged before the vessel sighted Sandy Hook. Their acquaintance began at the captain's table on the first day; on the second, the intermediate passengers were all seated, Lord Alwyn took the chair next to the opera singer; thereafter they appeared to be inseparable. They had not much to say on that evening, for the realization of his love for the beautiful singer had come to the Englishman quite suddenly, and when it was too late to withdraw.

"You know I love you?" he began, as they walked slowly under the stars. "Yes, there was never any pretense between us. And our love should naturally end in marriage. Well—I am already married."
"Let me tell you briefly the story of my life," he said. "When I was ten years younger I quarreled with my father. My elder brother, who was then fifteen; had no hope, thought of committing to the title. I was sent to Colorado to a ranch. I was twenty-three, impressionable, hopeless for the future, and very lonely. Old Aaron Hopper, the ranchman who had undertaken my education in return for fifteen hundred dollars, had a daughter, a mere slip of a girl, good, sweet, pretty, and charming but hopelessly ill. To this day the sound of a concertina sets my heart beating. When I heard you sing 'My Old Kentucky Home' at the charity meeting—that was the first time we met, do you remember?—the remembrance of those days came back to me as fresh and keen as ever. We were engaged. We were wild in love, in a boy and girl fashion. And we were to be married."

"The day before our marriage I received a letter from England. My father and brother were dead; both had been killed instantly in a train wreck. I was heir to the title and the family estates and fortune. In my elation I told Eva."
"I shall never forget the scene that occurred. How she refused to marry me at first. Finally I overcame her opposition and we were married the next morning, and Eva cried all through the ceremony."
"That night, when I came home, Aaron stood at the door, waving a letter, frantic with rage and humiliation. Eva had run away. I don't know what became of her. Detectives failed to find her. Old Aaron died cursing her and asking my forgiveness for having ruined my life."
"You did not want a divorce?" asked the woman softly.
"No. How could I? I knew that she had little spirit that had given her the power to keep her name at the title; that I was morally responsible for her; that even she appeared to have taken her home and asked no questions."
"He consented and the woman withdrew her hand and placed it on Lord Alwyn's shoulder."
"Stop, dear," she said. "Now look at me. I want to ask you a question. Do you love her as much as you love me?"
Lord Alwyn laughed rather bitterly. "I don't love her at all," he said. "And how much I love you you know. But, my dear, because I do not love her I feel my duty the more strongly. I am going to try to find her—and so—"

"Good-bye," she whispered, and raised her lips to his. Then she was gone and he was alone in the starlight and with his sorrow.
Lord Alwyn spent three days in New York. He called on his detective agency, but they had learned nothing. Then he took the train for Colorado.
"He was not until he reached the ranch that he came upon signs of cultivation."
Alwyn drew near at the door, knicked his horse to the old post, and hitched. A woman opened it. It was Eva. Dressed as a rancher's daughter, a pale, red over her shoulder, her hands dusty with hay, but Eva matured—No, it was not Eva. It was Alice Pasquale! Lord Alwyn staggered against the door and his hands, groping feebly, found her and held them.
"Do you know me now, dearest?" she whispered. "Have you found her again, this Eva, this ignorant girl?"
"Alice!" he said, chokingly. "It is you? You are Eva?"
The plea for her name found his neck and drew his head down to her breast. "You couldn't have known, dearest," she whispered. "It was cruel of me to try you so long. How could you have recognized the ignorant farmer's girl in the name of my daughter? But I have waited for you so long, my dear!"
"When I left you that day it was with the resolve to claim you when I had over her shoulder, her hands suffered in New York three years ago; but I had acquired an education at night; then a woman engaged me as her companion to go abroad. She believed in my powers as a singer, she would tempt me to do any and every then Count Pasquale adopted me—and you knew the rest. And every year I have come back as Alice Pasquale. I thought the ranch again. I come here during hayting time—because I knew some day you would come back."
"Never to leave you, dear," he answered. "This is our honeymoon at last."

Flowers Are Dangerous.
The flowers of many familiar flowers are poisonous. The old self-colored tulips, particularly those of a deep crimson hue, have a powerful odor which is dangerous when inhaled. This odor is of saffron flavor, and affects many people in a very peculiar manner. If breathed deeply, it has the effect of producing light headedness, which continues for some time, causing the sufferer to do any and every manner of remarkable and mysterious things. Its influence often lasts for an hour or two, and is followed by deep depression.
Flowers Not for Sick Room.
All flowers grown from bulbs are dangerous in rooms where there is illness. Although bunches of flowers are invariably taken to the sick, such blooms as hyacinths, lilies-of-the-valley, tuberose, and even daffodils and narcissus, should be carefully avoided. The perfume is said to be as dangerous to a person in a critical state of health as a dose of morphine would be, without possessing the benefits which that drug sometimes confers.
