Select Poetry.

From the Liberator.
Song of the Kansas Emigrant.

BY ALBINA BROWN.
Away from the Rock where our Pilgrim Sires Landed,
Away from the Hill where our Patriots bled, We, Patriotic Pilgrims, together are bound,
And westward, by Faith, and for Freedom, Are led.

We take one last look of the blue rolling ocean, We breathe one last prayer in a New England Land;
We look upon all we loved with emotion—Long, long shall it be ere we forget them again.
But we leave not behind all of New England's Glories,
We bear in our hearts the true hearts she has given,
We bear in our minds the true truths of her story, Pledged in life and in action, to see them maintained.

Up verdant-crowned mountain, o'er rich rolling Prairie,
We take and by river, these truths we will guard;
And ere from the line of their precepts we vary, On that will, unpropitiated, shall be made our cold bed.

Nights of Freedom for all! With the hands of Free labor
We till the free soil that a just God has given; No chains for our children, no stripes for our neighbours—
We enter our borders, their shackles are riveted.

Hear, God of our fathers, the pledge we have taken—Keep, God of our fathers, our purpose and aim; Keep, God of our country, our spirit and mind; Now, away to the West—to a new Rock made newly.

Away to the West—to a new beacon light; Our lands shall be broad, though our cabins are lowly,
And life shall be blest in its career of Right.

Miscellaneous.

From the Liberator.
Letter from C. B. Benton.

MISSOURI, April 15, 1855.
Messrs. Gales & Seaton, Gentlemen:— I made a speech (that is to say, spoke by snatches at broken intervals, and then consolidated the whole into one piece for publication) in the last days and nights (not counting Sundays) of the late session of Congress on the subject of our Indian relations and the war with the Upper Missouri tribes, for the prosecution of which the four most regular regiments were required. In that speech I averred that we had no war with these tribes;— that the killing of Lieutenant Grattan and his command at Fort Laramie was the effect of great misconduct on the part of the Lieutenant; and that the depredations committed upon our traveling citizens were chiefly individual acts of retaliation, induced by previous wrongs, which any western man acquainted with Indians could settle immediately; and that some of these men, not an army, should be sent out to do the business.— This is what I said in relation to the Upper Missouri and North Platte Tribes.
In relation to the New Mexican Indians I admitted there was war, and had been for five years; and affirmed and proved that it was brought on by the dreadful misconduct of our officers. In that same speech, and in the absence of cause for these regiments for Indian service, and for which I proposed mounted rangers as the true species of forces, I expressed my opinion that the real destination of these new regiments and the new ships of war was Cuba; and in that I do not think I was wide of the mark, the proof accumulated in your paper of yesterday, showing to be now mediated, which I believed then and long before, to be premeditated.

But let that pass for the present. My business now is with the new Indian war on the Upper Missouri and the North Platte, and of which war there is no existence, except in the imagination of our administration. I had staked myself publicly on the non-existence of this war at the time it was so imposingly committed to Congress. This is what I said; and I wish to verify my opinions, in my late visit to Missouri I made inquiry among the citizens, and especially among those best qualified to know the truth, most interested in knowing it, and bound under the peril of life and property to make no mistake—I mean the fur traders, of whom there are many in Missouri, and of the first respectability, and with large capitals embarked in a permanent business. They answered me with one voice that there was no war on the Upper Missouri or North Platte; that they had wintered on their trade as usual during the winter with the Sioux and other tribes in that quarter, except in the articles prohibited by the United States officers, and were now fitting out for the trade for the present year without the least apprehension of Indian hostilities. This is what they all told me, and the largest companies, with their hundreds of thousands permanently invested and hundreds of men employed, down to the individual traders, with their temporary outfit of a few wagons and half a dozen men. I will name one of each class, the firm of Chouteau & Co. as old, father and son, as the foundation of St. Louis in 1764, always carrying on the trade on a large scale, and still engaged in it as a permanent business. I asked them what amount they had now invested? what was the state of their trade at present? and what effect the proposed Indian war would have upon it? They directed their clerks to make out from their books their investment to my inquiry, and gave it to me, which I have in writing with me now—$370,000. The state of their trade at present was the same as it has always been, with the exception of the articles prohibited by the United States officers, peaceful and prosperous, and that they had suffered no losses, except some $12-000 at the time of the bloodshed at Fort Laramie. The effect of the war upon their trade, they said, would be to paralyse all the capital invested, to stop their operations, and bring great losses upon them, rendering six fortified establishments and three hundred men, now in the Indian country, a useless and expensive incumbrance on their hands. This was the answer of Sarpy and Chouteau, the sons, active partners of the firm, and best qualified to answer my questions.

Now I give the answer of a small individual trader to the same question, Mr.
Auguste Archaubault, a mountain man—Grosbe French—of twenty years standing, one of Fremont's men, and to me personally known. He came to see me the day before I left St. Louis, and, in the course of conversation, told me that he was going out on a small trading expedition—four wagons, five men, one boy and about $4,000 of Indian goods; and that he was going beyond Fort Laramie and up to the Sweet Water river,— which flows from the South Pass. I asked him if he was not afraid of being killed and robbed by the Indians. He answered, not at all; and that he could go alone to every tribe; and actually took no more men with him than were necessary to drive his wagons. I pointed his attention to the military expedition; but he said he should not stop for it; that his wagons were gone, and he should go on immediately. The fact was, he did not believe it possible that the United States could make war upon peaceable Indians, and, considered it certain that the campaign would end with a harmless march. And this is the way in which this new Indian war is viewed at St. Louis by those best qualified to know the truth, most interested in knowing it, and to be most damaged by a mistake in relation to it.

The object of this communication, therefore, is to counteract the organization of society men as so placed as to settle or to value upon a thing easy of attainment, or in mercantile phraseology that they do not estimate an article otherwise than according to its cost. Acting upon this well established truth, the man who leaves his home to seek in a far land that prosperity which he cannot attain in his own neighborhood, must at once, in a manner, re-creating his own life in the finer sensibilities, in order to manfully encounter the numerous obstacles, which the greatest prudence cannot always foresee, and which he may rest assured will beset his path on either side. This is made to appear the more necessary when he counts the cost of any successful operation. He will also find in most cases, upon a close calculation, that he has paid fully as much as it is worth.
This latter consideration, properly understood, will act as a powerful stimulant in effecting those great and beneficial changes which never fail to follow the steps of the bold and enterprising. The irresolute should pause, for their coincidence cannot be current where coincidence and constancy united form the only medium of exchange. There are others who should also bear in mind, that it is a plain country for any one in this money-seeking age to expect to barter a thing of little worth for another of costly make.

The connection of the foregoing with what follows is so apparent as to need little comment.

It is now morning to Kansas Territory from the eastern States and wishing to economize in time as well as in money I left Chicago for St. Louis on the quickest by several days, but to those who can afford to loiter a little by the way, the route through Cincinnati, Louisville, &c., is recommended. The great beauty and never ending variety of the scenery along the banks of the Ohio and Mississippi will well compensate the tourist or emigrant for the delay of a few days. The writer's experience was simply as follows: He bought a through ticket from Chicago to St. Louis for $18.50, meals and state-room included.
Left Buffalo in the cars at 11 o'clock P. M. on Monday, April 23d, reached Cincinnati at 7 P. M. the following Tuesday. As the steamer connecting with this line leaves only in the morning, he staid at the Spencer House, a first class hotel and under excellent management.
Left Cincinnati at 2 P. M. Wednesday in the elegant mail packet "Jacob Strader," reached Louisville about 3 o'clock the next morning. At this place some delay is caused by a change of boats, as the mail steamers draw too much water for them to pass over the falls between Louisville and Portland; so all the passengers, baggage and freight are carried overland to Portland —about 34 miles distant, and re-shipped on board of another steamer waiting below. The removal of baggage, at all times troublesome, and frequently expensive, is now attended with certain loss; for in the absence of credible authority, it would appear as if the employees of a railroad company were either fed or otherwise interested in destroying as much of the passenger's effects as they could conveniently do in a short space of time. A box of clothes and books, belonging to the writer, reached Cincinati, by Railroad from Buffalo, in so distressed a condition that by the time it came to Portland it was open, and several articles were missing. About mid-day, the transportation being effected, he went on board the Baltimore, one of the finest boats on the western waters, and continued his journey to St. Louis, where he arrived about 8 o'clock, P. M., the Saturday following. During some part of the trip a few black-legs came on board, but such was the caution and respectability of the company that these gentlemen had not the audacity to disembark. There was but little encouragement given to their department of science, nor was there any person present heard of being victimized; the main body of the passengers being of too stern a class for such operations. On account of the unusual number of emigrants and others going up the Missouri River at this season, a great many of the Baltimore's passengers were the evening of arrival immediately on board the Sonora, a steamer engaged to start at 4 P. M. on Monday, and engaged berths to Kansas city, Mo., each paying $13. This promptness was found necessary, as before noon on Sunday every berth was engaged. On Monday morning an old man and his son, from the South, took passage on board of the Sonora. The father being feeble, the son carried the money, and it was not long before he was flooded every cent—$350—by an entire stranger, in the following manner:—The stranger, having been on board for several hours, apparently with the intention of going with the boat, induced the young man to go up with him; they soon had occasion to make a bet with another young man, and borrowed the money for the purpose, giving him to hold as security a worthless piece of paper having some resemblance to a bank check, for $500, with the assurance that the loaner—should receive half the amount of the bet; the gaining of which, on his part, he made the sharpshooter having obtained the money, very soon, in common language, made tricks, leaving his dupe so bewildered by fear and astonishment as not only to be utterly incapable of following, but also of giving any accurate description of the fellow; therefore no steps were taken in the matter. The clerk of the boat paid the young man and his father their passage money again, and the twin left immediately for the South, apparently satisfied it was no worse, concluding that the portion of the elephant visit on the occasion was enough.

On Sunday the writer was much astonished at seeing the laborers on the Levee loading and unloading the steamers, although many were not advertised to leave till the Monday following. It was a strange coincidence, that while reflecting on so gross an evil, he turned into St.
George's Church, and there heard a discourse preached by the Rector on the text, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath." It was so forcibly plain as to seem, even on the lowest ground, quite unanswerable.
While listening, he could not help contrasting the miserable, degraded appearance of the laborers he had just seen, with the clean and manly aspect of such as do not willingly violate the ordinances of the Sabbath.

At 4 P. M. on Monday afternoon the writer left St. Louis on the Sonora, but so great was the number of passengers that at night the cabin floor was covered with sleepers. As the weather was cool after leaving St. Louis, no serious inconvenience on that account was experienced, but had the mercury risen much higher, much suffering and danger must have ensued. There was very little sickness on board, though on the boat's arrival at Kansas city on the morning of Saturday following, a young man died, it was said, before he could be removed ashore —some said of cholera. It is due here to say, that although arms and liquor were in abundance, and opinions many and various, a more quiet, respectable, and social company, seldom met together.
It was just as close as the officers of the boat could observe that their conduct towards the passengers formed a praiseworthy contrast to that of the officers of the "Sam Cloon," a boat that left St.
Louis for Kansas a short time before the Sonora. The statement given to the writer by one of the passengers, a gentleman whom he met at Westport, Mo., was in substance as follows:—The Sam Cloon left St. Louis for Kansas with about 50 passengers, many of them poor, and the clerk observed to informant that from some of them he had just taken the last money he had, and that he had just taken the last money he had, and that he had just taken the last money he had, and that
