

From Walla Walla.
WALLA WALLA, July 4th, 11 A.M.
DEAR TELLER:—The town is filling up rapidly this morning, mostly by those who have come to help celebrate the day, but some to escape the danger from hostiles. There is to be a procession, oration and in the evening a ball at the city hall, under the auspices of the Tiger Engine Company. The Indian news this morning is that 70 Umatillas have joined the hostiles, that the fighting between the latter and the Bannocks was done with the John Day river between them, giving the few Umatillas who are loyal a better opportunity to keep their enemies at bay, that the Umatillas had nearly exhausted their ammunition and had fallen back from the river and sent for more ammunition and men, and what is not understood the hostiles did not cross the river and pursue them. The cavalry from Lapwai arrived here about half past 9 this morning, one company having ridden 80 miles since yesterday morning. They will rest a while and proceed on towards Pendleton to night. The efforts to enroll a company of volunteers here resulted in enlisting only about 30 or 40 men, and these had no arms nor horses and neither were offered to them except upon condition that they place themselves under the command of the commanding General of the regulars. Most of those who would volunteer under an independent organization and command, refuse to place themselves under the military. Hence the volunteer organization hangs fire as yet, and will probably continue so, unless the danger becomes more immediate. Our delegate Mr. Penn writes me that he was to leave Washington for Boise City on the 1st of this month, remain there a few days and proceed home.
At half past 2 P. M. The ceremonies of the public celebration are completed. In brief they consisted of a procession, headed by the 21st Infantry band which discoursed good music, then followed the Engine Company, the President, reader of Declaration of Independence, (Charles Newell,) the orator of the day, Mr. Brenz, a Liberty car with some of the beauties of Walla Walla, and citizens in carriages and on horse back. The grounds chosen were the court house square near the jail, which were conveniently arranged with accommodations for the dignitaries, and the band with seats upon a platform, covered by a brush awning, and seats for ladies and gentlemen under the shade of the trees at the side of the grounds. The audience consisted of about four-fifth ladies and children. I was surprised at the small number of grown men in the audience, and could account for it only on the ground that the men from the country were generally busy in trading while in town, and the traders were induced to forego their patriotic feelings for their harvest of trade which offered itself upon the occasion, a species of patriotism that seems to have a wide prevalence all through this rushing country. The declaration of independence was read with considerable force, but if I mistake not I have before heard similar principles advanced and doubtless have also the readers of the TELLER. The orator had written his production and read the same with much force and effect. He maintained the grandiloquent style of language throughout each and every sentence contain a forcible thought as applied to the occasion, and he did not seem to break down in making his climax to each sentence, a fault which many fourth of July orators are addicted to. He was both historical and practical, and also prophetic with sufficient exhortation to give force to the principles advanced. He took occasion to argue the people to assume a state government ignore the few paltry dollars of extra taxation it might entail for a short time and urged that its advantages would more than counterbalance the extra tax in the growth and development of the country. He paid a fitting tribute to the efforts of the members of the constitutional convention to frame a good constitution, and expressed the full belief that they would succeed in making a good constitution, and that it would include North Idaho. At the close of the exercises the band and the fire companies reformed and marched through the streets, while the remainder of the audience dispersed to their private business.
Up to this hour of writing I have heard nothing fresh from the hostiles, and the suspense here in town is great in consequence, all hence a speculation as to their ultimate movements. I hope to here more and that which is authentic before the mail closes, and so keep open this letter.
5 P. M. The operator at Walla Walla sent a dispatch over the wire a short time ago, to this effect, that at about 1 o'clock this afternoon 50 Indians and a few squaws and packs, and about 30 loose horses came along the bank of the Columbia and passed up the Walla Walla river. They were intercepted and asked where they were going. One of them replied that they were Umatillas and had been requested to return to the reservation, another answer was that they were going to the mountains to pick berries. They were told that the Umatillas were fighting the Bannocks. This they said was Calins wa wa that the Umatillas would not fight the Bannocks. One of their number was claimed to be recognized as one of Moses' Indians, who was well known at Wallula, who was always considered to be friendly. One wanted some one to give him a pass to visit Walla Walla. No pass was given. They left for the mouth of Vansyckle canyon, and were pursued by a scout who reports that they traveled very fast after they left Wallula. The parties at Wallula were very suspicious of their movements, and under the belief that they had a box of guns in the warehouse they proceeded to open the box to get the guns, when lo and behold it proved to be only a box of belts and other accoutrements. They then immediately telegraphed to Gen. Wheaton to send them, if possible arms, to defend themselves in case of need, and to use all dispatch. It is possible this box of accoutrements belongs to the arms sent to Lewiston which first came without any accoutrements. A report gained circulation here this afternoon that the Indians had got between Pendleton and Wallula and had attacked Throckmorton's men and defeated them. But this seems impossible for he and his men left Weston this morning, and the man who brought the report was evidently in great fright and also under the influence of liquor to that extent that his friends say that his statements are not entitled to credit. "There is great suspense here now." Another part of the 4th programme was enacted this afternoon in main street, consisting of the members of the Horribles, who appeared masked, some on foot some on horse back and some on a wagon, with grotesque weapons and garb, and having a piece of a smoke stack as a cannon on wheels. Their antics attracted large crowds and elicited much merriment. I do not think the Indians will attempt an attack upon this place, so long as it is known that the Horribles have an organization here.

HALF PAST 9 P. M. Dr. Boyd just from Pendleton reports that the Umatillas have returned from front of the hostiles, that they had no other fight than to fire upon the hostiles to check them from crossing John Day, they retreated and expected the hostiles to follow, but they had not followed, that in coming in they did not meet the volunteers who went out from Pendleton. It is thought at Pendleton that the hostiles will turn towards the Blue mountains and go to Wallawa valley. This will make it incumbent on McConville to keep a sharp lookout for all signs of disaffection up their. Yet no one knows what the Indians will do. Col. Bernard is reported to have crossed into the head of John Days valley hard after the hostiles. Report. I know not how true, that 150 Columbia river Indians have left and gone to the hostiles. A letter from a man named Davis received from near Moses who says that several of the Bannocks have recently been to Moses to get him to join, but Moses refused and sent them away. It is thought that the party passed Wallula today, contained these messengers with some others whom they had induced to join as they returned down the Columbia. The boys are having some fire works to-night and several small fire balloons have been sent up, one or two will have good success.
SPEECH OF HON FRANK HENRY, OF OLYMPIA.
To the Constitutional Convention or the Occasion of Presenting some Pickled Clams from the Citizens of Olympia.
Mr. President, under this head I have a communication which I would like to present to the convention. My constituents have sent up some constitutional provisions, labeled as follows:
"Two gallons of pickled clams to be presented by the Hon. Frank Henry with appropriate remarks to the constitutional convention with the compliments of the clam eaters of Olympia."
It will be seen that I am under instructions coming directly from the people, and though I have not been able to find a single word in the act of the Legislature calling this convention together concerning pickled clams, I hope that this body will not seriously question its power to receive them, or allow the clams to spoil, or our constituents to suffer whilst they are settling it. It has no signatures and I suppose that I can not call it a petition. The fact that it is sent here, however, with all charges paid—constitutes an act of thoughtful attention. It shows that though far removed from them, our constituency residing in the capital of the territory have not forgotten us, nor been unmindful of the constitutional necessities of a portion of us at least. I think, Mr. President that I may safely answer that it is a memorial, and present it under that head without the least infringement upon the regular order of business. I confer however, that I find myself at a loss to form remarks in any degree appropriate to the occasion. I have not inspected the contents of the memorial, but I have no doubt that they are what the title indicates, and will be found upon critical examination to be some productions in every sense of the word. It may be that these mottoes are intended to remind us of the necessity in the performance of our arduous and important duties of a frequent recurrence to elementary principles. If such is the intention I can not doubt that the convention will join me in the wish that our constituents will thus enable us to do so at frequent intervals. From a long personal experience I can confidently recommend the contents of this memorial to the delegates of this convention. They are good for any constitution. And I do not hesitate to give it as my opinion that if incorporated they will impart the strength and vigor of youth to the entire constitution, and exercise an elevating influence that cannot fail to make every delegate proud of his instrument.

Mr. President with these remarks I most respectfully submit the memorial, trusting that the convention will make such a disposition as shall satisfy my very clamorous constituency.
[The clams were distributed among the members of the convention, and eaten with a keen relish, and eastern members seemed to forget their differences with the people of the Sound, and new affilities were soon established.
Not Killed by the Indians—What a Clairvoyant says.
The lock of hair from the head of the body of the man found in Snake river at McDowell's ferry has had a being before a lady clairvoyant of this city, with the following result:
Idahoan: I submitted the lock of hair I got in your office to a medium for psychometric examination. The medium said the deceased was not shot by Indians, but by three white men who were pursuing him. Deceased was riding a large sorrel horse, and had with him three darker colored horses. The pursuing party overhauled him in a cove or ledge of rocks, and gave chase. They followed him over a hill, across a deep ravine, over another hill; and across a wide flat, in a north-westerly direction, to the river, where he rode down a steep bank into the water, and was shot and fell off of the horse he was riding; the other three horses swam across to the opposite side. Deceased had light brown and deep sunken eyes, low forehead and round, fleshy face. On the back part of the saddle he was riding, could be seen what appeared to be fur. His spirit recognized a party who sat in the circle last Sunday evening, and tried to control the medium, but his presence was so shocking that it frightened her. He had been in Boise City, and when he left here he started east. He would not give his name, nor does he want his body recognized. One of his pursuers was rather tall, with heavy beard nearly covering his face. D. BACON.

Whenever and Wherever Diseases of a choleric type prevail, or there is cause to apprehend a visit from them, the system should be toned, regulated and reinforced by a course of Hostetters' Stomach Bitters. Perfect digestion and a regular habit of body are the best safeguards against such maladies, and both are secured by this inestimable tonic and alternative. The Bitters are extremely beneficial in treating such disorders. If promptly taken in bilious colic, diarrhoea and cholera morbus, the disease is usually frustrated. In diarrhoea cases, it is a necessity to restore the tone of the relaxed bowels, and this is one of the specific effects of this medicine. Wind on the stomach, heartburn, biliousness, nausea, headache and other symptoms of disturbance in the gastric and hepatic regions are also speedily relieved by this excellent remedy. As a family medicine it is invaluable, since it promptly and completely remedies those ailments which are of most frequent occurrence. n-284 w
