COMING.

They are coming from California. And one of the most suggestive sights in the world is the spectacle of a Californian, who hasn't before seen rain enough for a year to lay the dust, standing out in an Oregon rain with his hat off, and enjoying it as aquatic fowls do a Summer shower. Oregon has been sneered at as the rainy country by California, but they are not sneering now. They are hunting a country where it rains enough, and prefer the verdure of Oregon to the blight and desolation of California. Persons now arriving tell us that immense numbers in California are preparing to move. As rapidly as they can they will come to our State. A great many are coming by wagons overland. A gentleman just through by the stage line informs us that in Northern California and Southern Oregon he passed a large number of parties, including families and live stock, moving north. At night their camp fires were seen continually from the stage road, and the sight is described as being like that of the early emigration across the plains. Every steamer is loaded to its full capacity by people who are seeking a country where crops never perish of drouth. To them exaggerated reports of Oregon rains are no longer a terror, our climate, they find, is preferable to drouth, deserts and starvation.—Oregonian.

Don't be selfish, and keep them all in Oregon. We can give them better lands than you can. [Ed.]

SWIMMING A HORSE.

When swimming a horse, never touch the bridle, as a horse is easily drowned when checked up or otherwise interfered with about the head. Sit well back and guide the horse with the hand, gently slapping him on either side as required; thus a horse will swim a mile or more with a full-grown man on his back, and suffer but little. A still safer way on reaching deep water is for the rider to relieve the horse of his weight, by sliding into the water beside the animal, grasping the mane near the withers with one hand, thus requiring the horse to tow the rider, the latter assisting him in this by using his legs and free arm in the same way as in swimming. In crossing rivers with rapid currents, the rider should take down stream side of the horse. This method is practiced by the Indians with much success.—Missoulian.

COMMON SENSE.—There is no commodity of so much value in the world as common sense.

Common sense is back-bone, muscle and sinew; it helps a man out of difficulties, bridges over unexpected chasms, prevents heavy mortgages upon time or trouble, and is the oil that removes friction, and calms the troubled waters of lives. Common sense is phlegmatic, never likes to make itself ridiculous, and so takes thought. Folly flies, while common sense moves deliberately, and neither sings its own wings nor disturbs the comfort of other people.—J. Pol-lard.

MILITARY.—Upon the arrival at Fort Lapwai of Capt. William H. Boyle, 21st Infantry 1st Lieut. R. H. Fletcher, 21st Infantry, recently promoted, will join his company, at Fort Townsend. En route, upon the recommendation of the regimental commander, Lieut. Fletcher will report for duty, temporarily, during the absence of Lieut. C. E. S. Wood, with company D—in the field near Wallula.

A POOR CONCERN.

Mr. Charles G. Leland relates a story of the good minister of a Massachusetts village and a shiftless, whisky loving Indian, who in time of revival became one of his converts. The excellent clergyman greatly rejoiced at having "rescued another," while the Indian, in return, one night expressed with solemn joy his assurance, "Me no go Hobamoko (that is, perdition)—Injun soul save, all right." But the day after this affecting scene the minister, thoughtfully riding along, discovered his convert lying in a rocky corner near the road, deeply, dreadfully tipsy. Sighing much and sadly, the minister rode on but was scarcely a rod from the spot when his ear was struck by a guttural grunt, which was solemnly and impressively repeated. Turning his head, he saw the Indian maintaining himself with the greatest difficulty in a sitting posture, and gazing sternly at his friend, as if from the height of some great idea, while he beckoned to him as one having authority. Slowly the minister rode back, and paused. "Ugh," grunted the Indian; "you know that little business me talk you 'bout lass night?" "Yes, Benjamin, I do know," was the reply; "it was about your salvation." "Yes," grunted the unabashed; me 'clude to let dat little business go. Injun soul," he added, with a patronizing smile, as if wishing to diminish the clergyman's disappointment, "Injun soul berry poor concern—small 'fair—no great matter anyhow!"—Ex.

A CURE FOR CONSUMPTION.

A correspondent of the Southern Plantation writes as follows about the power of a well-known plant:

I have discovered a remedy for pulmonary consumption. It has cured a number of cases after they commenced bleeding at the lungs, and the hectic flush was already on the cheek. After trying this remedy to my own satisfaction, I have thought philanthropy required that I should let it be known to the world. It is the common mullein steeped strong and sweetened with coffee sugar and drank freely. The herb should be gathered about or before the end of July, if convenient. Old or young plants are good dried in the shade and kept in clean paper bags.

The medicine must be continued from three to six months, according to the nature of the disease. It is very good for the blood vessels also. It strengthens the system, and builds up instead of taking away strength. It makes good blood, and takes inflammation away from the lungs.

It is the wish of the writer that every periodical in the United States, Canada and Europe should publish this receipt for the benefit of the human family. Lay this up, and keep it in the house ready for use.

REMEMBER THIS.

Wheat costs 15 cents per bushel from The Dalles to Portland. Distance 121 miles; the same from Umatilla, distance 215 miles; the same from Wallula, distance 240 miles; 24 cents from Tunkannon, distance 230 miles; the same from Algota distance 362 miles; 24 cents from Lewiston, distance 401 miles; but it costs only 12 cents a bushel from San Francisco to Liverpool a distance of ten thousand miles, and that's about all the difference in the world.—W. W. Watchman.

High freights may do for the merchants but not for the producers and consumers. (Ed.)
