Town and County

Will Fowle be elected? Of course.

Will Dockery be elected? Scat!

Will Cleveland be elected? Certainly.

Will Harrison be elected? Shoof!

That wood if you please.

Mr. J. F. Spainhour's family, are spending a week at Mouth of Wilson.

A. J. McBride says he does intend to vote for Baird if he lives until Nov. 6.

You have only a few days—only '3—to register. See that your names are on the books Democrats or you can't vote.

Don't forget that Shff. Hayes sold two tracts of land to collect a tax of 10cts each and charged the county $1.40 for his trouble.

Miss Julia Norris places us under many obligations to her for some of the finest apples we ever saw. She says they are solid and firm like the Democratic party, Good! Miss Julia you are right.

Shff. Hayes says we did not quote him correctly last week as to the amount of delinquents. All we have to say is that we used the figures taken from the records, and given to us by the Clerk and Register of Deeds.

Remember that Shff. Hayes and Treasurer Greene brag that our county funds are in good condition. So they are, but Sheriff Hayes and Treasurer Greene have no more to do in the matter than any other citizen, our County Com. are the men to thank.

Sheriff Hayes charges Sheriff Baird with having paid over money to John Ragan after he, Ragan, went out of office. The facts in the case show that Baird never paid over one cent of money to Ragan after Ragan went out of office.

If your subscription expires with Nov. 6 you will be notified of the same by cross marks on your paper this week opposite your names. We would be glad to continue all such and ask all who find the marks on their papers to renew their subscription at once by mail so they may not miss an issue, as we shall give all election returns and every Democrat should keep posted on such matters.

The editor of the Enterprize says if the Radicals are successful he intends to split the streets of Boone on the finest horse to be found, if not, and we Democrats get the drop on him, he will put out his fire, call his dog and take to the woods. Climb a tree pole-cats, he's coming! The Bingham of the Enterprize.

Would barrow in the ground, He'd leave the haunts of sinful men, He couldn't stand the town, He'd crawl into some hollow tree, He'd stay there till he died, He'd never come to Boone again, He'd let the papers slide.

He'd turn his back on Hayes and Greene, They could not call him home, He'd take his knap-sack on his back, And all his life he'd roam.

He'd shun the places men frequent, He'd speak no more for "Ben"

He'd pace the earth no more for Crisp, He'd crawl into his den.

He'd let the world wag as it might, He'd let his banners sink, He'd let the party go to h— Or to the very brink.

He'd help them never more on earth, He'd stand the storm no more,

He'd shake the dust from off his feet, And in the woods he'd roar.

(Now if you scan these verses carefully you will see what he roared.)

When on a lonely mountain top, This Faber-shower sat him down,

He cast his eye into his den, And then he looked toward the town,

His poor heart sunk—the tears came fast, And then on Greene came such a blast!

Why should this den be forced on me, Why forced from sons of men to flee?

Have I not entered to your whim? Have I not published news from "Jim,"

From Tom and Dick and Harry too, When all that news was due to you?

Have I not published scand—als wide, Have I not lied your sins to hide,

Have I not burnt the paper when, It would not do for eyes of men?

Oh! Greene you've left some stone unturned, You quit the meeting before it adjourned,

You counted much too fast you see, And made an outcast out of me,

My curses on your head shall rest, As I roam about this earth in quest

Of a "boss" whose brain can hatch a plot, That'll not subject me to the "trat."

When by your blazing fires you warm, And listen to the winter's storm,

Forget your "Thomas" in the cold, Who fought for you with heart and soul.

And when the wind is whispering round, Your "Thomas" in his den snow-bound,

No cheer and comfort your dreams will bring, For in your heart there'll be a sting.

And when at last this "Thomas" dies, And music rends the vaulted skies,

On angels' wings they'll bear him home, "No more my "Thomas" shalt thou roam."

But how will it be with you my friend, When shrieks and wails the air shall rend,

Where fire and brimstone scent the air, Without your scheming "Thomas" there?

You'll fool the devil—yes you will, You'll think your rod will rule there till

The devil chucks you in a blaze, And then you'll burn for days and days.

You'll send the devil off for votes, He'll bring you back a sheaf of oats,

He'll pile 'em round your hide so thick, And to those oats the fire he'll stick.

You'll send him off for water cool, He'll bring back brimstone to the fool, He'll pour it down you eager throat,

And then he'll stand and grin and gloat, You'll try some other game on Nick,

You'll fool him out of an office slick, You'll tell him how you used to do,

Before he'd quite caught up with you, And for your pains he'd toss you round,

And smear your blood upon the ground, He'd use his pitch-fork with a vim,

And ask "how's that for fooling him," Your cries no mortal ear could stand,

When on your forehead he'll put his brand, You'll sink into that dark-some pit,

Where vilest politicians get, Upon the brink you'll leave a stain,

For those who follow to refrain, From ever giving mortals pain,

Or ever think to vote again.
