BROADWAY THEATER.
Taylor Stock Company.

HARRY MOORE,
With Taylor Stock Company.
The Taylor stock company will play at the Broadway three days next week offering a repertoire of melodramas that will prove particularly pleasing to Norwich theatergoers. Manager Taylor has the best organization since he has been in the show business and in addition to his dramatic productions he carries a full line of vaudeville acts which are highly pleasing. There are never any dull moments while the Taylor stock is in town and the 3 days, starting Monday, January 18, will be no exception. Ernest Samson's great play, "From Farm to Factory" will be the bill on Monday afternoon and night for which a special reduced price ladies' ticket is being issued.

Eldred Brown, will officiate at the morning service and Rev. W. H. Jepson of Redding Ridge at the afternoon service.

A Stain on Honor.
"Every death from tuberculosis may be said to be a stain on the honor of New York state." This is the declaration of Governor Hughes, who figures that it would cost $2,000,000 to take care of half of the advanced cases now unprovided for. The moral for Connecticut, where an appropriation of $300,000 would take care of all them, is evident enough if the people trust the good judgment of Gov. Hughes.

POETRY.
TWO DOORS.

Here is a door that opens on—
A chamber darkened, full of gloom,
A ghostly light shines in upon
The dwellers in this spacious room.
Here Fear and Trouble face about,
Anxiety and Woe and Grief,
Foreboding, Wretchedness and Doubt,
And Worry that makes me reel.
This door I call "Forgetfulness"—
In letters deep the word is cut—
And though the dwellers madly press,
I keep it ever tightly shut.
This other door "Remembrance" is,
It opens on a cheerful scene—
A merry and bright picture of bliss,
And happy moments that have been,
Dear Peace and sweet Content are here
And little deeds of kindness done,
And Hope and Love and Faith and Cheer,
And blessings that my life hath won.
This door is open all the while,
Flung wide that every one may
Possessions 't make life a smile,
And put to rest all thoughts of care.
—John Kend. "KING BANGS, in Ainslie's."

FISHING.
One morning when spring was in her teens—
A morn'g when a poet's wishin'
All tinted in delicate pinks and greens,
Miss Heaslip and Jack went fishing;
He in his rough and hand-made duds,
With his face at the sun'shine's mercy,
She with her hat tipped down to her nose,
And her nose tipped vice-versa;
Jack, with his rod, his reel and his hooks,
And a hamper for lunching recesses;
She with the bait of her ownly loveliness,
And the shine of her golden tresses.
So they sat them down on the sunny dyke
Where the white pond lilies teeter,
And Jack went to fishing like a quaint old "ike,"
And she like Simon Peter.
All the morn'g he sat in the light of her eyes,
And dreamily watched and waited,
But the bait was cunning and would not rise,
And the halter alone was baited;
And when the time for departure came
The bag was fat as a founider;
But Heaslip had neatly hooked her name—
A hundred-and-eighty pounder.
—L. G. K.

THE LITTLE GREEN HAT.
A lot of folks from my home town live here,
I meet one or two every day;
And none of 'em seem to be coming each year—
They like to see well that they stay.
I met "Bugs" Briggs close by Madison Square,
He seems to be growing quite fat,
And he, with his jaunty, collegiate air,
Was wearing a little green hat.
Ed Saunders walked by—he's a lawyer,
He's a lawyer, he's a lawyer,
He's a lawyer, he's a lawyer,
But business, he says, is shortening to grow,
And he is a chap who will climb As Ears and I saw him swing up one street.
We couldn't help noticing that our friend, who was dressed most surprisingly neat,
Was wearing a little green hat.
We walked a few blocks, then we met "Bugs" again, he was wearing one, too.
He's lived for a year in this big, noisy town,
And down as the other folks do,
I left "Bugs" Briggs, and I started in quest,
Of needs that had come with our chat,
And "Bugs" on I, just like all the rest,
Was wearing a little green hat.
